Bridge Street Book Shop

Think back to the summer of '94. My husband, Kit, and I were just beginning our second year of business at Bridge Street Book Shop. And it was the season of The Horton Bay Gazette - all three sell-out editions of it. Being a newcomer to "Up North" living, having only arrived in 1992, I wasn't quite sure what to make of our little neighboring town of Horton Bay. I remember being intrigued by tales of Horton Bay that had trickled as far downstate as my hometown of Port Huron. And, now, here I was only 10 miles from Horton Bay, still wondering.

The Horton Bay Gazette was delightful entertainment. I looked forward to each edition with anticipation of another glimpse at the antics of this eccentric little town on the bay. Just when I got hooked on reading The Gazette it ended. That was it. Three editions in the summer of '94. Done. Finished. No more. I was disappointed.

Now it's the fall of '97 and the editor and senior writer of The Horton Bay Gazette, Ted Walker, is back — this time with a book titled, We Eat Our Roadkill: Tales from Horton Bay, Michigan. The delight lives on in 127 pages of nine tales, eight illustrations, and two short stories. The book sells for $11.95 and, I mean, it sells! I am obviously not alone in my curiosity and admiration for Horton Bay. Over 400 people showed up for signed copies at the Charlevoix Country Club when the book was launched earlier this month. As far as book signings go, that's a huge turnout, even for a national bestseller signing in a metropolitan city. But, of course, Horton Bay thinks it is a metropolitan city.

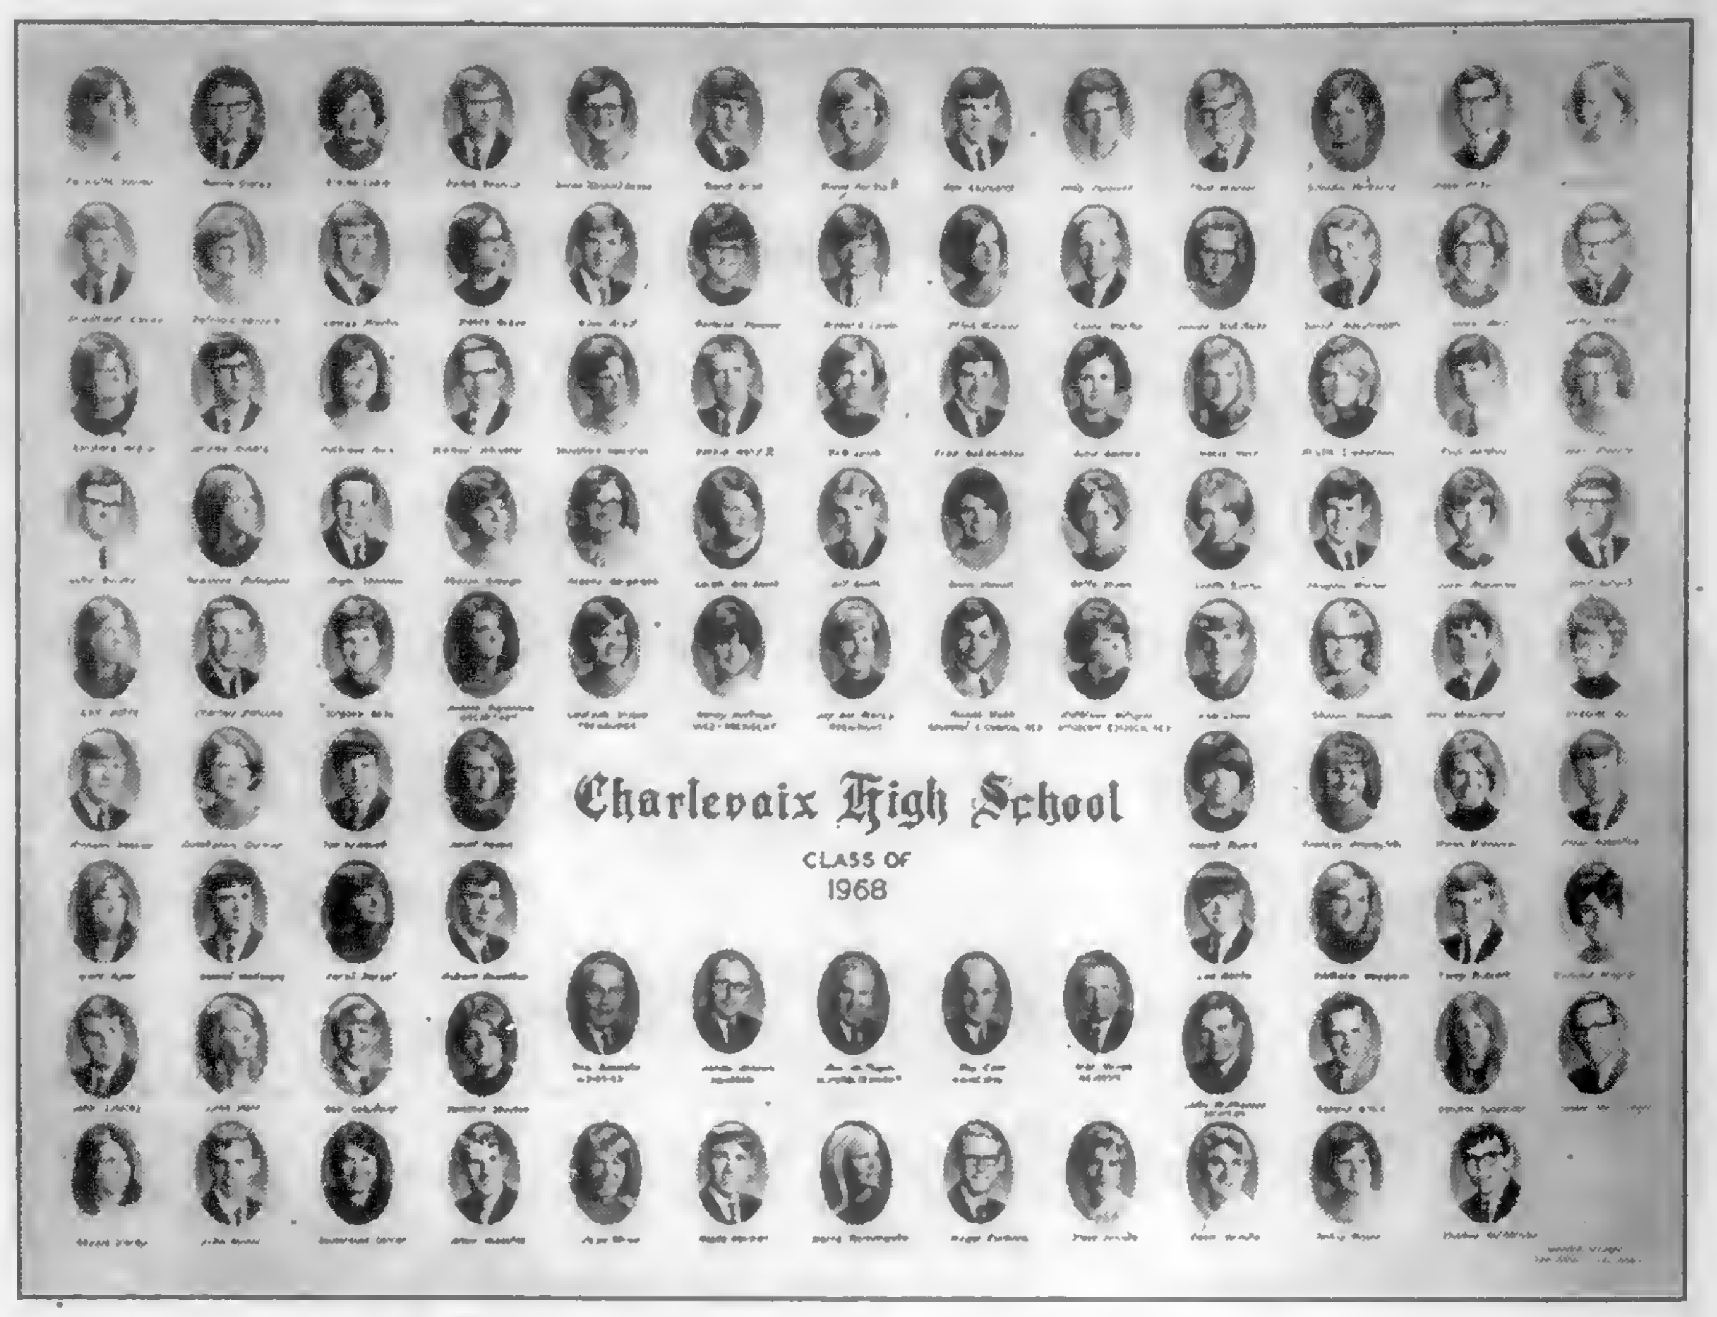
The introduction to Walker's book is a very well written biographical account of how the business man from St. Louis landed in Horton Bay and ended up publishing the Gazette. He reminisces about three childhood summers in the Belvedere Club of Charlevoix. In a mere two sharp paragraphs in the introduction, Walker settles an ax to grind over an incident he remembers between his father and the president of the Belvedere Association. That incident marked the end of Belvedere summers for Walker. While he doesn't dwell on the issue, he certainly calls a spade a spade, and I'm sure the account of that very sad incident will make some folks uncomfortable. It's an author's prerogative to choose his writing material but, as the reader, I felt caught in a conflict — in a place I didn't want to be — and I question whether the telling of that incident belonged in this book of Tales from Horton Bay.

The tales are true to the spirit of Horton Bay. They are well written and a fun escape. While the mysteries of Horton Bay are not solved, the intrigue is certainly embellished. For the person who hasn't a clue about the history of Horton Bay, I'd love to be a little mouse in the corner as they turn the pages of this book.

Walker's debut as a more serious short story writer is a pleasant surprise. I particularly enjoyed the story about Mr. Jum and Sammy in Once a Man, Twice a Boy.

It is a sensitive and beautiful ending to an otherwise hilarious book of tales.

We Eat Our Roadkill: Tales from Horton Bay, Michigan, belongs on every bookshelf in northern Michigan and beyond. Laughter is the best medicine and Walker doles it out nicely.



You won't have any trouble identifying the 1968 Charlevoix High School graduates, shown here. Their names are under their pictures. Of course, if you are of the same vintage, you might need a magnifying glass to read them.

Emerald Isle arrival delayed

Boat builder gets the shaft with bad parts

By Laurie Lounsbury

Beaver Island residents have been waiting patiently for the arrival of the new ferry boat, the Emerald Isle. Now they're willing to wait a little longer, if it means getting the ship in perfect running condition.

A problem with one of the propeller shafts has delayed the ship's arrival until mid-November, according to Richard Gillespie, vice-chairman of the Beaver Island Transportation Authority.

It's not the first time the ship builders have had propeller shaft problems.

"This is the third shaft they've received and rejected," Gillespie said.

To their credit, ship builders Washburn and Doughty won't release the Emerald Isle until it's in perfect running order.

"We give them high marks of credibility for not sending the boat," Gillespie said.

The propeller shafts for the twin engine ship are 27 feet long and six inches in diameter, made of treated steel. They weigh over 2,000 pounds each. The first two shafts delivered to the builder were defective and weren't installed on the boat.

The third shaft appeared to be in good shape, so the builder installed it, then took the ship out for sea trials.

"They detected a vibration, and they tried countless things to remedy it, but couldn't," Gillespie said.

Talk about getting the shaft.

The ship had to be hauled out of the water and put into dry dock to remove the shaft. From there, the shaft was shipped to Texas for close inspection.

"It's incredible that they're doing this," Gillespie said of the ship builders.

It's not likely that the builder will be able to find another 27-foot-long shaft in time for a November ship delivery to Beaver Island.

Instead, the builders are considering a two piece shaft with a custom-made coupling.

The unanticipated expense incurred by the shaft problems is $60,000. The builder will absorb the extra cost.

"The Beaver Island Boat Company board couldn't be more pleased with the ship builder," Gillespie said.

Anticipating the delivery of the boat, the bid for dock construction was awarded to R.B. Lyons for the amount of $1,249,900.

To date, the Beaver Island transportation Authority has commitments for nearly $1 million. Another $180,000 needs to be raised to complete the dock project.

Bill McDonough, chief executive officer for the Beaver Island Boat Company, will head to Lansing this week to meet with Governor Engler.

"I'm optimistic we'll be able to present the facts that show why we need state assistance," McDonough said.

Radiation isn't the danger at Big Rock

Demolition poses bigger threat to workers' safety

By Lisa Wheat
Courier special writer

Now that Big Rock has entered the decommissioning stage, the real risk for employees is not radiation from generating nuclear power, but the dangers that come with deconstruction.

"The workers haven't picked up very much radiation compared with when the plant was in operation," said Ron Swiraga, safety inspector of the plant.

The hazards of working from high scaffolding and moving massive objects provide greater risks than radiation exposure. In order to decrease this danger, Big Rock has brought people in who had a part in the construction of the Mackinac Bridge to advise the workers.

Safety is the number one mission at Big Rock. The next few months are going to be spent with a focus on hazard reduction. Flammable materials will be removed and asbestos abatement will occur. An electric substation is being built to reduce the risk of electric shock. Plant systems are being chemically cleaned to reduce radiation exposure to all workers in the decommissioning process.

"We want the public to have no choice but to praise us," said plant manager Ken Powers at a Citizen Advisory Board meeting. "The schedule is not the top priority, but to do things right."

Many new employees are contractors, and they bring a lot of experience to the decommissioning process at Big Rock. The staff has also visited other plants around the U.S. to see what they have done. Two contractors have a bid in to remove the major equipment. Big Rock will award the job to one of them by December. The first project they will have is to remove the turbine generator.

A major question is what to do with the radioactive waste once it is removed.

"Everybody wants nuclear waste picked up, but nobody wants to put it down," Powers said.

Two places in the U.S. are available to bury the waste: South Carolina and Utah. However, the waste is fairly expensive to transport and bury. Big Rock is looking into a form of decontamination used by the Germans in their decommissioning of two nuclear power plants. Germany, which has stricter laws than the U.S. about releasing the waste into the air, came up with a safer, more cost-effective way to deal with the waste. In this method, the contamination is stripped from the metal and the metal can, in turn, be recycled as conventional scrap. The contamination is then shipped and buried, but in a far lesser amount.

Mayor Josh Barnes under gag order

Can't discuss Venetian fireworks explosion

By Laurie Lounsbury

When councilman Gabe Campbell asked for an update about the victims of the Venetian fireworks explosion, he was given information that surprised everyone.

"I think we're way overdue on being updated," Campbell said at Monday's city council meeting. "We don't even know who was hurt or what businesses were affected."

Mayor Josh Barnes put an end to the information search by revealing that he was under a gag order.

"I didn't even know we were under a gag order," Campbell said, gaining at least one piece of knowledge about the events following the July 26 accident.

Barnes said that police chief Dennis Halverson put him under a gag order on the night of the explosion. Following that, the Michigan State Police also served him with a gag order. Next in line was the law firm of Varnum, Riddering, Schmidt and Howlett, hired by the city in the wake of the tragedy, who also gagged Barnes. Varnum, Riddering, Schmidt and Howlett were later dismissed and Plunkett-Cooney was hired.

"The only thing I was told hard and sweet by the new legal council is that I'm still under a gag order," Barnes said.

Results of the investigation haven't been released by the Michigan State Police. It could be four more weeks before the investigation is concluded.

In other business, council reversed their decision not to rezone Pete Phillips' property on Petoskey Avenue.

In a 4-2 vote, the council approved a change in zoning to make the entire piece of property zoned commercial. Prior to that, the property was split-zoned commercial on Petoskey Avenue and residential on Division Street.

Councilmen Bruce Reid and Bob Timms cast the opposing votes.

While Barnes did not vote on the matter, he did point out that the rezone could be considered spot-zoning.

"What you're proposing is an alley of commercial zoning where you could put a drive-through business from Petoskey Avenue through to Division Street," Barnes said. After the vote, Barnes congratulated Phillips on his new rezoning.

Landfill won't expand without special committee OK

By Jamie MacMillan

Any way it is sliced, Waste Management's expansion request for their Cedar Ridge landfill in Eveline Township must first go through the scrutiny of an appointed Solid Waste Committee.

After twice denying expansion this past year, county planners did vote to reopen the county's solid waste plan which may, among other things, pave the way for a 12 acre expansion of the 40 acre landfill, just west of Nowland Lake.

However, when reporting their work to the county hoard of commissioners on Aug. 20, the whole process was stymied by commissioner Shirley Roloff's motion to grant Cedar Ridge a stop-gap expansion of five acres to help assure the landfill would not reach maximum capacity while the new solid waste committee meets.

Fellow commissioners talked Roloff out of her motion, preferring to seek advice from county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur.

"I kind of questioned the legality of the motion," board chairman Phil Johnson said.

Nearly three months later, Kur will appear before the board during their next meeting at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 12 to give her opinion. Essentially, Kur said the county hoard doesn't have the direct authority to approve any expansion of the landfill.

"It's a long, complicated process that they must go through first," Kur said. "Basically, they're bound by the county's solid waste plan."

The county's plan states that, should it be shown the landfill has less than 66 months of available capacity, then expansion may be granted without updating the solid waste plan. If more than 66 months exist, then any expansion must wait until the solid waste plan is reworked.

Twice this past year county planners determined capacity still was more than 66 months. In January, the county board agreed with that finding.

If the board doesn't agree with the planners' notion of capacity, then it must still appoint a solid waste committee to look into the issue. Johnson said the entire plan needs to be updated so the scope of any solid waste committee would extend beyond the capacity question.

Don Pizzurro, facility manager at Cedar Ridge, said he was disappointed in the findings. With just under three and one-half years of space left at the landfill, he said waiting for the committee to do its work would take too long.

"It takes two years just to get all the permits and we can't wait for the solid waste committee," Pizzurro said. "Updating the solid waste plan should not be used as a forum for landfill expansion, it should be in the hands of the commissioners."

With Pizzurro's projections, Cedar Ridge will be filled within 42 months, but county planners took the stance that more space is at their disposal, since inter-county agreements with Crawford and Presque Isle counties enables Charlevoix County to send their waste to landfills in those areas. Both Crawford and Presque Isle have landfills with at least 10 years of capacity.

For his part, Pizzurro is concerned that directing trash to those landfills will create an economic crunch for county industries whose trucking costs would increase due to traveling an extra 70 to 80 miles to dispose of their waste. Pizzurro did concede that on an individual basis, little in higher costs would be realized.

The county's solid waste plan allows for a 40 acre landfill. Waste Management has scaled down their initial request from an additional 35 acres to 12 acres to conform with setback requirements and to steer clear of an unmarked grave site discovered in 1991, Pizzurro said. He estimates that the expansion would give Cedar Ridge an additional eight years of life.

The board did go along with planners in approving the reopening of the solid waste plan. Reworking the plan could cost as much as $25,000 in legal advice and the cost of special committee meetings. Johnson said the 14 member committee will be on a strict, one year deadline to complete their task. By the end of the month the board will have whittled down over 50 applicants to 14 people who will serve on the committee.

In addition to whether or not Cedar Ridge should be allowed to expand, county planner Larry Sullivan said many things will be discussed. An incinerator, transfer station, recycling center and inter-county solid waste agreements will be considered.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission will speak at public meeting

The Nuclear Regulatory commission staff will hold a public meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13 in the Charlevoix Township Hall (Stroud Hall) on Waller Road. County commissioner chairman Phil Johnson will chair the meeting.

At the meeting, NRC representatives will discuss the decommissioning of the Big Rock Point Nuclear Station.

The meeting will focus on Consumers Energy's decision to immediately dismantle the facility — a change from the company's original plan to leave the plant in safe storage for about 26 years prior to dismantlement.

The program will include presentations by the NRC on the decommissioning regulatory process and by Consumers Energy on the status of decommissioning activities. A question and answer period will follow.

The NRC has received the required certifications from the utility that Big Rock Point has permanently ceased power operations and that all nuclear fuel has been removed permanently from the reactor vessel.

In 1995, Consumers Energy submitted the Big Rock Point post-shutdown decommissioning activities report to the NRC. This report detailed the plan to leave the plant in safe storage for 26 years before beginning dismantlement. The report was discussed in public meetings in May, 1995 and March, 1997.

On Sept. 19, the utility informed the NRC of its plans to forgo the original decommissioning plan and to proceed to dismantlement and decontamination. It revised its post-shutdown decommissioning activities report accordingly.

Under the NRC decommissioning regulations, utilities are permitted to immediately dismantle the plant or to place it in safe storage for a period of time before dismantlement, provided certain regulations are met.

The NRC will conduct inspections during all phases of decommissioning. The agency also will independently evaluate the radiological condition of the plant site during the final phase.

The NRC will publish the license termination plan for public comment, hold a public meeting near the plant to discuss the utility's plans and provide an opportunity for a public hearing.

Consumers Energy's decommissioning reports are available for public inspection in the NRC local public document room at the North Central Michigan College, 1515 Howard St., Petoskey.

Friday, Oct. 17 started out like any other day in the Gillespie household. Tamie Gillespie's husband, Dan, was already at work when Tamie was performing the usual motherly acts of getting two lively kids ready for school.

Shannon, 10, was eating breakfast while his younger sister, Murphy, 8, splashed in the bathtub.

A normal family scenario, altered slightly by the fact that both of the Gillespie children are diabetic. Blood sugar levels must be monitored, and meals like breakfast can't be ignored.

When Murphy called to her mom from the tub, which was just around the corner from the kitchen, Tamie went in to do what moms do.

"You can't get out yet, Murphy, you didn't wash your hair," she told her daughter. At that time, Murphy was happy, healthy, and eager to be done with the business of bathing.

Murphy proceeded to shampoo her hair while Tamie returned to the kitchen.

A few minutes passed, so Tamie decided it was time for Murphy to get out of the tub.

When she went into the bathroom, Tamie was stunned to find her daughter unconscious and submerged.

"Call 911!" she shouted to Shannon, while she hauled her daughter out of the water and onto the floor.

Tamie glanced at the kitchen clock.

It was 7:55 a.m.

Tamie hovered over her daughter while her son spoke to the 911 dispatcher. The dispatcher coaxed information from Shannon, learning that Murphy was diabetic — and unconscious.

"Tell them she's drowning!" Tamie yelled.

One year had passed since Tamie took six class hours of CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation) training. In the moment of crisis, Tamie's mind was a blank. She couldn't remember how to do what was needed to save her daughter.

Fortunately, Tamie didn't have to spring into action. Within minutes, Emergency Medical Services coordinator Bob Roloff was in her home, scooping Murphy into his arms and taking her by ambulance to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

When Murphy arrived at the hospital, it was 8:03 a.m. Eight minutes had passed since Tamie found Murphy underwater.

"They got here so fast, but it felt like two weeks," Tamie said.

Murphy woke up in the emergency room, confused and disoriented. By the end of the day, Murphy was back to normal — an energetic little girl, squirming impatiently and wanting to go home.

It's still unknown if Murphy had a low blood sugar reaction or a seizure. Test results won't be back until next week.

The results of one test are definitely in. Tamie Gillespie and her children had a real-life test of the new 911 system. While the emergency responders wasted no time getting to their home, it could have been a different story.

The Gillespies didn't have house numhers posted on their home.

"You're lucky I can count blocks," Roloff told Tamie. To be on the safe side, Roloff was counting blocks as he headed for the Gillespie home.

"I knew where I was going," said Roloff, who is a Charlevoix native.

When Roloff arrived at the Gillespie home, Murphy was still unconscious. He put her in the ambulance and suctioned out her lungs. That was when Murphy started to breathe again.

"She's one lucky girl," Roloff said.

Although the incident ended happily, it could have been a tragedy if the ambulance crew had been looking for a house number.

Within days of the incident, Tamie put address numbers on her home.

"Now I realize how important those numbers are," Tamie said.

EDITORIAL

By Laurie Lounsbury

No one likes having deer eat their shrubbery. And certainly no one is fond of having deer literally run into their cars, smashing the glass and denting the side doors.

But they would probably dislike it even more if hunting was allowed in Charlevoix Township.

The township passed a law in 1989 that doesn't allow deer hunting on the north side of the township. In 1989, there were probably 100 fewer homes in that part of the township than there are today.

There were probably 100 fewer deer as well.

To residents living in the city of Charlevoix and the surrounding townships, deer are a chronic annoyance. Tulips and chrysanthemums are hors d'oeuvres to them, just something to munch on before they get to the main course of expensive landscaping and shrubbery.

But be honest.

The deer were here first. They've got squatters' rights.

A few people living in Charlevoix Township would like to see hunting allowed on some limited basis. William Kury, a township resident, said the deer population needs to be thinned out.

Maybe the people population needs to be thinned out.

People from the big cities are always delighted to move to Charlevoix, build a nice house, tame the natural woodland and put in a pretty lawn with landscaping.

Initially, these transplanted city dwellers are enamored with the sight of deer in their yard. Until they figure out the deer are quickly consuming their expensive plants and flowers.

Then the big, brown eyed creatures are no longer adorable. They are pests and need to be exterminated.

If deer were capable of abstract thought, they would probably have similar feelings toward human beings. After all, homes have been built on their favorite nesting spots.

Indigenous flora have been replaced with decks and gazebos.

The deer population around here is growing every year. So are the numbers of resort homes and new, year-round homes.

It's a turf war.

And it's an unfair war, because the deer can't fight back.

The deer are just one element of nature that makes northern Michigan such a desirable place to live. Instead of eliminating them, we should try to make peace with them.

Better land use, with cluster housing, would leave more open spaces for the deer and other animals. Leaving property in a natural state instead of cultivating it would allow the deer to feed on shrubbery that's supposed to be consumed by animals.

Plenty of residents enjoy seeing deer in Charlevoix Township. They like to take walks through Mt. McSauba and North Point Preserve, knowing they don't need to worry about a guy dressed in orange packing a thirty-aught-six shotgun.

Hunting and homes don't belong in the same neighborhood. If having deer in people's yards eating their plants makes them angry, just think how angry they'd be if a bullet went whizzing by their bedroom window.

In a contest where survival goes to the fittest, the deer are giving us a run for the money. In spite of our ceaseless land development, the deer have managed to adapt and survive.

So let's call a truce. We've got our homes, they get the shrubs. Don't pick on the deer in your own back yard. Go shoot one on public land, far from the madding crowd.

Letters to the editor

Editor:

Congratulations on giving such broad coverage in recognizing the outstanding accomplishments of Charlevoix's 1977 undefeated football team. I'm sure it brought back many pleasant memories to your readers. In my opinion, one of the missing ingredients, as the current high school teams attempt to recapture the past glory years, is a "connection" with the success and winning tradition of past Rayder teams.

Current players, parents, fans and coaches can be inspired and motivated by recognizing the past athletic accomplishments and setting high goals to aspire to repeat as champions. Perhaps your article will help rekindle that winning spark and Charlevoix's winning tradition.

However, there was an obvious omission in both football stories. Neither article mentioned the outstanding coach responsible for guiding that undefeated team and many other highly successful football and basketball teams in Charlevoix — Don Carey. Let's not lose sight of the fact that throughout our past winning heritage were some outstanding coaches. Don Carey, a Michigan Hall of Fame coach, still lives in Charlevoix, and despite some health problems, can be seen at many high school events. While the articles missed recognizing Coach Carey's contribution, let's hope others in Charlevoix will take the time to thank Don for his many years of guiding our Rayders.

There is no question, coaching in today's society is more difficult, as fan and parent pressure contribute greatly to the turnover of coaches. The real challenge is to hire those with potential and with a sound philosophy, and then leave them alone so they can do their job.

When a good coach comes along, the community needs to embrace and recognize the coach's impact and contributions. Charlevoix has had some legendary coaches in the past (Ray Kipke, Stewart Coleman, Del Terrill, Pete Spieles, and Don Carey) and more will be needed for any future success.

I salute Don Carey for his coaching contribution in adding to the legacy of Charlevoix's athletic success.

GO RED RAYDERS!

Sincerely,

Dean Davenport

Guest commentary

This guest commentary was written by Larry Laske

Hello again folks! Last time I did my best to stress to each of you the importance of those that our soldiers leave behind. The fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, relatives, children and wives. Their patriotism and love of country cannot be stressed enough as their sacrifices are numerous and readily apparent. In discussing these things with my wife, Nancye, we have sort of grown to accept each other's perspective and truly appreciate that there are many ways of looking at all of the concepts inherent in the ideologies of duty, honor, country and patriotism. As a matter of interest, Nancye generated the idea for what I am about to write! We were all wrapped up in the fourth commandment one night. Remember the fourth commandment? "Honor thy father and thy mother."

In order to draw an appropriate analogy between honoring our fathers and mothers and honoring our country we must use some readily understandable concepts. We previously said that patriotism was defined as: "Love of one's country." It follows, then, that we have a sense of patriotism for our parents because we certainly love them as we grow in our early years of life. They have an importance to us that is second to nothing. We respect them, listen when they talk, appreciate their wisdom and counsel, don't interrupt when they are talking to others, honor them in special circumstances like Father's Day, Mother's Day, birthdays, and Christmas, extend them every courtesy and place them on top of the list of all parents in the world. Each of the aforementioned are, of course, ideal situations which seem to change with time and circumstances. It's too bad that alcohol, jobs, money and other things like injury, disabilities and divorce have to affect the ideal situation and the love that we have for our parents. Well folks, I'm here to tell you that, as children, we have the same love and respect for our country that we have for our parents. As youngsters, we are born and raised here in the good old USA and from our earliest days we generally hear that the United States of America is the greatest country in the world. In effect, we are sort of acclimated to the idea that our country can do no wrong, make no mistake and that our government is correct in everything that it does and that everything that it says is gospel! I'm absolutely confident that each of you can distinctly remember the thrill of standing in class and reciting the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag or singing the song "God Bless America." Remember that? Of course, if you are in your 20's or 30's, you may not have a lot of these memories. It's sad to say, but these kinds of childhood experiences have slowly eroded over the years for many many reasons. For those of you that distinctly recall the thrill and excitement you experienced just seeing our men and women in uniform during the second world war, you are the folks that are almost the last of the true patriots. Our country was engaged in a very serious, world-wide conflict and all of our attentions and resources were directed toward unquestioningly supporting their every effort toward reestablishing global stability and world peace. So, even though we had the same freedoms that are so talked about today, such as freedom of speech, press, religion and peaceable assembly; we as a nation, without question, supported our government's programs and policies.

The exact same thing can be said for the way that we interacted with our parents (way back when)! We sort of accepted everything that they said as gospel and listened to their advice and counsel. In effect, like our government, they could do no wrong. Well now, what in the dickens has happened to turn all of this around?

Well folks, today we have women's liberation which, although great from many perspectives and

EDITH GILBERT

By Edith Gilbert

It's surprising how often this little town of Charlevoix is mentioned on major TV networks. It happened again last week when viewers of Live with Regis and Kathy Lee learned that Marell Staffel, owner of the Charlevoix Camera Shop, was the winner of the trivia contest. She won a Jeep boom box, which includes a digital CD player, a radio and 4 inch TV, valued at $400. Not bad —

But what the viewers never saw on the screen was the hilarious and frantic goings-on in Staffel's home after she was alerted at 8:15 a.m. that she was a contestant!

"We will call you back at nine o'clock," she was told. Standing in her kitchen in her nightgown, Staffel tried to call everyone in the world during the next 45 minutes to tell them, "I'm going to be on ABC, TV!" She called her co-worker, Linda Whitley, her daughter, Shannon, her father, Bill Staffel and numerous friends. Her mother, Bonnie, was on vacation and in her excitement, Marell couldn't find her telephone number. Nor could she find a blank tape in the house to record the interview. Instead she called her friend, Eileen Juilleret, at the school superintendent's office. No, they didn't have a TV, so she called the middle school and fortunately, they were able to tape the program for Marell.

As if all this searching and telephoning wasn't enough, Marell perfected a guaranteed strategy to ensure that she gave the right answer to the trivia question. Since she has two telephone lines, she put these to good use. She asked Linda Whitley and daughter Shannon, to call her immediately on her second phone if they knew the answer.

At nine o'clock, the call came, and she was put on hold until 9:20 a.m. Still listening to TV, Marell saw the words Charlevoix, Michigan, flash on the screen. Then she heard the question 30 seconds before Regis and Kathy Lee said "Hi" to her on the phone. Kathy Lee gave our town the French pronunciation, Charlevuah. Next Regis located us on the wall map approximately somewhere in northern lower Michigan.

Finally the trivia question was asked, "What series of films starred Annie Potts and Bill Murray?"

Fortunately Marell knew the answer; nevertheless, her second phone rang twice and both Linda and Shannon whispered, "Ghost busters!"

When I saw Marell later in the day at the Camera Shop, she still hadn't calmed down. Her phone has been ringing off the hook with calls coming in from all over the country; "We heard you on TV!" Wherever she goes, people stop to tell her, "I heard you on TV!

In case you would like to know how Marell first learned about the trivia contest, it was while cruising on the Internet. Following instructions, she mailed a post card with her name, address and phone number to the Trivia Contest, c/o ABC. As a result, Charlevoix's name not only appeared again on a major network, but Marell also won her 15 minutes of fame. She admits, "It's been a lot of fun!"

long overdue, has eroded the concept of family, put our mothers out in the work force, and allowed such concepts as "time-out" to enter our child-rearing times replacing discipline. (Please don't call and tell me all about how "time-out" is effective discipline — you know what I am talking about). Many children today sit at home with their respective Nintendos and computers, gallivanting all over the globe on the Internet or fighting the demons and chopping off heads and killing and shooting everything in sight on home monitors. Being a grandfather myself, I find it amazing that today's children have to be entertained. I'm bored, there's nothing to do, I want that, why can't I go there, Johnny or Mary can do it, why can't I? What happened to tinkertoys, cops and robbers, cowboys and Indians, hide and go seek, pick-up baseball games or neighborhood football games or even hopscotch? Lord help me, we don't hardly have sidewalks anymore. There are plenty of court cases about no prayer in school and no religious pictures in schools or courtrooms and children suing parents for one thing or the other.

Lord help me! Somehow we are supposed to appreciate all of this and understand that it is all in the name of progress! Well if this sort of thing is progress it sure makes a fella like me want to scream for "The good old days" at least for some things.

Choir ready to perform Requiem

Brahms "A German Requiem" will be presented at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 9, at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, at Park and State streets. This Requiem, under the direction of Ellen Addington, will be performed by the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale, Chamber Orchestra and soloists, and is considered to be one of the monumental works of choral literature.

Soloists for the afternoon will be Diane Penning, soprano; and Jeffery Norris, bass-baritone.

Diane Penning has displayed her versatility as a singer-actor throughout the Midwest in her appearances in opera, concert, oratorio, TV and the musical theater, including the Cherry County Playhouse. This will be her first performance in the Charlevoix area.

Jeffery Norris, one of the North's most popular artists, is instructor of voice, and director of the opera workshop at Interlochen Arts Academy. He is well-known to area audiences, having performed the Requiems of Brahms, Mozart and Faure' with the chorale, and this past spring, the Bach's "Passion according to St. Matthew." He is a gifted singing actor, and those who attended the Charlevoix Summer Night at the Opera will recall his part in making that a delightful evening to remember.

Ellen Addington, conductor, is director of music at the Charlevoix Congregational Church.

The public is cordially invited to attend this performance held in the sanctuary of the church. There is no charge, but a free-will offering will be accepted.

A reception will follow the performance and the audience may greet those who took part.

Singers and instrumentalists from the whole area are taking part, from Petoskey, Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan to Torch Lake and Interlochen.

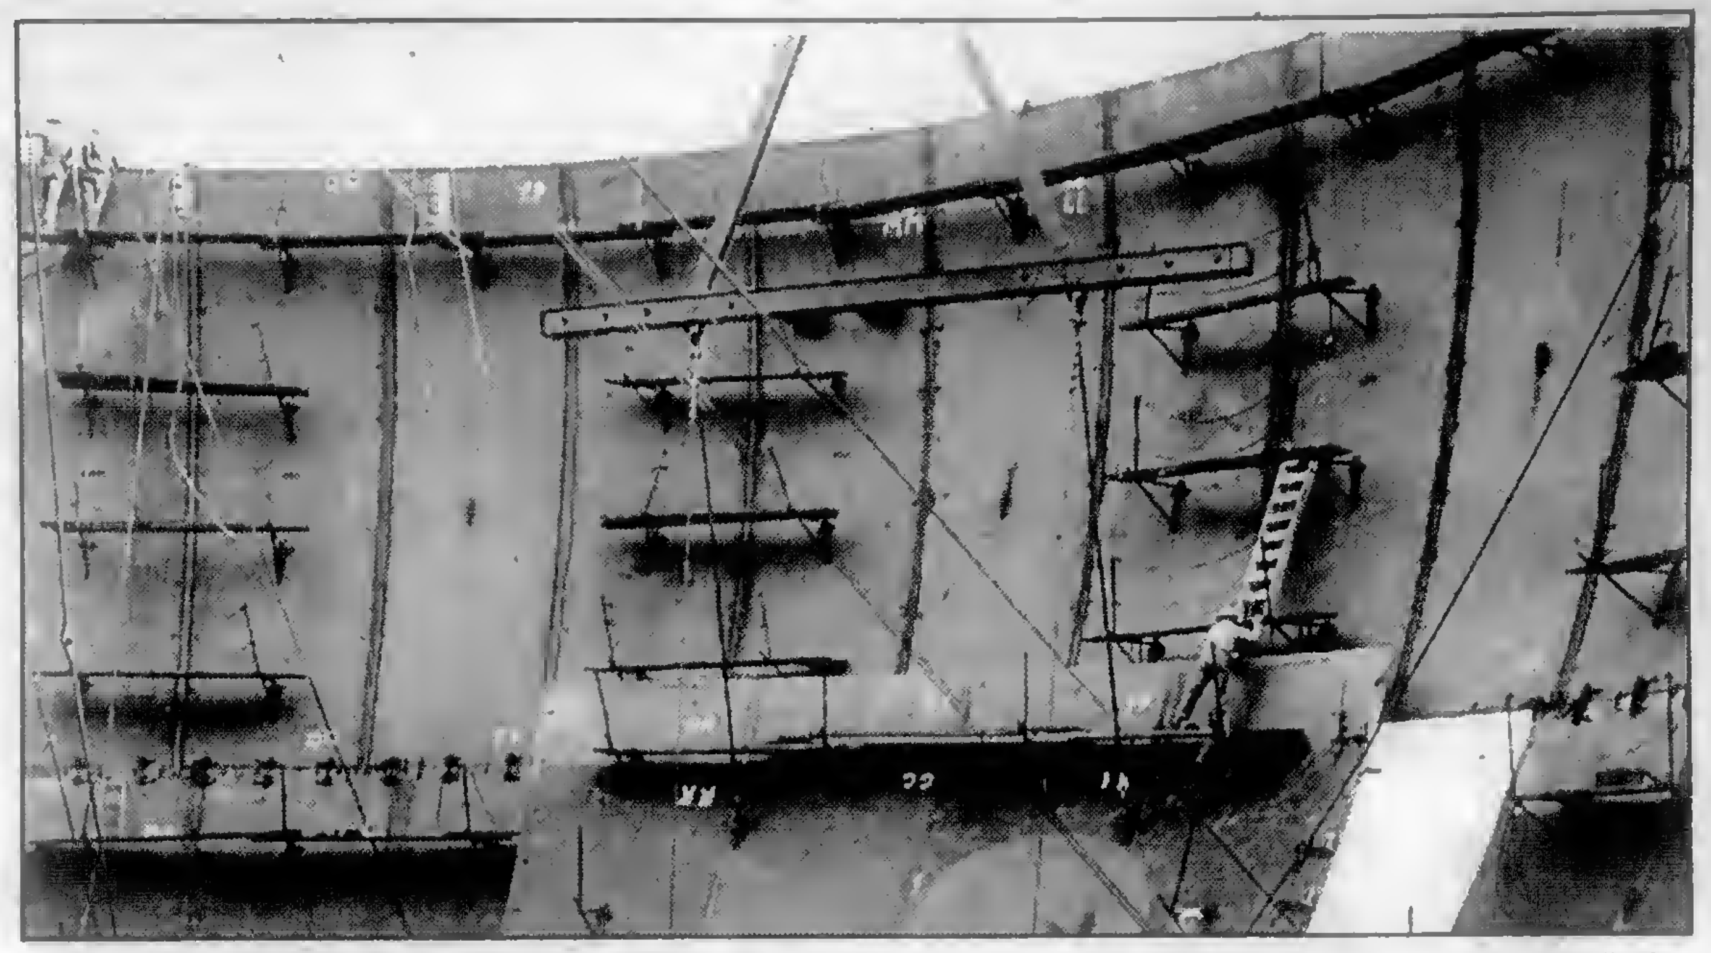
Plant considers options for dealing with waste



Construction of the containment dome was risky business for workers when Big Rock Point was built. The same risks will be present in the process of taking the plant apart.

substance to be removed and stored. Spent fuel bundles are also an issue. Big Rock is looking at storage casks with stainless steel interliners for shipping the bundles. The plant has to wait for a decision from the federal government as to where the bundles can be stored safely. One option is to independently store the bundles in dry fuel storage. However, this method brings public controversy.

Decommissioning has also brought a change in the emergency planning system the plant previously used. These changes reflect the fact that the potential risks don't effect the public — only the on-sight employees. The joint public information center will no longer be needed. The off-site siren system will be dismantled in the spring and sent to Palisades, a nuclear power plant in southern Michigan.

Big Rock offered the emergency warning system to Charlevoix County, but they refused because the system is very expensive to maintain.

Big Rock shutdown brings business to local merchants

Positive economic impacts on the community can be traced to the decommissioning of Big Rock. Contractors come to Charlevoix from all over the United States to provide their services at the plant. These workers need places to sleep, eat, and get the necessities of life. Naturally, they bring business to restaurants, hotels, and other Charlevoix merchants.

Barb Hamilton, owner of Capri Motel, says that these workers were "God-sent" to her business. Due to schools opening earlier than usual, Hamilton lost two weeks of summer business at her motel. Had it not been for the Big Rock workers, the year would have been tough financially for her.

Currently, the Capri houses nine Big Rock workers, and they are expected to stay there for up to three years. Along with other motels in Charlevoix, the Capri offers them reduced rates.

Alexander's Restaurant seems to be a popular eating place for the workers. Because of their business, owner Pam Woodard has extended hours. The restaurant is now open at 5 a.m. as opposed to 6 a.m., before the workers came. Previously, the restaurant was closed for breakfast on Mondays during the winter. Because of the increase in business from the Big Rock employees, it is able to stay open during this ordinarily slow time.

Sleep Inn has also seen an increase in business because of the contractors. Big Rock has rented one-half of the hotel in order to use rooms for training sessions, offices, and housing employees.

There are 294 on-site employees, a number which is up about 85 workers since the plant was operating.

In the decommissioning process, skills are needed to perform different tasks. Big Rock desires to utilize the services of the local community as much as possible.

St. Mary's student art will be auctioned at benefit

By Jamie MacMillan

The finishing touches are being painted and stitched for some of the more priceless items to be sold at the dinner auction benefiting St. Mary's Elementary School.

The dinner dance and auction will take place at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 8 at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Much of the artwork to be auctioned is being provided by the students of St. Mary's, ranging from a large quilt, painted chairs, floor mats, aprons and table tiles.

"I wanted to challenge the kids a little," art teacher Lori Bolt said. "They've been having a good time and we've been working on these projects for a month."

A quick walk through the art room reveals students who indeed are having a blast — yet anxious about the pending sale of their masterpieces. Diligently, they're painting weather and holiday scenes on their table tiles, psychedelic waves on their floor mats, and sunflower, solar systems, and dollar bills on the chairs.

"We like to have fun in this class and our teacher likes to come up with fun things for us to do," fifth grader Dan Buday said. "It's also a fund-raiser for our school."

Between cocktails, dinner, and dancing, an auction and raffle will take place. Also featured in the auction are a stereo system, IBM computer, golf and other weekend getaways, and a variety of artwork. Professional artwork donated by the Bolts will be available, along with the children's art.

For ticket information regarding the festivities, call 547-0141.

Junior Varsity Rayders show promise on the field

By Jamie MacMillan

The Rayder junior varsity football team dropped their season finale against the Petoskey Northmen 38-7 in a game played in persistent drizzle.

Despite the one-sided loss, many strides were made this year on a freshmen-dominated club that scraped its way to three victories, offsetting six losses.

For starters, the club's three wins came against league foes Harbor Springs, Elk Rapids and Kalkaska, perhaps foretelling future conference success at the varsity level.

The squad's biggest achievement was that all of the 21 players were starters by the end of the year, either on offense or defense. Thirteen of those starters were freshmen.

Typically, a JV squad leans heavily on sophomores, while freshmen see little action until the games' end. Coach Hal Evans credits the four-year-old middle school football program for ensuring that incoming freshmen are skillful enough to compete.

"They're coming up here with the skills — so as long as they have courage to go along with that, they can do it," he said.

Evans and co-coach Brian Certa steered the freshmen toward the defensive side of football. John Kilkenney, Anthony Cesaro and Mike Kochanny alternated starting on the defensive line while Kyle Louiselle, Ben VanGuilder and Hal Evans Jr. played both linebacker and defensive back positions.

They keyed a defense that held six opponents to 18 points or less, including a 14-0 whitewash of Harbor Springs.

"They all got a chance to play a lot more than usual and the experience will help us all in the years to come," Evans said.

This season, none of the tenth-graders were moved to the varsity squad, but Evans said all eight of the sophomores who led the offense have a chance to be key contributors to next year's varsity team.

Sophomore Adam Wood will get a crack at the quarterback position after a year-and-a-half of starting for the JV club. Evans said Wood has a nice arm and a good ability to find receivers in all parts of the field.

Brian Cornet, Brad Nortley and Ben Coen rotated at running back with Tyler Lieberman and Shay Hutchison manning the ends. Adam Kline and Russ Ward anchored the offensive line.

Coen was the star in a gritty 20-14 win over Elk Rapids, rushing for a total of 168 yards, including the game winning scamper of 8 yards late in the game with the score knotted at 14. He also caught a 28-yard pass from Wood for a score earlier in the contest.

Cornet, meanwhile, saved the day against Kalkaska, scoring 16 of the team's 24 points in a 24-12 win. He scored two touchdowns — one on a 68-yard kickoff return — and added two, 2-point conversions.

Evans said all the sophomores should impact next year's varsity club on offense. Those who do not get time in the backfield will contribute at the flanker and wide receiver spots, while Kline and Ward, Evans said, will be in a group of seven quality linemen. Evans said that the offensive depth might free up some of this year's varsity players to concentrate on playing just on the defensive side of the football.

Hal Evans Jr., number 8, gave it everything he had against the ferocious Northmen, who beat the JV Rayder team in their last game of the season. Evans is one of 13 freshmen playing on the junior varsity team, which has a promising future in years to come. The team also has some strong sophomore players, who will move up to the varsity team next year. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Lady Rayders focus on upcoming East Jordan game

By Jamie MacMillan

Tim Volovsek's basketball team will be prepping for this month's district tournament by testing themselves against two of the state's best teams.

Resting with a 7-10 record, any chance of a .500 season lies with toppling Benzie Central, 16-0 and #4 in the class C poll, and Harbor Springs, 15-1, ranked #7 in the same poll.

The games, both on the road, will give the Rayders a total of eight games this season against state-ranked opponents.

However, it is a home contest with East Jordan sandwiched in between those two chores that Volovsek is eying the most. A win would give the Lady Rayders six conference wins, securing third place in the Lake Michigan Division behind Harbor Springs and Kalkaska, who get honorable mention credit in Michigan's class B poll.

"It's a pretty brutal closing schedule," Volovsek said. "An East Jordan win would give us third place, which would be real positive considering this is a transition year with a new coach."

The contest with the Devils on Thursday, Nov. 6 is also the final home game for Volovsek's seniors and is parents' night. A junior varsity game starts the night at 6 p.m.

The match with the Harbor Springs Rams, the season's finale, is Tuesday, Nov. 11.

The team has steadied after a ho-hum 1-5 start to win six of their next eleven games. The turnaround is due to a better flowing offense that is finally jelling with the new coach's system. For example, during their first four games, the club could only manage a meager 39 points a game. In their last six contests, though, they have been above 50 points in each game.

"It took a while to learn how to work together and find a rhythm in this new situation," Volovsek said. "We've taken the reigns off of it and it's shown."

Amanda Eaton leads the team in scoring with just under 12 points a game while Jamie Gowell has been reaching double figures in scoring and rebounding nearly every game. Anne Terryberry, Julie Gregory and Angie Potter round out the starting five.

Katy Conlan, Sarah Dominic, Christine Sweeney, and Mandi Webb have, at various times this year, contributed off the bench.

In securing a win over Boyne City, Dominic hit eight straight free throws in the fourth quarter. In other action, Conlan kept the Rayders competitive early in the first game with Harbor Springs with six points in the opening quarter.

Depth is the club's strength, with seven players scoring at least six points a game.

The Rayders expect a boost with the return of Lyndsey Blechel, who has been out for over a month with a foot injury.

Blechel was last season's starting point guard and hit the game winning three-pointer in a tournament win over Boyne City.

Girls' cross country team finishes with state honors

By Jamie MacMillan

The final curtain has been drawn on one of the most lauded girl's teams in school history — the girl's cross country team.

Taking one last final bow are seniors and four-year letter winners Candace Vandergriff, Liz Andreae, Candy Siwarga and Monica Browe.

Their packed resume includes four consecutive conference championships, one regional championship (1996), a runner-up finish in the state finals (1995), two other top-ten finishes in the state finals (10th in 1994 and '96) and two straight academic state championships (1995 and '96).

"It was a neat experience for me to be with a group for that long," coach Ken Plude said. "They are dedicated athletes and they sure did achieve."

The team fell just short of qualifying for a fourth straight trip to the state finals, finishing fourth in a regional meet that had four teams ranked in the state's top 10 poll: Benzie Central, McBain, Mason County Central, and Charlevoix. East Jordan was listed as an honorable mention.

Two runners, Vandergriff and junior Tricia Hodge, did qualify for the state meet and finished in the top half of the state field. Hodge placed 43rd while Vandergriff was 89th. Heavy rain pelted the runners on the clay surface.

"It was a bog," Plude said. "The water stayed on top of the surface so when you ran it created a big puddle."

One last note on this year's senior class includes two-time letter winner Leah Dulaney. Ken Plude said perhaps their most memorable feat was in 1995, when they placed second in the state meet, but won the academic title. The academic state title is based on the cumulative grade point average of the top six runners from all the teams qualifying for the state meet.

"To balance both is taxing and stressful. I would have had a hard time in high school rising to that level," Plude said. "It shows their character and strength."

Former athlete now inspires others

Ron Heagy

At one point in his life, Ron Heagy was on top of the world. His football scholarship to the University of Oregon had been signed and returned. He was headed to California with buddies and could picture himself surfing alongside the Gold Coast's best.

Then, with a dive into a big wave, his world and life came tumbling down. The respirator and the looks on his family's faces hinted of the grave consequence — paralyzed from the neck down with no chance for improvement.

Now, 17 years later, Ron Heagy Jr., a quadriplegic, has moved well beyond anyone's expectations. After earning a bachelors degree and a masters degree, learning to mouth paint, then meeting and marrying a beautiful girl of his dreams, he now travels across the country telling his story, sharing the message that "Life is an Attitude."

The 34-year-old star athlete, who never got a chance to reach his athletic potential, now motivates others. His look into life, with the trials and tribulations that we all face, will inspire audiences to find the strength to cope with life's challenges.

Dean Davenport of Charlevoix arranged for Heagy to visit both Central Michigan University and Ferris State University campuses for speaking engagements. In bringing Heagy to Michigan, Davenport wanted to bring him to Charlevoix too. Gary Stutzman, a friend of Davenport's, agreed to help.

"We both have heard his message and it's tremendous, something we wanted to share with the community," Davenport said.

Heagy will be in Charlevoix Sunday, Nov. 16, making several speaking engagements during the day and evening. Stutzman encourages everyone to make the effort to see Heagy.

"I guarantee you'll leave feeling better about yourself as well as be inspired to improve your own life," Stutzman said. "Ron's message is for everyone."

Times and places of speaking events will be announced next week.

For more information, call Gary Stutzman at 547-1311.

A truly haunted house

This home on Upright Street, with an architectural style that evokes thoughts of the Adams family, was believed to be haunted a century ago. The home no longer exists, but who knows about its ghosts?

Courtesy of Charlevoix Historical Society

Built in 1882 by Mr. Adelbert R. Upright, this three story home was located on the northwest corner of State Street and Hurlbut Avenue. A tragedy in the family was the cause of it being known as the Haunted House.

Martha Ayers bought the property in 1887. It was her home until financial troubles caused her to lose it in 1925. During all that time it is said she never spent a nickel on the house for repairs or improvement. She lived in two rooms and used the rest of the house to store her many purchases acquired at auction sales. She attended all auctions for miles around. Auctioneers often waited for her to arrive on the scene before beginning the sale. One room of the house contained nothing but huge boxes filled with balls of the material from which rag rugs were made. Tables in the basement were weighted down with dozens of crocks of old rancid butter. Items of furniture of all kinds were piled to the ceilings of many rooms. One room was filled with old dresses and hats. Ironically, after her death, everything in the house was auctioned off. Antiques that came from that auction are still to be found in many homes in Charlevoix.

4-H aims to raise $5,000 before the end of 1997

The Charlevoix County 4-H Council recently announced that the final plans have been put in place to meet the goal of raising $5,000 during the 1997 calendar year. The 4-H Endowment program began when an anonymous donor decided to give $5000 to the fund if the Charlevoix County 4-H program would undertake the challenge to match that amount during the year.

"We are very pleased with the support that our community has given in making sure that we move steadily towards our goal," said Rosemary Karkosak, 4-H Endowment Fund Committee Chair.

Currently, about three-fourths of the goal has been reached through cash contributions and pledges.

"We still need to raise $1,374 between now and December," Karkosak said.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation helped develop the process from the start. Pledges have even been coming in from young people who gave up their allowances and babysitting money to support the future of 4-H in Charlevoix County.

"This is the kind of grass roots support that we were looking for," Karkosak said. The fund raising efforts of local 4-H clubs have been a steady source of contributions to the fund. Income from the investment of the fund will support such future programs as: college scholarships, awards, educational trip awards, leader/member recognition, leadership education, leader training, county workshops and our local 4-H sports groups.

For additional information on how to contribute to the "4-H Endowment Fund," contact MSU Extension - Charlevoix County at 582-6232. A donor packet is available upon request. If you are interested in making a contribution, please make your checks payable to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, with a notation that it is for the Charlevoix County 4-H Endowment Fund. Checks and pledges should be sent to P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727. In addition, potential donors may contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation directly at 536-2440. All contributions are tax deductible and all donors are eligible for a State of Michigan Community Foundation tax credit.

Student drinking and drug use on the rise

But still lower than it was in the disco days

By Laurie Lounsbury

Is it true that nearly one of every two Charlevoix eighth graders in 1996 consumed alcohol? Maybe, maybe not.

A survey, conducted by the University of Michigan, reported that nearly 42 percent of eighth grade students in Charlevoix and Emmet counties had consumed alcohol within 30 days of answering the survey questions. That number is well over the national average of 26 percent for eighth grade students who say they have consumed alcohol.

School getting refund from Durant case

By Jamie MacMillan

The settlement of the 18-year-old Durant case could bring Charlevoix Schools a boost of over $160,000 for technology improvements.

The money will come from a settlement agreement over the Durant case between the 84 plaintiff schools and the state. School superintendent Roberta Jackson announced during the Monday Charlevoix Board of Education meeting that the district is expecting a $166,000 check from the state by April 15, 1998.

"I've been a real skeptic, but it looks like we'll get some money," Jackson said.

The Durant case, a lawsuit filed by a host of school districts against the state of Michigan in 1980, deals with the state's underfunding of state-mandated programs such as special education, driver's education and food services.

Schools were unhappy that programs still required by the state were not being funded at the same monetary levels as they had in the past. The suit was an attempt to recover the lost funds.

The state legislation has decided to reimburse every district in the state to avoid further litigation on the matter. The total settlement is expected to approach $1 billion. Payment is expected to be made through bond sales and dipping into "rainy day funds."

Plaintiff schools will receive their reimbursement in one payment, while those not involved in the suit will get half of their payment next November and 10 percent annually for the next 10 years.

Non-plaintiff schools are required to spend the money on technology and infrastructure improvements, while plaintiff schools are advised, but not limited, to follow those instructions.

"It's an unusual settlement because the issue had nothing to do with technology," board member Larry Levengood noted.

Jackson suggested the district would use the Durant money to get closer to the goal of desktop computers and phones in every classroom, while using the sinking fund dollars from the June election to do the wiring required for such a task.

The state, however, will not be increasing its foundation grant allowance for next year. The per student stipend for the 1997-98 school year was set at $6,848, a $154 increase from the previous year. That increase brought in just under $204,000.

While the Durant settlement and foundation grant freeze appear to nullify each other, the state agreed to allow school districts to pay less money into the state retirement fund.

Jackson said for the last half of this fiscal year, Charlevoix will see a 3.44 percent decrease in money sent to the state, while next year the decrease will be 2.7 percent. She simplified by saying, instead of sending 15 percent of total employee salary to the state, for the next year-and-a-half, they will

Cigarette smoking is on the rise with high school students

dle school principal Dennis Van Guilder. "It seems inconceivable to me. We frankly don't see it."

Van Guilder questioned the reliability of eighth grade students who were answering the survey.

"I'm not saying the survey's not right, but it can be skewed a little higher because sometimes kids at that age say things that aren't the reality.

"We rarely, rarely, have a problem in our school with tobacco and alcohol. There are about three to five kids each year who get an in-house suspension for tobacco," Van Guilder said.

It's difficult to say if the survey accurately reflects drinking habits of Charlevoix students.

According to Scott Kelly, founder of BASES (Bay Area Substance Education Services), three schools are chosen every year for the survey. Kelly, who compiled the data, could not say whether or not Charlevoix was one of the school districts chosen for testing. Even so, Kelly thinks the numbers are representative of the area.

"I think our culture here, with the resort community, has a heavy emphasis on fun," Kelly said. "Alcohol is pretty available to students. There's also that mind-set that there's nothing else to do."

At the 12th grade level, over half the students in Charlevoix and Emmet counties drank alcohol.

Cigarette smoking is also on the rise from 1991, with nearly one-in-four eighth grade students saying they smoked. In 1991, less than one-in-five eighth grade students claimed to have smoked.

In 1997, 38 percent of 12th graders said they smoked cigarettes.

Kelly compiled data from the survey going all the way back to 1975.

Although the number of drinkers, smokers and drug users seems to be on the rise in the last seven years, it has steadily declined since 1975. A slight increase has occurred over the last few years.

1978 was a peak year for drug and alcohol use, with 37 percent of 12th grade students claiming to have smoked marijuana and 72 percent claiming to have consumed alcohol.

Marijuana use fell to its lowest popularity point in 1992, with 12 percent of seniors claiming to have smoked pot. That number is climbing back up in northern Michigan, with 37 percent saying they used marijuana in 1997. The increase is considerable from 1996, when 16 percent of seniors said they smoked marijuana.

Alcohol use fell to its two-decade low point in 1994, with 50.1 percent of seniors saying they drank. In 1997, the number of drinkers is holding steady, with 50.8 percent of seniors saying they consumed alcohol.

Cigarette smoking was the coolest in 1976, when nearly 39 percent of seniors smoked. In 1992, cigarettes were falling out of favor, with 28 percent of the senior class saying they smoked. In 1997 — even with the death of Joe Camel — smoking is gaining popularity, with nearly 38 percent of the seniors saying they smoke. Last year, only 30 percent of seniors said they smoked cigarettes.

Brush piles are more than city street crew can manage

By Laurie Lounsbury

The work is piling up.

On several side streets, you can see the evidence of that.

Piles of branches need to be picked up by the city street crew, but the small group of street employees are having a tough time keeping up with demand.

Because of that, city street supervisor John Martin went to the city council with a request to hire an outside contractor for brush pick-up.

"Spring and fall are the biggest demand times for brush," Martin said. "But there's also a demand for us to do other things."

While the council agreed that the street crew needs help, they weren't convinced that hiring an outside contractor was the best solution.

"I think our crew has been cut too low," said councilman Gabe Campbell at the last city council meeting. "I've thought for a long time we should hire more people and not have to contract jobs out."

The street department consists of eight full-time employees. One is a mechanic for street equipment, and two are assigned to cemetery work. That leaves five men to pick up brush, along with leaves, in the fall.

About 900 man-hours are devoted to brush pick-up in the spring and fall. It represents half of one person's work hours for a year.

City manager Mike Wiesner favored the idea of hiring an outside contractor to do the work.

"If we could free up half a man-year, we could do the extras we've talked about," Wiesner said.

The extras would include more timely maintenance of the cemetery, replacing faded signs and straightening sign posts, weekly grass pick-up and increased maintenance at the ski hill, among other things.

The decision to hire an extra person or contract the work will require a cost analysis.

In the 1996-97 budget year, the city spent nearly $27,000 for the brush pick-up. This year, the budget was increased to $29,700.

Hiring an extra full-time person may be more than the city needs.

With brush piles like this to be found on many side streets, city street workers are having trouble keeping up with the work load. On top of brush pick-up, they have leaf pick-up to contend with, and the trees aren't helping by refusing to let go of their leaves. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

"If we put on another man, it's only 900 hours of work, and I don't know if that's viable," Wiesner said.

Mayor Josh Barnes preferred the idea of hiring another employee on a trial basis.

"I'd like to see us try an extra man for one year," he said.

Council voted to take bids for the brush pick-up, mostly to get an idea of the cost.

After the meeting, Wiesner and Martin decided to do their own cost analysis before taking bids.

"I'm concerned about taking bids if we're not going to contract the work out," Wiesner said.

Before taking any bids, Martin and Wiesner will present their cost analysis to city council.

Inspirational speaker Heagy in town Sunday

Ron Heagy, a former athlete and now a quadriplegic, will be in Charlevoix Sunday, Nov. 16, sharing his motivational message with the community.

Heagy was destined for athletic greatness when an accident left him paralyzed from the neck down.

Heagy will start his day at 9:45 a.m. Sunday, speaking to all area youth groups at the United Methodist Church at 104 State St.

At 2 p.m., Heagy will meet with wheelchair bound students and young adults who are serviced by the Char-Em Intermediate School District. They will meet in the conference room of the Edgewater Inn.

At 4 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School Gym, Heagy will speak to high school athletes.

Heagy will finish his schedule with a community service at 5:30 p.m. at the Assembly of God Church on M-66. The service is open to all community members.

The 34-year-old former star athlete now motivates others with his look into life and the trials and tribulations we all face. He inspires audiences wherever he goes and helps them find the strength to cope with life's challenges.

send between 11 and 12 percent. If for some reason the economy sours, then the state will ask districts to maintain their present levels of funding for retirement.

"At this point we're cautiously optimistic that we'll see some savings," Jackson said. "That's the only problem — will the economy stay good?"

OPINIONS

Laurie Lounsbury

One of the biggest challenges for a writer is to come up with fresh column ideas every week. There's never a shortage of events in Charlevoix, but sometimes those events don't warrant an entire column.

I was lamenting about this with Kirk Schaller, the publisher of this paper, when he gave me a great idea.

Every now and then, I'll do a column that's sort of a shotgun blast of ideas. (I believe I'm using the word 'shotgun' correctly this time.)

It's a spin on the thumbs-up, thumbs-down concept used by Siskel and Eibert. Instead of thumbs, I'll be using Internet symbols. Internet users are familiar with these symbols, but for those of you who haven't surfed the 'Net yet, just turn your paper sideways to the right and you'll get the idea.

: ) Mayor Josh Barnes finally let the cat out of the bag about his gag order. We needed to know why everything was so hush-hush. Of course, the lawyers will no doubt chastise him for mentioning the gag order, but too bad. They'll get over it.

: ( The lawyers who have directed Josh Barnes to get permission for even the most civil, humane acts are overly paranoid. He needed their permission to attend Mark Yager's funeral — he even needed permission to send flowers to the. families of the victims of the fireworks explosion.

: ) The Carriage House on the north side of town was finally torn down. Yes, it was a landmark, but it was also an eyesore, making it no different than a dilapidated doublewide. Ugly is ugly.

: ( Former Carriage House owners let the building fall into such a state of disrepair that it was not worth salvaging.

: ( Same goes to neighborhood residents who wouldn't let the developers of the Carriage House find some creative use for the building. It would have made a wonderful, multi-residence dwelling.

: ( It's not the Ramsey's fault that they happen to own a summer home in Charlevoix. But the media attention over the case is like a one-two punch in our face, drawing all sorts of creepy media people to our town. We wish they'd go away.

: ) The Charlevoix Fire Department has been cleared of any wrongdoing in the Whitney's fire. It's too bad rumors had to spread as fast as the fire did, suggesting anything else.

: ) The Kuk Sool Won martial arts group teaches defense techniques that, at first glance, look a bit violent. Included in the instruction is the ancient art of saying "Yes, sir; no sir; thank-you sir." I've never seen such a polite bunch of warriors.

: ( The Michigan State Police and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms are taking too long with the fireworks explosion investigation. If there's a legitimate reason for taking so long, why can't they at least give us an update? We have a right to know what the heck is going on.

: ) Bo Boss and city workers donated time and energy to add a second story to the ski lodge at Mt. McSauba. It looks terrific, and will no doubt be a boon to parents who stand around chatting while their kids are skiing.

: ( The county commissioners do it to us every year. In spite of the fact the county has a HUGE pot of money available to them, they keep levying the full amount of taxes allowed by law. This year, they're claiming they need the money to pay for 911. If that big bureaucracy they created can't manage their money, why should we taxpayers make up the difference? Let the county bail 'em out if they want to, but don't nickel and dime us to death.

: ) Beaver Island resident Bill McDonough called to let us know that the Emerald Isle is plowing through the water on its way to Charlevoix. The ship should be here by the weekend of Nov. 21. Yippee! Let's hope the gales of November don't act up while en route.We don't want to wait another minute for the welcome home celebration.

OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By: Mark Hofstra
Charlevoix Community Reformed Church

"So, do you play any sports?" I ask each teen during my "Get to know you" meetings.

"Oh yes! I run cross, then basketball, then softball, then ..then..."

As the new people on the block, my wife, Kimberly, and I have been struck by the emphasis on sports in this area. It is very rare to find a teenager who is not active in at least two sports during the school year, and the norm is probably a sport a season. When a conversation is lacking energy, one can just bring up sports and suddenly people have something to say. The vitality of the conversation increases and there may even be a disagreement or two. People care about sports around here. People care about whether Harold is playing soccer or football. People care, I'm told, because often there are not enough people for each sport. If you are in school and have an able body, then you probably feel the expectation of the whole community to be playing a sport.

All this emphasis on sports sent me asking, "What does the Bible say about sports?"

The most direct reference to sports I found is in 1 Corinthians, 9:24-27, where Paul writes: "Do you not know that in a race the runners all compete, but only one receives the prize? Run in such a way that you may win it. Athletes exercise self-control in all things; they do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable one. So I do not run aimlessly, nor do I box as though beating the air; but I punish my body and enslave it, so that after proclaiming to others, I myself should not be disqualified."

Coming from an athletic background myself, I kind of like this positive reference to athleticism. Paul says that in our walk with God we can learn something from athletes. If athletes want to win their races, they do not sit back and do nothing until the day of the race. Athletes train. They push themselves in practice, punishing their bodies with severe effort so that, come start time, they can run to win the race.

Paul says be like a good athlete in your walk with God. Deny yourself. Deny your bodily desire to relax and not worry about God and the well being of others. Rather, push yourself and train yourself to consider God's will in your life. Get into training at loving God and others. If you do not train at your relationship with God and others, then you may be disqualified.

What does training in our relationship with God (spiritual training) look like? Well, an athlete trains by running daily regardless, of the weather and their body's call to skip a day. So, in spiritual training we need to love God and others as a part of our daily routine. Spiritual training means talking with God daily in prayer and listening to God's Word in the Bible. It means to daily find small ways to put others before yourself, like sponsoring a child through Compassion International rather than spending that money on a Coke each day, or helping at the Community Lunch Program rather than eating out at the restaurant you normally do for lunch.

An athlete will become a member of a team to encourage and be encouraged, working and training together in the effort to win the prize. So in spiritual training we can become members of Christian teams or churches and small groups encouraging others and receiving encouragement in our walk with God.

An athlete will submit to the instruction of a coach to become all they can be in their race. So in spiritual training we can submit to the instruction of God found in the Bible. We can seek Biblical instruction from teachers and pastors in the churches. We can find people who have been involved in spiritual training longer than ourselves to mentor and teach us what we have to do to become more of what God created us to be.

So concerning athleticism, I say train hard! Let your training and excellence at sports inspire others, and train yourself at your walk with God as well. Do your best at sports and do your best in the spiritual race of loving God and others. May you win your race for the imperishable rewards that come from loving God and others. Train hard!

Because of his love of nature and his sharing attitude, Clinton Davis protected over 1,300 feet of wild river land between Six Mile and St. Clair lakes in the South Arm Township.

In his first gift to the preserve, Davis protected 1,200 feet of river shoreline.

Last April, Davis and his wife, Mildred, were planning to attend the dedication of the new Davis Preserve. Mildred had to call organizers from a hospital room in Petoskey to say that Clinton was too sick to make the dedication.

In spite of his illness, Davis wanted to do what he could to protect the area. He asked Mildred to attend the dedication and buy another preserve, if possible.

"Another preserve! I told Mildred we could think about that later," said Jo Anne Beemon, steward of the preserve.

Davis died before the dedication, but Mildred upheld his wish and attended the dedication. She also acquired another 105 feet of river frontage to add to the Clinton Preserve.

The new addition protects river frontage and low lands, with lush gardens on the river bottom land; cedar swamps, to mixed hardwoods and up to an open transitional field, and finally to a stand of towering red pines, high above the river.

"It's a cornucopia of habitat types," Beemon said. "It's a perfect classroom, showing the diversity of ecosystems within a watershed."

The St. Clair-Six Mile Lake Natural Area now spans 161 acres, protecting over 9,000 feet on the Sinclair River and on St. Clair Lake.

VENDORS WANTED - If you have special tools, goods or services that you believe would help in the decommissioning of Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant, we want to hear from you. A special vendor exhibition will be held December 16 in Petoskey.

Business briefs

Mettlers chosen as one of America's Greatest Men's Stores

In a recent publication of DNR, the national men's retail and fashion magazine, Mettlers was one of 50 stores listed as America's Greatest Men's Stores.

In the category of independent specialty stores, Mettlers was selected based on merchandise, high level of service, ambiance, fashion direction, community leadership, longevity and overall shopping experience.

The magazine said of Mettlers' Sarasota, Fla., store, "Midwestern sensibility on Florida's West Coast."

Mettlers has been well established in the men's and women's apparel business for over 20 years. Mettlers has a strong dedication to resort locations, which provide them the ability to have romantic and elegant retail environments. In all, there are six Mettlers stores in Michigan and Florida. The three stores in northern Michigan are in Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix. The three Florida locations are on the west coast on St. Armands Circle, Sarasota, Third Street, Olde Naples and an outlet in Ellenton.

"We were thrilled to be selected as one of the Top 50 Finest Stores," said Lou Mettler, president of the company. "It is truly great to be recognized for our high level of customer service, mix of merchandise and community leadership that has always been the backbone of our success with our customers."

Citizens Bank offers title services

Citizens Bank has opened a title insurance agency, Citizens Title Services, Inc. The new agency will provide more comprehensive services for clients and will give Citizens Bank greater flexibility in serving clients. Citizens Title Services, Inc. began its operations Nov. 3.

Citizens Title Services, Inc. will operate as a subsidiary owned by Citizens Bank and will be headquartered in Flint, with regional locations throughout Michigan. The agency will be managed by Janet Becker, assistant vice-president. Becker has over 34 years of experience in mortgage lending and servicing, including 17 years in title insurance services.

The new title services company provides greater convenience for clients and complements Citizens Bank's mortgage lending services.

"Applying for and closing a mortgage have never been easier," said Bert Bojesen, mortgage services manager. "Citizens Title Services provides some very important features for mortgage clients. We offer flexibility and convenience. Clients can close their mortgage loans at any conveniently located Citizens Bank office and at a time convenient for them. We also offer evening (up to 8 p.m.) and weekend appointments, at the client's request. We want to make closing a mortgage as easy as possible."

Citizens Bank is a subsidiary of Citizens Banking Corporation, a diversified financial services company providing a full range of commercial, consumer, mortgage banking, asset management and financial planning services to a broad client base. Headquartered in Flint, Mich., Citizens had assets of $4.3 billion on Sept. 30, 1997. With a long-standing tradition of community banking, Citizens serves markets throughout Michigan and suburban Chicago, Ill., through over 120 banking offices and over 130, 24-hour access ATM machines.

Lady Rayders gear up for district competition

By Jamie MacMillan

Next week's district tournament will require the Charlevoix Lady Rayders to steer a similar course as last season's tournament.

For the second year in a row, the Rayders open with the host team — this year, the East Jordan Red Devils.

Again, like last year, a victory over the host club would lead to a game against Mancelona. The winner of that game would likely play the powerful Harbor Springs Rams in the championship game.

In 1996, the Rayders bested Boyne City on the Ramblers' turf in the tournament's first game before dominating Mancelona en route to the finals. The Rayders, though, were no match for the Rams with the championship on the line, losing 81-49.

"I'm glad they (Harbor) are on the other side of the bracket. If we play at our level we can technically make it to the district finals," Rayder coach Tim Volovsek.

"Harbor is primed to make a run at the state finals. Hopefully, we can give them a little challenge."

All the coaches at Monday morning's district draw anointed the Rams as odds-on favorite. Could it be anything else? After all, the No.6 ranked Rams have won 18 games in a row against the foes lined up in the bracket, including four against the Rayders during that span.

The Rayders completed their home slate last Thursday losing a heartbreaker to East Jordan 45-44.

Charlevoix led by five points with just under two minutes to play, but the Red Devils clawed their way to a one point lead, 43-42, on some dead-eye free-throw shooting.

After Julie Gregory banked in an offensive rebound to give Charlevoix back the lead, Red Devil Jenny Goebel, surrounded by four defenders, hit an off-balance runner with just five seconds on the clock for the win.

"Their pressure at the end did us in," Volovsek said. "We played 30 minutes of a 32 minute game, then we let our guard down."

The game was tight throughout, as a hot-shooting Anne Terryberry scored eight of her Rayder high 12 points during the first half, which ended with the teams tied at 19.

The Devils held a one-point margin after three quarters, but the Rayders defense forced four Red Devil turnovers, which they converted into a 42-37 lead with time winding down.

As with most tight games, this one was determined at the foul line, where the Red Devils dominated. They swished 16 of 28 free shots, including eight in the last stanza, while the Rayders made just five of 12 attempts.

After Terryberry, Julie Gregory scored 11 points with six rebounds, and Amanda Eaton scored nine points to go along with eight assists.

East Jordan swept the tripleheader, winning the freshmen game 35-34 on a free throw with one second left. They withstood a late Rayder charge in the JV game, winning 39-37.

The loss dropped the Rayders to 7-12, 5-6 in Lake Michigan Division play. They are currently in a three-way tie for third place with East Jordan and Boyne City.

Earlier in the year, the Rayders had toppled East Jordan 44-41 on their court, a feat that Volovsek said he hopes his squad can repeat in the tournament opener.

Tip-off is 6 p.m. Monday, Nov. 17. The winner moves on to play Mancelona at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 19.

The championship game is 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 21. After the Rayder-Red Devil contest, Harbor Springs will play Elk Rapids, with the winner to face Boyne City.

All games are played at East Jordan High School.

Kuk Sool Won club members are rewarded with honors. (See page 14 for story and photos)

SCRAPBOOK

Record snow fell this week, 47 years ago

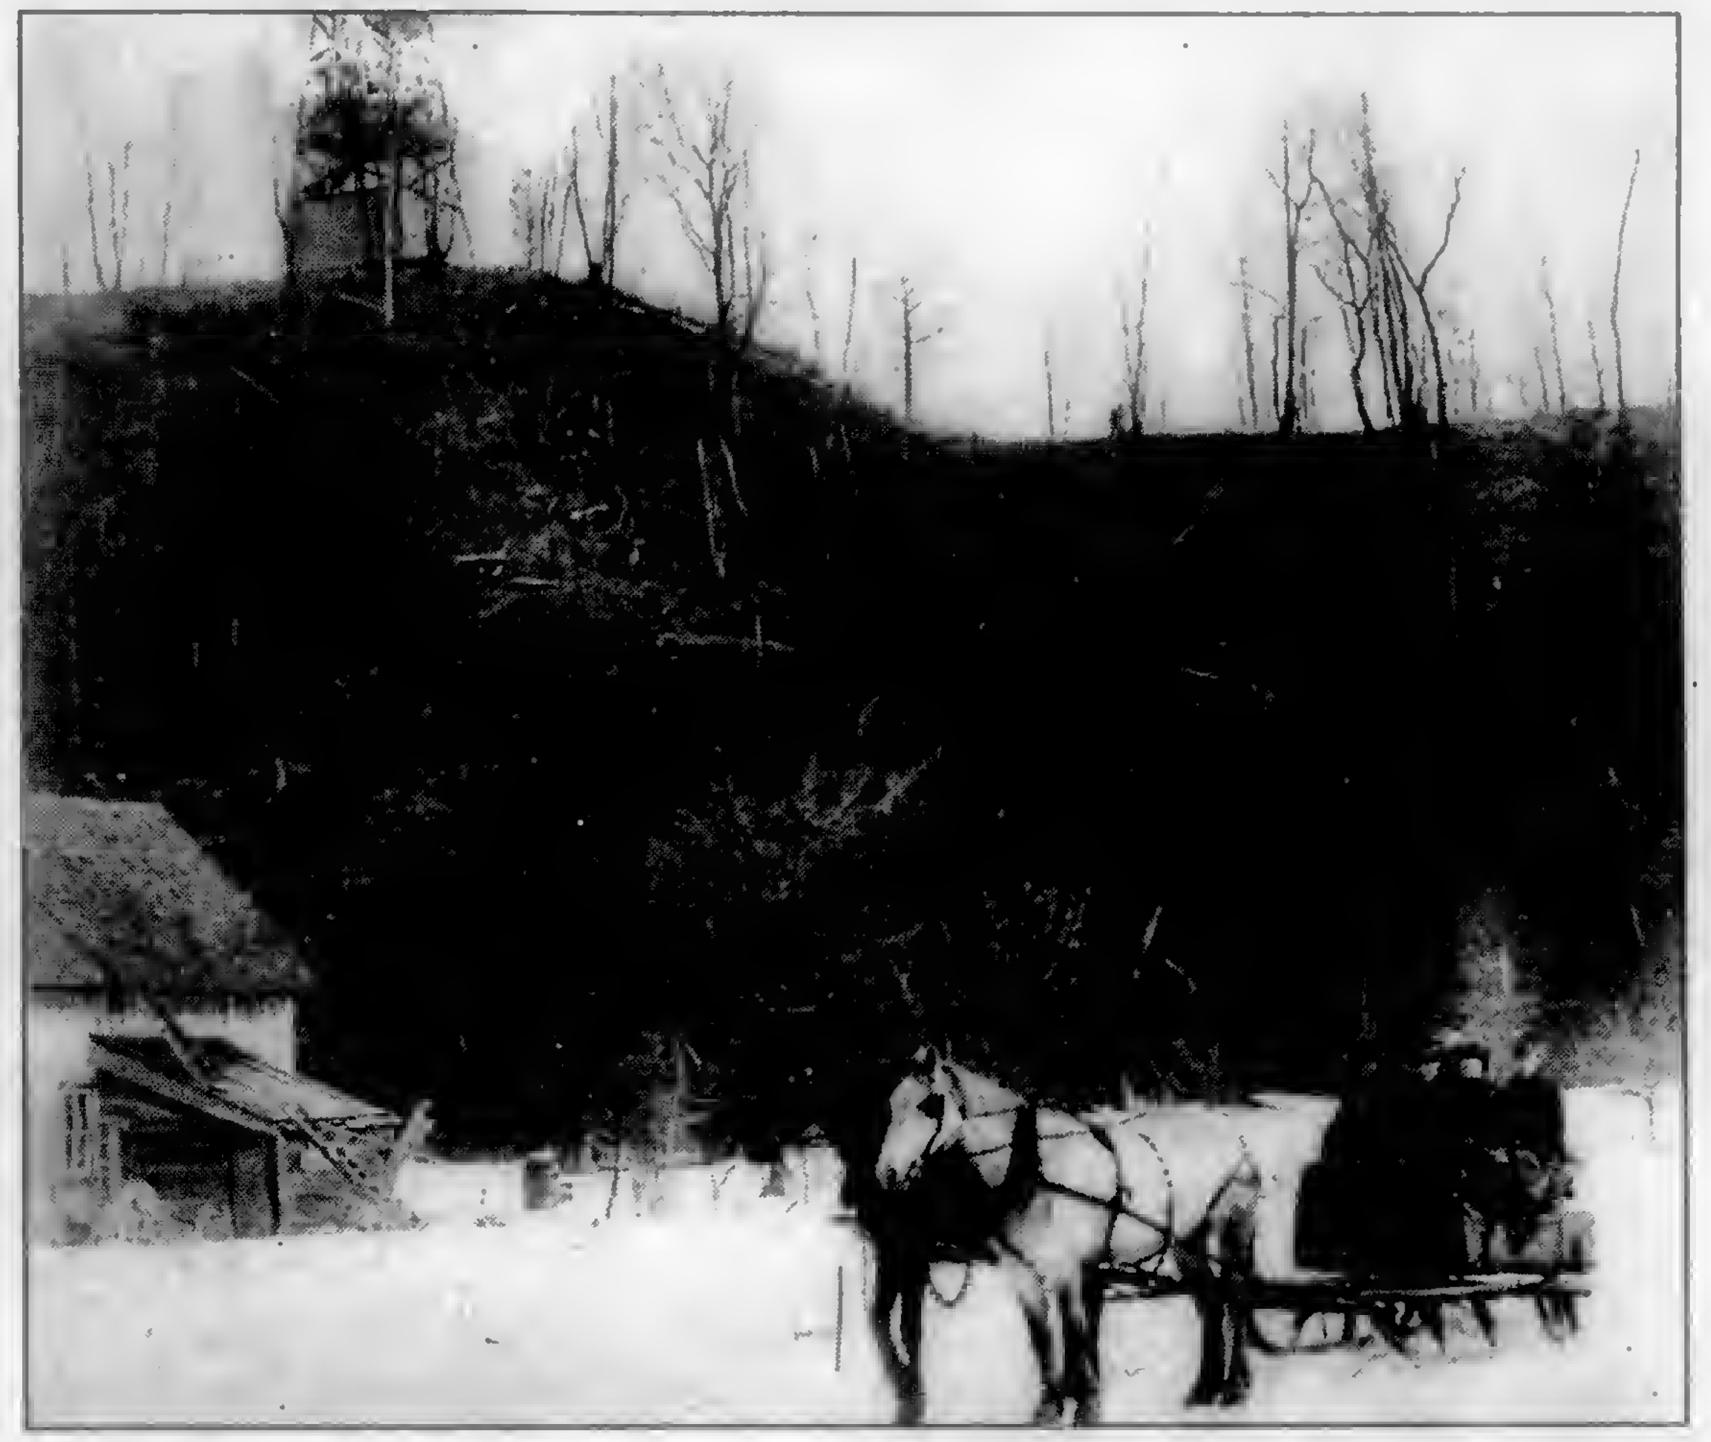
By Marilyn Boss

Charlevoix's heaviest snow of the century occurred on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1950. Shortly after noon it started to snow very heavily. My husband Dale was a wholesale, retail milkman, and he recalls very vividly what happened during this time. He had to put the large, heavy duty tire chains on his Divco milk truck, since the snow was accumulating so fast. It then stopped, after depositing 3-4 inches. Dale took the truck home with him that evening and parked it in the front driveway of his parent's home. Early the next morning, he and his dad got up, and they couldn't believe what had happened during the night. The front door of the house was snowed shut. His dad had quite a time getting it open, as there was an accumulation of 27 inches everywhere. This was a heavy sugar snow, very difficult to move. They tried everything to move the truck, but even with the heavy duty chains on, they were only able to get 300 feet from home after working three hours.

The City of Charlevoix had no snow plows hooked up to their trucks. The town was at a total standstill. Deer hunters had loaded their vehicles, and most had trailers on behind, as they were going to depart to various places to go camping. This was a Saturday morning. Dale remembers seeing Art Wexstaff, Ken Staley and his dad among many others, shoveling their heads off to get their vehicles into the middle of Antrim Street. The only guy who could move was Skip Krahnke, the local Oldsmobile-Pontiac dealer. He had a big wrecker with triple cross-link chains on it. He was kept busy giving someone a tow just to get going. The snowfall was just a local one, so that if you got to the city limits there was only about a foot of snow. It took Dale and his dad until noon to get to the corner of State and Lincoln streets, on the way to the dairy, which was located at 206 West Lincoln St. They never did make the last half-block. The only milk delivery that day was to the Charlevoix Hospital. The milk was delivered on a toboggan. Dale and his dad pulled it through the hip-pocket deep snow. Part of the Ford Garage roof collapsed, which had been built in the early 1920's. Part of Wojan's Windows roof also fell in. The weight of the snow was unbelievable. Clarence Rabach had the biggest Chevrolet truck that General Motors made. He had triple chains on it, and Dale remembers seeing Clarence and his wife, Marie in front of the Congregational Church, trying to buck a way through to her parents home at the county jail, located two blocks away.

Dale and I were building our original house at North Point at the time. We were unable to get out there, but after four days, the snow melted and we poured cement for the front porch.

I was working at Central Drug Store, and having a very deep sense of going to work at all costs, I took off through the snow down our street, down the hill, and two more blocks to work. Mr. Ochs, who owned the drug store, got there too, as he lived fairly close. We had no customers, but were ready to do business if someone came in. The more adventurous folks worked hard to get moving that day, and the snow plows finally got things opened up, but we will never forget the day the town was paralyzed.



In the early 1890s, a wooden observation tower was built on top of Mt. McSauba as a commercial venture. For 25 cents one could climb to the top of the 60 foot structure and enjoy, on a clear day, the most magnificent view in all of Michigan. To the southwest, Grand Traverse Bay; west, southwest, the Manitou Islands; west, the Foxes; northwest, the Beavers; north, Cross Village and the great sand bluffs; northeast, Harbor Springs, on Little Traverse Bay; east, Petoskey on the south shore of Little Traverse Bay; east, southeast, Lake Charlevoix; southeast, East Jordan at the end of South Arm. Two thousand square miles of unparalleled beauty, all for 25 cents.

Court mediators cool tempers

By Jamie MacMillan

In an attempt to fill a gap in the legal system while speeding up the process, the 90th District Court has expanded their mediation program to Charlevoix County.

The mediation program takes small claims cases out of the courtroom and into a sphere where talking out differences leads to a simpler solution.

"Legal issues can be real cut and dry," district court judge Richard May said. "Sometimes I have no choice with what kind of judgment I issue. Mediation really does appeal to people because it opens up avenues for other solutions."

The process is simple. When parties arrive before the judge with their small claims dispute, they are given the opportunity to meet with voluntary mediators to settle the problem in private. The mediators are volunteers from the Citizens Dispute Resolution Service.

Murray Kilgour, a Charlevoix resident and mediator, said it allows for the emotional aspect of the dispute to come to the forefront. Every case leaves emotional scars that a court of law doesn't deal with, but in mediation, both parties get a chance to vent frustrations with each other in a controlled forum.

"Everybody wants to be heard, and sometimes just having the chance to say 'you screwed me and I didn't like it' will go a long way in easing any future animosity between the people," mediator Kathy Lame said.

Both Lame and Kilgour have been mediators for nearly two years. They went through a 40 hour training program where they were taught the basics of law, psychology and communication skills. Most of the training, though, was a series of role-playing, which Kilgour recalled as being harder than the actual mediation. Afterward, they had to spend 10 hours interning with an experienced mediator.

Going into litigation against someone will ice the relationship, but, Kilgour said, through mediation, parties seem to leave a little more attuned to one another than they would have had they gone through a trial.

"Preserving the relationship of the people is not the focus of the court," Kilgour explained.

Another benefit is that, May said, it speeds up the wheels of justice. If four cases on any day go the route of mediation, it can free up an hour of the court's time.

The mediation program was instituted in Emmet County in May, 1996. They reported that, in the second and third quarters of 1997, they mediated 47 cases, with 36 leading into a successful agreement. During the summer, the program expanded to include Charlevoix County. Prior to that, mediation was an option, but it could not be handled immediately. Now, when small claims cases are heard, usually two or three mediators are present in the courtroom if their touch is needed.

Mediation is an option that can be taken even before reaching the small claims court. For information on mediating a possible case, call the Citizens Dispute Resolution Services at 547-1771.

Barnes' gag order was unofficial act

The mayor is talking, but doesn't have much to say

By Laurie Lounsbury

Mayor Josh Barnes was never officially placed under a written gag order. It was a verbal request from the city police chief, the state police and the law firm of Varnum, Riddering, Schmidt and Howlett that Barnes was honoring.

But the downstate law firm has heen dismissed and Plunkett-Cooney has been hired in their place.

The new law firm brings a new attitude toward Barnes' ability to discuss the July 26 Venetian fireworks explosion.

"I'm pretty much at liberty to talk; I just can't give my opinions," Barnes said. "I'm very much at liberty to talk to the victims," Barnes added.

Now that Barnes is able to talk, he's frustrated that he doesn't have much to say. Barnes said he's never seen any reports from the Michigan State Police during their four month investigation.

"I recently learned there was an early preliminary report released to a downstate attorney," Barnes said. "Why would they (state police) release a report to a downstate attorney and never give anything to the chief executive officer of this city?"

Detective Bruce Dykehouse of the Michigan State Police said that no preliminary report was released to an attorney. He also said no early reports were released to

Parts of Ramsey search warrant remain sealed

By Laurie Lounsbury

There are people — unknown to the public — whose names are mentioned in the second search warrant for the Ramsey's summer home on Belvedere Avenue.

Because those people have a right to privacy, District Court Judge Richard May decided to keep portions of the search warrant sealed.

May released his decision Monday over the Internet. The decision followed a motion made by the Denver Post and McGraw Hill to unseal the warrant.

On March 6, the Ramsey summer home was searched for a second time. While the results of the first search in January were released to the public, Charlevoix County prosecutor Mary Beth Kur filed a brief asking that the second search warrant remain sealed.

Both searches were conducted in connection with the Dec. 26 killing of Jon Benet Ramsey, daughter of Patsy and John Ramsey.

In his decision to keep portions of the search warrant sealed, May said that exceptions are allowed to keep search warrants sealed. They include protecting the interest of the public as well as the interest of the parties involved.

"Certain third parties' privacy rights, who have never been disclosed to the media, need to be protected," May said in his decision, agreeing with Boulder, Colo. court Judge Diane MacDonald.

"There are names of third parties and information from those individuals which has never been disclosed to the public," May continued. "Disclosure of their names would unnecessarily cause trauma and loss of privacy to those individuals, and compromise the investigation."

May released his decision over the Internet at 9 a.m. Monday, saying that the many media requests for copies of his decision made it inpractical to fax the five page document. Copies of the decision were also available at the courthouse.

An edited version of the search warrant will be released 21 days after the judge's decision, which is Monday, Dec. 8.

Fire department performed well

A videotape taken by retired volunteer fireman Tom Meggison helped clear the Charlevoix Fire Department of any wrongdoing in their response to the Whitney fire.

The restaurant was seriously damaged in a fire Sept. 4, that left only the basement and the deck intact.

Meggison arrived on the scene within five minutes of the radio call that said, "We have a structure fire." When Meggison started taping, there were charged water lines already putting water on the fire.

The city council received allegations that the department took too long putting water on the fire and used improper procedures.

"All allegations have been addressed by viewing the video tape and through the testimony of individual firefighters," said councilman Bernie DeVries in a prepared statement. "We came to an easy decision. The Charlevoix Fire Department personnel did an outstanding job."

Through the investigation, DeVries learned that the department hooked Engine 85 up to a pressurized hydrant, which was attached to an eight inch water main. One man can hook into a pressurized fire hydrant in about one minute. If the engine had been hooked to a dry hydrant on Round Lake, it would have taken two men about 10-15 minutes to hook up to the hydrant. The water source from the dry hydrant would have provided a five inch waterway. By using the pressurized hydrant, more water was available in less time.

"Our firefighters should be able to do their job without feeling like someone is looking over their shoulders," DeVries stated. "We think the community should be proud of our firefighters and emergency personnel who risk their lives to serve and protect us. We should thank them the next time we see them for a job well done."

Ron Heagy to appear on public TV

Over 600 people heard Ron Heagy's inspirational message Sunday when he spoke to several groups in Charlevoix.

"He talked to a packed house at the evening service," said Gary Stutzman, who organized Heagy's speaking engagements.

Heagy, a quadriplegic who has become a motivational speaker, made a special visit to Charlevoix before heading to Central Michigan University, where he will present his program, "Life is an Attitude."

Charlevoix resident Dean Davenport arranged for Heagy to speak in Charlevoix as well as at CMU.

While at the college, Heagy's program will be taped for public television (channel six). His program will air at 10 a.m. Nov. 19, 9 p.m. Nov. 21 and 1:30 p.m. Nov. 23.

Heagy and his wife, Christy, extended their thanks to the following organizations who helped them during their visit to Charlevoix: Edgewater Inn, Juilleret's, Charlevoix Ministerial Association, Kwikie Duplicating, Stafford's Weathervane, Char-Em ISD, and the many patrons who helped with the event.

Stutzman reported that Heagy most enjoyed talking to the wheelchair-bound students and young adults in the area, who were inspired by the quadriplegic's words.

Xi Epsilon Gamma donates to scanner

A check for $1000 was presented to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Rebecca Haney, cookbook sales chairperson and president of Xi Epsilon Gamma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

The contribution will be applied to the hospital's campaign for a computerized tomography (CT) scanner.

The cookbook, "A Taste of Charlevoix II," contains recipes by members of the community and artwork by Sue and Russ Bolt.

"We appreciate all the help they have given us over the years, and especially their contributions toward this campaign," campaign chairman Richard Krueger said.

The campaign is for a total of $500,000 to buy a CT scanner, which is a radiological tool used to view soft tissue as well as bone, to diagnose disease and injury to all areas of the body. Over $250,000 has now been raised toward the goal.

There are a few cookbooks left in some Charlevoix stores and in the Charlevoix Area Hospital Gift Shop. Xi Epsilon Gamma is planning a new edition of the cookbook in 1998.

Emerald Isle is on her way home

By Laurie Lounsbury

In spite of rugged weather and a little fine tuning along the way, the Emerald Isle is expected to make its destination — Beaver Island — on schedule. The new ferry boat should arrive in the port of St. James Saturday, Nov. 22. After a champagne toast and tours of the new ship, the Emerald Isle will then make her way to Charlevoix for a similar homecoming celebration.

Island resident Richard Gillespie has been tracking the progress of the Emerald Isle and sharing it with the world over the Internet.

The ship left Rockland, Maine, Monday, Nov. 10. The seven people aboard the Emerald Isle found themselves detained by a little housekeeping before they left.

While they were waiting for supplies, the shipyard decided to sand blast a nearby tugboat that was in for service. Over spray covered the ferry with sand.

"They spent a considerable amount of time cleaning it up," Gillespie said.

The crew sailed in three shifts, running the ship through the night and into the next morning.

On Tuesday, Nov. 11, the Emerald Isle sailed behind Prince Edward Island to avoid heavy winds and sea. Even running in the lee of Prince Edward Island, the crew encountered seas up to 10 feet.

Because the ship had never been run in rough seas, the crew had some trouble with fuel filters and had to change them several times. They also had to clean the water lines, which were picking up particulate matter from the construction of the water system.

"All this is good to work the bugs out of the ship," Gillespie said.

The weather grew more challenging by the time the ship reached Cape Gaspe at 6:30 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 13. Captain Kevin McDonough reported seas up to 12 feet and winds gusting up to 58 mph.

McDonough had to relinquish the controls of the ship when they entered Canadian waters at the 66th parallel, about 90 miles west of Rimouski. According to Gillespie, a Canadian pilot is required for a ship sailing in Canadian waters. Most of the St. Lawrence Seaway is in Canada.

Just before reaching Montreal, the ship was sailing on the St. Lawrence River with the incoming tide, clipping along at 18.3 knots.

By 10 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16, the Emerald Isle locked through Montreal and was working her way to Lake Ontario. While in Montreal, part time island residents Bob and Alana Anderson, who own the Isle Haven tourist court and live in Montreal, greeted the new ship and crew.

At 3 a.m. the Andersons brought requested supplies to the ship, along with a few extras. They delivered a truffle cake with a shamrock and "Bon voyage" frosted on top. When asked how much they owed for supplies, the crew was pleasantly surprised to learn it was on the house.

The Andersons said they could consider it their way of taking them out to dinner, but they had to cook it themselves.

Gale force winds forced the Emerald Isle to stop at Cape Vincent, just after having reached Lake Ontario. But the sight and smell of the Great Lakes urged the group onward. They planned to leave Cape Vincent mid-afternoon on Monday, Nov. 17.

After stopping in Windsor, Canada, for fuel and supplies, the Emerald Isle will be aiming for Mackinaw City.

The ship should arrive in Mackinaw City no later than Friday.

Cooking a turkey the old-fashioned way

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

By Edith Gilbert

Some people think Thanksgiving is the most pleasurable holiday of the year — a low key holiday with good food, close family, a short prayer and a dash of football. Let's not forget, however, that the skilled cook, who prepares the feast, deserves the same cheers and admiration when the gravy is passed as the ball player when he crosses the goal line. Preparing a Thanksgiving dinner is a loving project that deserves everyone's complete attention and appreciation. This is when fond new memories are created as well as old ones refreshed.

But in many homes, long before we sit down to dinner, phones start ringing and unexpected long distance calls are made from all over the country; "Mother, how long do I cook a turkey? How do you make stuffing? What do you put in gravy?"

Cheer up and I will share with you my mother's tried and true recipe! Over the years, she taught all her children and many friends the following delicious way to prepare a really juicy turkey — a method she learned firsthand from a Hungarian countess long ago.

The trick is to put the dressing under the skin of the breast instead of in the cavity. You see, the tender breast meat is usually done before the tougher legs, so when you stuff the turkey under the skin it helps to correct this imbalance.

Try to order a fresh turkey, but if this is not available, allow two hours per pound for defrosting the bird in the refrigerator and one hour per pound at room temperature. Figure one pound per person.

Allow 25 minutes a pound roasting time for a stuffed bird weighing 12 lbs., or a total of five hours. Preheat the oven to 450 degrees. Remove giblets, etc., wrapped in paper inside the turkey. Place the turkey on a rack in an uncovered pan, breast side up, and immediately reduce the oven heat to 325 degrees. For a turkey over 18 pounds, allow 20 minutes per pound and reduce the oven to 300 degrees.

Stuffing may be prepared ahead and should be handled lightly. A basic stuffing (allow one-half cup per pound) consists of a mixture of any kind of day-old bread, or herb-seasoned croutons, chopped celery, chopped onions, seasoned with salt and paprika. Add three-quarters cup or one cup of melted butter. One may add chopped or sliced apples, nuts or mushrooms.

Always wait to stuff the bird until just before roasting! When ready to stuff the turkey, take a spoon or use your index finger and loosen the skin, starting from the tail. (You will meet with a little resistance just at first). Then gradually work your hand to the neck and across the top of the drumstick. Now, take a handful of stuffing at a time and spread under the loosened skin until it is evenly distributed. Remember the dressing will expand some. The loose skin of the neck may also be stuffed. If there is any stuffing left, place it in the cavity of the turkey.

Close both openings with small skewers or sew skin together with a darning needle threaded with white string. Tie a heavy knot on the end of a long piece of string and wrap it, criss-crossed, around the turkey, taking care to tie the wings and drum sticks close to the body for appearances. Secure the end of the string with a knot on top.

Rub the turkey with a paste made with one-quarter pound butter, two tablespoons of honey and three tablespoons of paprika. We do not recommend using foil when roasting because foil traps the steam and gives the bird a stewed taste. Baste the turkey every 20 minutes or so with pan drippings. To avoid basting, cover with a muslin cloth soaked in butter after the turkey has been in the oven for half-an-hour. Remove cloth half-an-hour before serving so turkey may brown.

The pan gravy must be made in the roasting pan and not in a skillet! Remove turkey from the pan and keep the bird warm on a platter in the oven with the oven turned off. Pour off all but two tablespoons of drippings and place pan with brown bits on two burners on top of the stove over a low flame. Add one tablespoon flour and stir with a wooden spoon until thickened. Add either a 10 and-a-half ounce can of chicken consomme or one cup of turkey stock. (Turkey stock is made from two quarts of cold water, turkey giblets, wing tips, neck bone, one sliced onion, two stalks of celery with tops and several sprigs of parsley. Bring to boil and let simmer for two hours, then strain.) Finally add salt, pepper and stir into a smooth paste over low flame for five minutes. Pour into gravy boat and serve. Happy Thanksgiving!

Letters to the editor

Editor:

Laurie Lounsbury's account of the Nov. 3 city council meeting at which Mayor Josh Barnes said that he is under a "gag order" regarding the Venetian fireworks explosion is incomplete. ("Mayor Josh Barnes under gag order" — Nov. 5).

The Mayor should be required to explain how the chief of police or the state police can deny him, as the chief magistrate of the municipality, the right to inform his community of what he knows of a terrible accident. Where does the authority to gag a mayor come from?

While it may be in the best interests of the police authorities, who have the responsibility for maintaining public safety, to keep such matters secret, it is certainly contrary to the public interest to do so.

It is inconceivable that, four months after this tragedy, the community still knows almost nothing of the events of that evening.

Yours truly,

Judge Avern Cohn
Detroit

Community foundations benefit all

Over 500 community foundations flourish throughout the United States — more than 50 of them right here in Michigan. But most community foundations are in big cities and densely populated areas. So when local citizens suggested establishing the charitable organizations to serve Emmet and Charlevoix counties back in 1992, there were more than a few skeptics.

"Folks wondered if we could gather sufficient funds to have any significant effect on our communities," said Jack Clark, a Petoskey attorney who helped found his area's community foundation. "But we knew that people in this part of northern Michigan care deeply about the place they call home — and that they would want to invest in making it even better."

As it turned out, Clark and other founders were right.

Today, the Petoskey/Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation are vibrant, growing organizations that are already helping many initiatives and worthy programs. This week, both groups are celebrating National Community Foundation Week.

Together, the two community foundations now hold assets of more than $10 million — a mighty sum indeed when one considers that the combined year-round population of the two counties is barely 50,000. In less than five years of grant making, the foundations have distributed well over $1 million to support a variety of educational, environmental, cultural, economic development, and human service programs.

"It's exciting to see what can happen when so many people join together for the common good," said Mike Stowe, a founding trustee of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation who now serves as the group's president. In Stowe's hometown, Boyne City, the community foundation recently helped fund an ice hockey rink and a new, outdoor recreation complex.

Other programs and projects that have enjoyed community foundation support in the past few years run the gamut from critically needed services to recreational and en-

Dean retires from Coast Guard

On Friday, Oct. 24, following more than 20 years of distinguished military service in the United States Coast Guard and United States Army, Chief Machinery Technician Steven B. Dean was formally recognized by his shipmates, family and friends during a retirement ceremony at the Charlevoix City Dock facilities.

During the ceremony, Dean was presented the Coast Guard Achievement Medal for superior performance of duty aboard Coast Guard Cutter Acacia. Since July of 1994, Dean has overseen the maintenance and operation of Acacia's main propulsion plant, maintaining a remarkable record of engineering readiness.

In his more than 3 years on board Acacia, Dean contributed immeasurably to engineering and operational successes. These successes include Acacia's 1994 deployment to the Caribbean in support of Operation Uphold Democracy; six arduous seasonal buoy runs, including the grueling 1995/96 winter ice breaking season, and numerous major maintenance availabilities; including two dry dockings.

A tremendous source of technical knowledge and experience, Dean was a fine shipmate and will be sorely missed by Acacia's crew. In addition to his technical merits, Dean was a key proponent in community-related events such as the annual charity fun run and ghost ship.

No stranger to Charlevoix and the region, Dean served tours of duty at several Great Lakes Coast Guard units. These previous assignments included Engineering Petty Officer assignments at stations Port Huron (1978-82), stations Plum and Washington Islands (1989-91), as well as engineering division duty aboard cutter Mesquite in Charlevoix from 1982-85. His duty assignments outside of the Great Lakes include shipboard duty aboard cutter Yocona in Kodiak, Alaska and station duty in Chatham, Massachusetts.

Dean, with his wife, Janet, and their two teenage children, Jennifer and Nathan, plan to retire in Charlevoix. The officers, crew and their families of Acacia wish Dean and his family "Fair Winds and Following Seas" as they set course for a new chapter in their lives.

Pool open Thanksgiving day

The Charlevoix Community Pool will be open from 4-8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 27 as a special "thank you" from Friends of the Pool on Thanksgiving Day. There will be door prizes and free popcorn for children.

Those purchasing an inscribed brick or a minimum 20 punch swim pass will be eligible for a drawing for a free, three month family pass and other prizes.

"The popularity of families swimming together gave us the idea it would be nice to offer this family recreational swim on this holiday," explained CFOP president Steve Hansen.

Hansen added that the pool board is also considering Sunday afternoon swims. New swim programs and times will be announced prior to Dec. 21, when the current schedule ends.

A record number of pool visitors was established Saturday, Nov. 15, when 123 people signed in — mostly mothers and fathers with their children and children's friends.

The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundations have enjoyed the support of many local citizens as well as those families who vacation here regularly. The Frey Foundation and W. K. Kellogg Foundation have supplied matching grants to spur development of both community foundations, and the Malpass Foundation has given the Charlevoix County Foundation a boost too.

As the year winds down, both community foundations are preparing to distribute another round of grants, bringing the total grant dollars for this year to more than $200,000 for each organization.

New minister joins church

St. Mary's offers healing services

Starting for three consecutive nights at 7 p.m. Nov. 30, Dec. 1 and 2, St. Mary's Parish in Charlevoix will have the pleasure of having Brian and Kathryn Christian join them for evenings of prayer, healing and sharing the Word of God. These three evenings will be a time for deep spiritual renewal. The Christians are the founders of "On Earth as in Heaven" ministries. They travel to parishes throughout northern Michigan offering their message of Christ's healing love for all of us.

Brian started his ministry in some very different places. He has ministered in Alaska, in the Grand Canyon and in the caves in Utah. He began his ministry many years ago by conducting "God in the Wilderness" seminars and retreats in the northwest United States and in Canada. He has now turned to sharing his stories in churches, with a theme of total abandonment to God. Brian's wife, Kathryn, provides musical accompaniment during the "Christ the Healer" healing services.

All services will conclude with a laying on of hands for those who request this. The services will last for approximately one hour and will be in the church. There is a different topic for each evening. The topic for the first night is "Touch the Healer;" the topic for the second night is "In the Image of God;" and the topic for the third night is "Lazarus Come Forth." Brian and Kathryn's teaching and healing ministry centers on prayer, faith, praise, forgiveness, conversion and letting go of the past and letting God take control of our lives.

St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix is located on Bridge Street. Everyone is invited to come share in this wonderful ministry. For more information, call Patty Furtaw, pastoral and youth minister, at 547-6438 or 547-2242.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

The phone rang late in the morning with a last minute call from the elementary school. They needed some help in the computer lab for a few hours. Would I come? Those are generally magic words for me. When someone asks for help in most anything, if there is a way, I'll be there.

It was only the third time this particular group of first graders had even been in the lab. I was to introduce them to a matching game similar to what some of you might remember as the old television show "Concentration." They clicked on a square to reveal a number and then had to click on a different square in search of its match. I thought it was kind of fun but one little girl was quickly in tears.

"I can't do this," she said as her sobs got deeper. I assured her that she could and knelt by her side as I talked her through the game a step at a time. I helped her get her first match. What fun! We got a second match. She was grinning. Now you try the rest, I told her, and went back to the other kids.

It wasn't long before there was a tug on my hand. "Come look, I got them all!" I reached down and hugged her and told her how very proud I was of her. If you could have seen the grin that broke out across her face when I said those words, well, I think I know why Mrs. Mellon (her teacher) and her colleagues teach first grade! It was worth everything.

Just because we become big and tall people when we grow up, that doesn't mean there still aren't things that challenge us, things that maybe we don't think we can do. In fact, the things that can pop up in our lives as grown ups have been known on occasion to reduce us to tears as well. Maybe we men folk may not admit it on the outside, but there are moments that the little kid can be quite alive and well on the inside and find us disconcerted too.

God has always been by the side of every worried or troubled soul waiting to help. He's had His ears sharply in tune, listening for that priceless cry for assistance that will bring Him literally running to our side. You'll be amazed at the patience He'll display in helping you figure out whatever it is that has stumped you. You'll find yourself wondering why some of the things that have stumped you slowed you down like they did as he gently explains how life works. He'll even go so far as to begin to show you a solution and then He'll step back and smile as He watches you put the pieces of the puzzle in place.

The key, though, is when you make it and things finally come together. When you realize God has helped you with a trying time, do you go to Him and say thanks? Do you let Him know that you appreciate how He stood by you in the dark night of your soul and saw you safely through? No one loves to celebrate His children's successes more than our heavenly Father. No one enjoys seeing us conquer the obstacles that life can place before us more than Him. And believe it or not, you'll feel the grin on His face. You'll sense the pride in His heart. For, just like you and I will do almost anything for the children in our lives, He will do almost anything too.

Landfill expansion almost a sure thing

By Jamie MacMillan

On the verge of appointing a solid waste committee to consider Waste Management's request for a landfill expansion, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners instead lobbed the ball into the county planner's court.

The board's decision last Wednesday basically boils the expansion request down to a matter of zoning. If the expansion request meets all the setbacks and other criteria, then planners will approve the expansion.

County planner Larry Sullivan said the decision to have planners review the request ensures Cedar Ridge's expansion. He told the board he is "99.9 percent" sure that Waste Management's plan will meet criteria.

"It's a black and white decision," he said. "Two plus two equals four, or it does not equal four."

Phil Johnson and Joan Blanchard cast the no votes against letting the planning department make the decision.

"I was under the impression that we were going to let the solid waste committee handle this," Johnson said afterward.

Shirley Roloff, who motioned that planners handle this case, had reservations that a solid waste committee could tackle the expansion issue in a timely manner.

The last time a committee had been formed to update the county's waste plan, it took five years to hash out a final document, due to committee disagreements and state approval. Expansion of the landfill wasn't even an issue at that point. With Cedar Ridge's claim of having just three years of capacity left, to force them to wait on such a long process wouldn't be right, Roloff said.

"We've already wasted a year of these people's time," Roloff said. "To me, it's a planning commission decision — if we wanted a solid waste committee to to do this, we should have appointed that committee a year or two ago."

Roloff said she received over 300 letters in support of expansion. In a phone interview, Roloff said that people had been dragging their feet in order to deny expansion.

Waste Management submitted their expansion request to county planners last spring, but it was not reviewed by that body. Planners maintained that more than 66 months of landfill capacity was still available to the county at Cedar Ridge and other northern Michigan landfills. Because of that, only a solid waste committee could grant an expansion.

Waste Management's plan is to expand 12 acres to the west, adjacent to their 40 acre landfill, located in Eveline Township.

Don Pizzurro, facility manager, said the expansion would not encroach on a grave site discovered on the property. An additional eight years of capacity would be added with such an expansion.

As long as they meet setback criteria, the landfill can expand beyond the 12 acres. Waste Management owns 120 acres on that site and Pizzurro estimated that 40 acres could be used for expansion. He did say that at this point they will not change their plan to increase acreage.

Last month, Pizzurro presented the county board with a host community proposal which, in addition to offering increased recycling services, would enable the county to share profits with Cedar Ridge. For a 12-acre expansion, Waste Management offered 25 cents for every inch of waste brought for other counties as well as portions of recycling and hazardous waste fees. It was projected the county could receive $165,000 per year, or $1.32 million total during the extended lifetime.

minister at the Reformed Church.

Hofstra can be described in many ways.

He's a family man. He and Kimberly, his wife of four years, have two young children, Alisha, 3, and Pieter, 1. The foursome's life has become a bit of a whirlwind trying to find a place to live while adjusting to life in a new town.

"That's a constant job trying to break into a new community," he said. "Learning people's names is always on my mind."

As a family they enjoy camping and horseback riding, but Hofstra said life has been so hectic they have not had a chance to experience the outdoors of northern Michigan. They arrived in town in the summer.

Hofstra, 30, grew-up in Grand Rapids, attending high school at Grand Rapids Christian. He attended Calvin College, graduating in 1991 with a degree in psychology. While in college, he worked at the Pine Ridge Christian Hospital, helping in-patient youths with their problems.

Hofstra said he was never sure ministry was his calling as he progressed with his education. As he bounced from being a math major to an engineering major he learned those fields were too cut and dry, lacking personal relationships. Because of that he saw that ministry was his niche.

"I've always enjoyed talking to people about faith and faith issues," he said. "I enjoy preaching, and pulling together a sermon is a difficult, difficult thing to do, but I love that journey."

At the church, one of his focuses will be working closely with youth groups and mentoring programs. He's excited about working with the area's youth as he said they are not just the "church of the future but the church of today."

Hofstra entered the rotation of authors for the Courier's Beacons of Blessings last week with a biblical take on athletics.

Downtown development group considers projects

By Laurie Lounsbury

With more than $1 million in proposed projects and about $125,000 to spend, the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) is going to have to pick and choose their projects carefully.

Four projects top their list of priorities:

— Reconstruction of State Street, with new lighting in the valley. The total projected cost is $420,896.

— Improvements to the two downtown alleys that run behind Bridge Street between Clinton Street and Park Avenue and west from Bridge Street to State Street. Improvements would include brick paving and the installation of lights. The total projected cost is $188,666.

— Improvements to Veteran's Park, which would include removal of some trees and trimming of others, seven new flag poles, brick paving and a walking path, lighting, a drinking fountain, benches and an irrigation system. Total projected cost is $134,993.

— Improvements to East Park, which include new sidewalks, irrigation, benches, new lights and possible new work on the shuffleboard courts. Projected cost is $285,562.

At their meeting last Wednesday, DDA members discussed the priorities and costs of the projects.

Member Jeff Porter would like to see the DDA tackle improvements to State Street first.

"I think we'd get the most bang for our buck if we did State Street," Porter said. "I think parks are important and everything, but I think we have a responsibility to the business people in that area. We've spent millions on the lakefront. It's time to move inland."

The State Street project, which involves infrastructure work, isn't on the top of city manager Mike Wiesner's list.

"We've got the state highway department doing a study for us that may completely change that road," Wiesner said.

The state is studying the possibility of making State Street a one-way, southbound street, with Bridge Street becoming one-way northbound. If the streets were changed to a one-way pair, then the state would take over responsibility for State Street.

Mayor Josh Barnes had no desire to sit around and wait for a completed study from the state.

"I'm of the opinion that study will never, ever, be completed," Barnes said. "I sure hope we don't have a road that's about to collapse on us before we get the report."

The general consensus of the group was to consider installing lights along State Street and wait to do reconstruction. The lighting of State Street between Park Avenue and Hurlbut was estimated at $99,000.

Also competing for DDA dollars are improvements to East Park.

"It's the most used park in the city," Wiesner said. "I think we should do something about it. We've got a potential liability with some of those steps in East Park."

The projected prices on each project staggered all of the DDA members.

"These are apparently $1 million off," Barnes said. "They're not even close."

Wiesner asked the board to narrow the field to two projects so he could come up with more accurate cost estimates. Barnes responded by saying it was impossible to consider one or two projects when the cost estimates were so far off base.

"I think we'll take educated guesses from you," Barnes said. "Surely with your experience, we could get an estimate for what a street light costs."

Improvements to Veteran's Park sparked discussion about the intent of the park. While the improvement plan calls for a bricked walkway, water fountain, flagpoles and benches, Barnes questioned the necessity of all the improvements.

"Why do you think there should be more usage there? It's a memorial park. It needs some dignity."

The little-used park has long been under consideration for improvements.

Bernie Ward, an owner of Ward Brothers marine next door to the park, would like to see at least a few changes in the park. Ward suggested removing a few trees on the Bridge Street side of the park.

"The whole park has got a lot of extra foliage, I think," Ward said. "It's so dark you can't even grow grass there anymore."

While the major improvements to the park are still under consideration, the board did authorize the city to remove a few trees.

The DDA also discussed the future of the downtown post office building. While there are no firm plans for the building, board members discussed the possibility of a privately operated post office substation in the location.

No projects will be selected until the DDA reviews their budget.

Big Rock Point makes donations of cash and equipment to community

CHARLEVOIX

Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop Six will transport camping equipment to their Camporees with this donated trailer from Big Rock. The trailer was among the equipment and cash donations made to the community by Big Rock Point.

Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point nuclear plant recently made financial contributions totaling $2,650 and a donation of 12 personal computers and a utility trailer to improve educational and recreational opportunities.

The computers were donated to the Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency's Early Head Start program. The computers will be used by Early Head Start personnel to assist low income residents develop job, lifestyle and education skills.

The utility trailer was donated to the Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop Six and will be used to transport camping equipment to "Camporees."

The following organizations received financial support from Big Rock Point:

— Camp Daggett was awarded $1,000 to support construction of a new climbing tower and a high and low ropes course. The new facilities are used to build children's self-esteem, independence and social skills through cooperative group sessions on the equipment.

— The B.A.S.E.S. Teen Center in Charlevoix received $500. The center provides a drug- and alcohol-free recreation center for local youth. The grant will be used to support general operations.

— Junior Achievement of Northwest Michigan received a grant of $500. The donation will be used to sponsor Junior Achievement classes in the Charlevoix Middle School. Junior Achievement provides economic and business education classes to students in grades K-12.

— The Top of Michigan Trails Council received $300. The council's mission is to provide multi-use recreational trails in Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties. The grant will be used to further the council's mission.

— The Pellston Regional Airport received a grant of $250. The contribution will be used to enhance airport marketing efforts and improve other services at the airport.

City tree lighting celebration planned

The City of Charlevoix, in cooperation with the chamber of commerce, will host its annual Christmas Tree Lighting Celebration in East Park at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 28. Children and adults are invited to participate in the celebration. Enjoy seeing Santa Claus and singing Christmas carols.

Children are encouraged to make their own weatherproof ornament and place it on the city Christmas Tree from 2-5:30 p.m. The city will provide a "cherry picker" bucket truck and will place ornaments on branches that are out of the children's reach. There will be free photos with Santa provided by Charlevoix Camera at the Weathervane Restaurant after the tree lighting.

At 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, Santa will arrive by the city fire truck in East Park. Children are also invited to Charlevoix Cinema III for a free full length holiday film feature beginning at 2 p.m. sponsored by Citizens Bank. While children enjoy the movie, parents will be able to participate in the Merchants Open House, scheduled for the entire day.

The 21st Great American Smokeout Thursday

The Emmet-Charlevoix-Antrim Tobacco Reduction Coalition is asking restaurants to be smoke-free for the Great American Smokeout, on Nov. 20. People who quit smoking on the day of the Great American Smokeout will be encouraged to eat at a smoke-free restaurant that day. Advertising for the restaurants who agree to be smoke-free for the day will be provided by the coalition.

This will mark the 21st time the American Cancer Society will hold its annual Great American Smokeout. The Smokeout is the nation's largest single smoking cessation event. The American Cancer Society recommends that smokers begin preparing now to quit on Nov. 20 by calling 1-800-ACS-2345 for information.

While overall cigarette smoking has declined in recent decades, as of 1992, roughly 48 million American still smoked. Of these, 25 million were men and 23 million were women. Data collected from the American Cancer Society's Cancer Prevention Study II determined that smokers lose an average of 15 years of life.

For more information on the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout, call 1-800-ACS-2345. Any restaurant owner wishing to participate in the activities should contact Mary Ann Cox at Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, 547-6523.

JV girls finish season with win

By Jamie MacMillan

In one of the more exciting games played during the girls' basketball season at any level, the Rayder JV squad used a 9-2 run in overtime to whip the reserves from Harbor Springs, 67-60.

The contest was a roller coaster, with the Rayders spotting the Rams the game's first nine points and finding themselves behind 21-9 during the first quarter.

Charlevoix was able to chip the lead to seven by the break, then stormed to an 18-7 run in the third quarter to take the lead. The Rams' showed off their own comeback skills, shaking off a six point deficit with two minutes remaining to force overtime on two free throws in the game's final seconds.

After spotting Harbor the first two in the extra period, the Rayders scored the game's final nine points. Leslie Hoffman swished in four points, Karianne Miller and Lindsey Carland each hit a bucket, and Sarah Parrish hit a key free throw to lead Charlevoix to their second win of the year against Harbor Springs.

"We decided it was the last game of the season and we were going to go down fighting," coach Leanna Mosoryak said of the game. "The kids really came together at the end."

Megan Vogel was the game's star, pouring in 22 points, but fouled out just as overtime began, leaving her teammates to secure the win. Miller had 13 points, Taya Drost scored 10, and Tessa Moore gave the Rayders eight points.

The heart-stopping win in the season finale felt like a load of good karma. While finishing 9-11, the Rayders fell victim throughout the year to bad luck. Losing to non-conference foe Brimley twice in overtime and to three league rivals in the game's last possession, the team's theme song might have been "Heartbreaker."

The team did bag their fair share of foes. They bested league foes East Jordan, Traverse City, Kalkaska and Boyne City on their way to a 6-6 record in the Lake Michigan Division. Drost and Kristy Shindorf, sophomores on the JV squad for a second year, were the team leaders. Shindorf played inside and, according to coach Mosoryak, had good defensive instincts while Drost created match-up problems with her speed. Shindorf, though, missed the season's last round of games with a foot injury.

Vogel, Miller and Hoffman were brought up from the freshmen class and each led the squad in scoring in at least one game this year.

Erika Kammermann, Laurel English, Shauna Barrett and Sonya Mendelevich rounded out the roster and played well. With varsity coach Tim Volovsek set to lose seven seniors off his 1997 roster, many from this group will be counted on to be next year's varsity nucleus.

"A good sign is that they're willing to challenge themselves," Mosoryak noted. "If they're struggling with their offense they decide to go out and get "X" amount of rebounds."

Planners will have last word on landfill

Pizzurro admitted that it was a bargaining chip to sway the county board. While it's a chip he won't need to cash, he said he's still interested in entering a host community agreement with the county.

"It would help our long term planning to have more than eight years of life," Pizzurro said.

County planners have 60 days to review Cedar Ridge's proposal. Sullivan said he wasn't sure if the issue would appear on the planning department's next agenda. Their next meeting is 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 4 in the county commissioners' room.

Winners move on to semifinals against Mancelona

By Jamie MacMillan

Amanda Eaton scored eight of her game high 14 points as Charlevoix broke open a rugged district opener with East Jordan to win 42-32.

The win advances the Rayders to a semifinal game against Mancelona. The loss ends East Jordan's season — it's the second straight year the tournament's host has fallen in a first round game at the hands of Charlevoix.

Last year that fate befell Boyne City.

Aside from Eaton's heroics, though, the contest was far from a classic as turnovers, missed shots, and an old fashioned hump and grind style dotted play.

"East Jordan didn't play all that well, worse than we did," Rayder coach Tim Volovsek dryly noted of the outcome.

After one period the score was even 9-9.

Rayder guard Christine Sweeney had the half's hot hand, scoring six points on three second-quarter jump shots. Charlevoix held a slim 19-18 lead going into the intermission.

The lack of scoring did not overshadow the grittiness of the game. Defense was tight, passes intercepted and deflected, and loose balls were wrestled for with the urgency that comes with a single elimination tournament.

After three quarters, Charlevoix led 25-22.

In the final quarter, the Rayders finally were able to parlay their defensive aggressiveness into points. Angie Potter, Jamie Gowell and Anne Terryberry had consecutive steals, shaking Eaton loose and turning the game.

Eaton, whose baskets highlighted a 16-6 run that put the game away, did her damage in the open floor on attacking drives to the goal. When the Red Devils finally caught up to her, she calmly dished the ball off to Gowell for an easy lay-up and Terryberry for a short baseline jumper.

"She's a tough player," Volovsek said of the senior. "She is so strong and really knows how to play the game well."

After Eaton's 14 points, Terryberry scored eight, and Sweeney and Julie Gregory each had six. Gowell had 11 rebounds, while Eaton had five rebounds and five assists.

The Red Devils had their own accuracy problems. They converted just 10 of 22 free throw attempts. Had they bagged more of those free shots, they might have been able to withstand the Rayders final charge.

The Rayders will square off with Mancelona at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 19 in the district's second semifinal game. Boyne City will play Harbor Springs at 6 p.m. The winners will vie for the district title 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 21. All games are being held at East Jordan High School.

Prosecutor has fireworks report

anyone else.

"Reports are continuously generated, but we don't release them — there's no point in it," Dykehouse said.

But an original incident report was released by the state police to attorney Daniel O'Neil of Traverse City on Aug. 28. O'Neil was retained by Diane and Charles Cradduck of Traverse City, who were injured in the explosion. On Sept. 24, O'Neil sent a letter and a copy of the incident report to city manager Mike Wiesner.

The original incident report was written by state police trooper Jeff Seaberg, who was assigned to a foot patrol with trooper Jeff Ruthig in Charlevoix on July 26, the night of the fireworks explosion.

Dykehouse later acknowledged that original incident reports were sent out in response to Freedom of Information (FOI) requests.

"They do send a few pages out, but that's just to show there was a report taken and a complaint number assigned," Dykehouse said.

Freedom of Information requests are handled by Ron Sutberry at the central records division of the Michigan State Police in Lansing. Sutberry, in turn, asked the Petoskey post of the state police to release the original, four page report.

"That's just four pages out of hundreds that we sent for FOI requests," Dykehouse said. "We have to respond with something."

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur received the completed, 1,000 page investigation report last Friday afternoon. By Thursday, Nov. 20, she expects to receive requests for charges from the police.

"The report won't be made public until there's a decision on charges," Kur said.

Dykehouse said it's unlikely that charges will be prepared by Thursday. They're still waiting for a chemical lab report from Lansing, which should be completed by Thursday.

According to Barnes, anyone planning to sue the city is required by Michigan law to notify the city of their intent within 120 days of the incident.

O'Neil is reportedly the only attorney to notify the city to date.

History of an old Republican

From the archives

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

With the November election activity subsiding, I thought it would he interesting to learn more about past political officials in Charlevoix, especially the one that became Charlevoix's first and last state senator and lieutenant governor.

Born Nov. 21, 1838 in Manchester, England, Archibald Buttars and his parents immigrated to America and settled in Cincinnati, Ohio in 1850. Two years later they relocated to Huron County, Mich., where his father became involved with the fledgling lumber industry. After being educated in the common schools of rural Michigan, Buttars left for northern Michigan in 1856. There, he matured and found success as a woodcutter, land-looker and eventually the mercantile business in such places as Antrim County, Northport, Traverse City, and eventually landing in Charlevoix in 1864. A year later, Buttars married Celia Moses and the couple settled into small town life.

In Charlevoix, Buttars opened a general store with Hiram Rose and Amos Fox, two of Charlevoix's earliest pioneers and business persons. Together the partners supplied general merchandise to area citizens and 10,000 cords of wood annually to steam-powered lake vessels in southern cities such as Chicago. In 1881, the partnership dissolved and Buttars and Rose quickly established a general store in neighboring Petoskey and ran it successfully until 1884. During that time, Celia died in 1875, leaving one 10-year-old daughter, Essie (Esther) B., who eventually became Mrs. Edwin F. Parmalee.

While a citizen of Charlevoix, Buttars served in such political capacities as city treasurer, president and board of education member. While always a staunch Republican, as historically Charlevoix has been, Buttars did not enter state politics until the hotly contested victory for state senate in 1881 over George Parmalee, a Democrat and Greenback. Winning the seat, Buttars remained there until 1884. During the 1883 session, he was elected president pro-tempore of the senate. Graduating to higher elected office, Buttars served as elected lieutenant governor from 1885-1886, under Governor Russel A. Alger, until he voluntarily retired to private life in 1886.

Being that a senate seat in those days was a part-time position, Buttars continued to conduct business in Charlevoix when the state senate was not in session. He had a brick building erected in 1882 and rented it to George Miller, clothier. Out of the upstairs portion of the building he ran a real estate, loans and insurance business. He was also one of the founders and president of the Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, established in 1883, which was eventually renamed the Charlevoix Savings Bank in 1885. There he became its cashier in 1892 and remained so until the bank merged into the Charlevoix County Bank about 1898. After the merger, he retained his previously held position until retirement. All the while, he was a strong Mason and member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He married a second wife, Emma C. Blinn, in 1895.

It is unclear what happened to Buttars after the turn of the century, but his legacy of strong civic service and business savvy continues in Charlevoix's political and business culture.

If you would like to learn more about Charlevoix's past political personalities or other interesting Charlevoix history, call 547-0373 to make an appointment for use of the historical materials at the Harsha House Museum.

Christmas card sales to benefit hospital

Artist Deneille Spohn Moes, of Boyne City, has designed two Christmas cards for Charlevoix Area Hospital; one depicting angels and another of a Dickens' scene. The cards are a way for donors to show they support the hospital when they send their holiday wishes.

The cards are available with or without inside greeting and cost $7.50 for 10 cards. Proceeds will go toward the hospital's CT scanner campaign. They can be bought through the hospital fund development office, 547-4024, or at the Boyne Rehab Center, 197 State St., Boyne City. They will also be on sale at the Hospital's annual Holly Daze event, Nov. 28 -29 at the hospital.

Invisible thief

Closed head injuries steal the memories of two Charlevoix people

By Laurie Lounsbury

By outward appearances, Carney Russell looks like the same jovial jokester he's always been. His eyes twinkle when he affectionately teases the customers at his gym, Biceps, and his laugh reverberates off the barbells and bare walls.

But what's happening inside his head isn't funny at all.

Carney can't remember people's names.

He can't remember phone numbers.

He feels like he's hovering somewhere outside of himself, watching life whirling around him without really being in it.

Carney suffered from a closed head injury last January that stole something precious to him — It stole his reality.

Twenty-three years have passed since Susan LeButt Dobson experienced a closed head injury. Her altered reality from the head injury has become her only reality.

The two Charlevoix business people suffered different types of head injuries at different times in their lives, but the results are hauntingly similar.

"I felt emotionally numb," Carney said. "I have a wonderful family and everything else, but I didn't feel good about any of it."

Susan's words were almost identical.

"I had emotional numbness," Susan said. "I woke up one day and felt like it was someone else's kid and husband I was looking at."

Susan's emotional numbness from the two car accidents that injured her head may have cost her a husband.

"It essentially ruined my marriage because my husband didn't feel loved," Susan said. "He didn't feel loved because I didn't know how to love him."

Learning to love again came too late for Susan's husband — they divorced — but not her children. "I got over the emotional numbness because I learned to love those people again," Susan said.

After 23 years, Susan is learning to make the best of her injury. She tells her customers at her hat and gift shop, Michelle's, not to be offended if she forgets their names.

Young drivers are going to pay the price

School will charge for drivers' training

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix Board of Education approved continuation of their drivers' education program, but the approval comes with a new price tag. Students will be charged $200 to participate.

The move was the second shoe dropping on state legislation (Public Act 387), changing the scope of drivers' education programs. Last spring, the program's curriculum changes were phased in. Before, the only requirement was 30 hours of classroom time, some time behind the wheel and a written test. Now the program is stretched out over a year, requiring more road training and a road test before any license can be granted.

The first part of the class requires 24 hours of classroom time and six hours of behind the wheel training. After completion, the student receives a learner's permit, and with that must drive at least 50 hours with a parent or guardian over a six month period. Ten of those 50 hours must be at night.

When that is completed, the student must go through six more hours of classroom instruction before taking a road test to get their real license.

Next spring, the funding of the program will shift, with schools allowed to charge students a fee. In the past, funding had been the school's responsibility, with some state funds covering costs.

The state has announced it will continue to provide schools a $60 stipend for every student enrolled in the program. The $60 must be matched by the school, but any remaining costs will be rolled over to the student.

At Charlevoix, the projected cost is $320 per student to complete the drivers' education program. After the state stipend and matching school funds, it leaves $200 to be picked up by students. Costs include instructor pay, car rental, classroom materials, gas and insurance.

If charging students left a bad taste in the mouth of school officials, so did eliminating

She explains the nature of her closed head injury.

"If I tell people, they don't mind. People are so nice and they understand," Susan said.

For Carney, the adjustment period is just beginning.

Carney was hoisting a heavy water heater into place last January when he slipped on the concrete floor and landed on his head with the water heater on top of him.

"People asked me if I was OK and I had no concept of how to answer them," Carney said.

A CT scan performed at Northern Michigan Hospital showed no sign of brain injury. Neither did an MRI, taken two weeks later.

Carney's doctor told him it was not uncommon for the symptoms of closed head injuries to take up to two years to surface.

Carney's injury was labeled a severe concussion.

"It felt like a really large cloud," Carney said. "I felt like I was in a bubble and life was still going on outside, but I couldn't reach through the bubble. After a while I hated talking because it didn't feel like me."

Depression soon followed. Carney withdrew from people — the people whose names he once knew by heart and now couldn't remember.

"I really take pride in myself for knowing all the members of my gym," Carney said. "When I see someone downtown and I don't think of the name until three hours later, it bugs the heck out of me."

Names weren't all that escaped Carney. Words — common, everyday words — escaped him. Putting a client through his weightlifting paces, Carney's face would suddenly become blank and he wouldn't remember what he was doing — or saying.

"I zoned out a lot," Carney said. "Ten minutes would go by and I wouldn't know it."

Conversations became painful.

"I knew what I wanted to say but the words weren't there," Carney said.

Carney started stuttering, trying to get the thoughts out of his bruised brain.

The twin companion of depression soon moved into Carney's head — anxiety.

"Everything is stressful," Carney said. "Deciding what to have for lunch is enough to trigger an anxiety attack. I was having 10 to 15 attacks a day."

With the help of anti-depressants and anti-anxiety medication, Carney is doing better. He's found ways to deal with his short-term memory loss.

"Now I have a day planner and a tape recorder," Carney said.

Like Carney, Susan has found ways to cope. Part of coping with her problem is simply acceptance.

Susan, who loves to sing, had trouble remembering the lyrics to her favorite songs. For that matter, she couldn't remember what songs were her favorites.

"I paid a guy to write down my six favorite songs and what key I sing them in," Susan said.

"I'm a smart person. Everything was easy for me in college. I never studied. All of a sudden I can't remember how to cook a pork chop."

Like Carney, Susan reverses telephone numbers, which makes long distance dialing a nightmare. Simple words also escape her, so she's learned to describe their meanings rather than use the words.

If the word 'door' won't come to mind, Susan describes "that portal you go through to come in a building."

By sharing her experience with customers, Susan has found others who have had a similar problem.

"It's a relief to meet someone who knows what you're going through," Susan said.

With the acceptance of her condition, Susan has found new peace and happiness.

"I'm having one of the happiest years of my life," Susan said. "My kids are healthy and doing well, my daughter Shelly is getting married — I'm a happy camper."

What people are saying

"It's going to be a classic day."

— Bob Grove, aboard PaleFace Lite, a sailboat about to embark on a frosty, windy Sunday sailing race.

"If there is one animal that defines the Great Lakes, it is the loon."

— Jeff Dykehouse, conservation officer at Mackinaw State Historic Park, speaking to Charlevoix fourth graders about the area's wildlife. Dykehouse impressed students with the fact that loons can hold their breath underwater for 10 minute stretches and can swim to depths of 100 feet. He also pointed out their dwindling numbers and encouraged the students that if they come across a loon while boating, they should slow down because wakes from watercrafts might drown them, due to the bird's tiny legs.

"Ellsworth could and should win the state championship and Harbor Springs will be tough to beat. The only thing about Harbor Springs is if they run into a team that presses them all game, then they may run out of gas because they don't play a very deep bench."

— Charlevoix girls' basketball coach Tim Volovsek on the chances of two area teams winning state titles. Ellsworth competes in class D while Harbor Springs is class C. Charlevoix lost the district championship game to Harbor Springs.

"It was a very emotional thing over here when she pulled into the harbor. There were tears in the eyes of both men and women."

— Beaver Island Boat Company CEO Bill McDonough, on the long-awaited arrival of the Emerald Isle, which sailed into St. James Harbor late Sunday afternoon.

"I am a candidate because I've learned a few lessons here."

— School superintendent Roberta Jackson, explaining why she is one of the three finalists for the superintendent position in the South Haven School District. The district, which is twice the size of the Charlevoix school district, is going through similar changes.

Drivers' training takes more time and money

the program altogether. It would force students to look elsewhere, and wherever they go, Charlevoix schools would still have to match state funds for every one of their students going elsewhere.

"Training young drivers is a service to them, but also to our community," high school principal Gary Grundman said. "We want safe drivers, and it's not a skill you're born with. It's developed, a skill you practice."

As for students who may not be able to handle a $200 fee, the board did not seem willing to set up a scholarship fund.

"Not with McDonald's and Burger King crying for help," board member Ike Boss said. "They can go out and earn it easily in this town. It means a lot more to them if they pay for it themselves."

The curriculum changes have been met with positive feelings. The high school offered a class over the summer which was the first under the new requirements.

Instructors like it because it requires more effort on the students' part before getting a license. Parents like it because it begs for their involvement.

"There are a lot of circumstances out there and I'm glad we can be there to pre-warn," said Bill Nystrom, whose daughter, Shannon, is in the middle of her drivers' training program. "It also gives parents time to adjust to the fact that their kids are old enough to drive."

As for Shannon, a freshman at Charlevoix High School, she's a little frustrated with the length of time it will take to get her license. She went through the first stages of classroom time over the summer so she could begin her road training. However, she won't turn 16 until next summer and won't have an opportunity to get her license until the following winter. Charlevoix only offers driver's training during the summer months and during winter vacation.

It's a time-honored tradition at the Charlevoix Children's House Montessori School for the older kids to dress up like Pilgrims and serve a Thanksgiving meal to the younger students, who wear Native American garb made by themselves. The children help make the stuffing and bake the pies for the feast, which took place last week. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury).

Post office belongs downtown, not in township

EDITORIAL

Every day, the people come and go — on foot, in cars, riding bikes and pushing strollers. In the winter, they often pull their children, loaded with packages, on sleds behind them.

They are the people who regularly use the downtown post office.

What will they do when it's gone?

Will they pull a red wagon, laden with toddlers and packages down a state highway to get to the post office?

Will the elderly people walk two miles from their homes in the valley to mail a birthday card to a grandchild?

What about the downtown business people?

Every day, we see professional people walk from their downtown offices to the post office. County employees cart a basketful of letters to the post office every day.

Lawyers, shop owners, architects and accountants all bustle a few blocks down the street to mail a package or send a document.

Mayor Josh Barnes recently said he predicts the post office move to M66 in January will be "a total disaster."

We think he's right.

Having a post office on that side of town will certainly be convenient for folks living in Marion and Eveline Townships. It will be nice for those who regularly shop at Kmart.

But let's step back and look at the big picture.

The post office in any town is usually the hub of all activity.

If you move the hub out of town, the activity goes with it. It's an engraved invitation to sprawl.

The downtown development authority is doing its best to attract and retain business downtown. It doesn't make it any easier for them when a government agency chooses to ignore the downtown area and its patrons in favor of strip mall-style sprawl in the countryside.

Environmentalists and land use experts are promoting the concept of using existing space in already developed, downtown areas. Yet one of our most frequented government agencies is shunning wise land use, preferring to go with the out-of-town flow.

The post office officials have said for years they need more space. And as years came and went, so did the availability of bigger locations and lots in the downtown area.

Why did the government drag its heels so long, then decide to move out of town?

Are they assuming that EVERYONE shops at Kmart, so it will be convenient to simply cut across the parking lot of that store to the post office? Traffic out there is already frightening — putting a post office there, accessible only by car, is certainly going to create more traffic hazards in the area.

There's been talk of getting a post office sub-station downtown. That might help, but it's rather like putting Goliath in the cow pastures and David in the thick of the battle.

The main post office should be downtown. If there's demand for postal service in Marion Township, then put the sub-station there.

Letters to the editor

County commission may have acted illegally

Editor:

We believe that the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners used an illegal procedure during its Nov. 12 meeting by making and approving a motion to send back to the planning commission a 12.8 acre expansion for the Cedar Ridge Landfill.

In their Rules and Procedures, adopted June 13, 1984, is Resolution #80-035 which states...

WHEREAS, it is not in the best interests of this board or the public we represent to act without proper deliberation,

BE IT RESOLVED, that any and all measures presented to this board from any source other than through established committee channels shall demand at least a two week period for study preceding any action except that in the judgment of the board to be an emergency situation.

1) In the agenda for the Nov. 12, meeting, there was no mention of any consideration of the issue of an expansion for the Cedar Ridge landfill. It should have been included on the published agenda as well as had a public notification and a two week delay to allow for a public hearing. That is why, as was pointed out in the Nov. 13 Petoskey News-Review article, no one was there to represent those who oppose the landfill expansion while there was (coincidentally) a sizable contingent present of those who support the landfill expansion.

2) The motion that option #2 be exercised and to refer the landfill expansion request back to the planning commission did NOT come through established committee channels as required by Resolution #80-035, but instead through commissioner Shirley Roloff. This motion, in effect, negates the planning commission's and the county board's previous conclusions that there is more than 66 months of waste disposal capacity available to Charlevoix County and, hence, no need for an expansion. That certainly means that there was no emergency situation that required this action by the board.

Therefore, we conclude that the action of the board is illegal and that it needs to reconsider this matter at a later time. Furthermore, it should be announced by public notice and be placed on the agenda.

Interestingly, at the same meeting, the commissioners approved the 14 members appointed to the new Solid Waste Planning Committee. It will meet for the first time in January of 1998. Why then would the board of commissioners remove IN ADVANCE one of the areas that would have been addressed during their tenure?

Please contact your commissioners to support and thank those who voted against the motion for expansion:

Historical facts need clarifications

Editor:

Once again, I'm offering my own memories to fill out information in some of the recent columns in the Scrapbook section, and as always will welcome any corrections anyone else will care to make.

In the Sept. 17 column about school buildings in Charlevoix; one step was omitted. The high school built in 1901 does not "reside today at the corner of Grant and Mason streets." That school was on the southeast side of the school property on Mason Street, and was torn down when the present high school was built on East Garfield in 1961. The present middle school and gymnasium were built as a unit in 1927, with the kindergarten goldfish pond so fondly remembered by Marilyn Boss in her column.

Ralph Hamilton has already corrected the statement that the post office was in "the office of the Charlevoix Courier newspaper, then located in what is now known as the Trademark Clothiers store." The Courier was for many years in the building now occupied by the Rainbow Shoppe, and apparently the mistake arose because there must be two Van Pelt buildings (I wish I could get there to check this!). Mr. Hamilton meant, I am sure, to point out that the post office was in the Van Pelt building now occupied by Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering company, but an unfortunate typo in the letter made it read that it was "not" in that building.

Events in brief

Fraternal groups help disabled persons

Wednesday, Nov. 12, marked the 20th year that Charlevoix Fraternal Organizations met to share dinner and fellowships.

The 27 men who attended were from the Charlevoix Mason Lodge, the I.O.O.F. Lodge and the Knights of Columbus Council #7172.

The primary purpose of this annual get together has always been to promote, reach out financially and to solicit volunteers for the annual Special Olympics held each year in May.

These special sports are held at Kipke field for all developmentally disabled persons from northern Michigan areas. With the Charlevoix High School Band providing the entry march onto the field and the very strong desire of the contestants to win, it becomes a gratifying experience for the volunteers of these fine Charlevoix fraternal organizations and participating high school students.

The 1998 Special Olympics will be Friday, May 14, at Kipke field. The public is welcome. There is no charge to watch these athletes perform.

Head Start hosts open house

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and the Early Head Start and Head Start Programs of Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency would like to invite the public to attend an open house at our new Early Education Building.

The building is located at 12585 US-31 North in Charlevoix.

The open house will be from 4-6 p.m. Monday, Dec. 1. The Early Head Start staff hopes everyone will come and see this new addition to the community.

Charter school hosts "Winter Wonderland"

Northwest Academy, a charter school in Charlevoix, is hosting their second annual holiday open house at 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 8. The theme this year is "A Winter Wonderland." The evening will include performances by the school's music groups, a silent auction, a bake sale and tours of the school during intermission.

The public is invited to attend this enjoyable evening and learn about the exciting opportunities Northwest Academy offers its students.

Santa visits pets to raise money for animals

Would your pet like to visit Santa and ask for a nice doggie bone or rhinestone collar for Christmas?

Your pet will have a chance to do that from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 29 at the County Post on M-66.

Santa will be there so your pet can have a picture taken with the jolly old elf. The cost of a picture is $5, and all proceeds will go to the Charlevoix County Humane Society for construction of their new animal shelter in Boyne City.

The East Jordan Area Jaycees and the Charlevoix County Humane society have joined efforts to support homeless animals. At the same time and location, East Jordan Area Jaycees will collect donations of pet foods and supplies used by the humane society. According to Martha Weisler, director of the humane society, each month they use 12 gallons of bleach, 200 pounds of cat litter, 80 pounds of cat food, 40 pounds of kitten food and 40 pounds of puppy food.

Although some dog food is provided through Charlevoix County, cat, kitten and puppy supplies must be obtained by other means. Donations of any of these items as well as animal toys and treats is greatly appreciated.

The humane society is also hosting an open house from 1-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7. Help their sheltered pets by bringing food donations, toys and treats. The open house will be at the animal shelter on Grant Street, behind the sheriff's department.

School bands perform Christmas concerts

The Charlevoix High School Band will be performing their Christmas band concert at 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11. The concert will begin with a performance by the seventh- and eighth-grade middle school bands.

The sixth-grade middle school band will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16 in the middle school gym. The public is invited to attend.

Volunteers needed to grow trees

The Adopt a Road and Plant Trees for Beauty, Environment and a Heritage project is looking for volunteers to plant nut trees for a demonstration project.

Nut trees, such as walnut, chestnut, horse chestnut and hickory nut can be planted with minimal space in a back yard.

According to Shane Delaney, district forester at the soil and water conservation district, trees can be planted and nurtured in an old tire. Anyone interested in planting nut trees may call Delaney at 582-6193.

Nursery grown stock trees for planting on lawns or highways can be ordered from Kelly Howard at 582-6193. Howard said she can supply trees in quantities from one to 1,000 for spring and fall planting. One, two and three year-old saplings are also available.

The Adopt a Road and Plant Trees for Beauty, Environment and Heritage is a community project with many areas open for participation, including: tree inventory, identification, production, transplanting, nurturing and historical preservation with videos.

The trees project is a program of the Scholars Entrepreneur Program and James Hiscy.

Rock band to perform at teen center

Petoskey's talented, teen rock trio, Apathy, will perform at the B.A.S.E.S. Teen Center in Charlevoix from 8-11 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6.

Apathy was recently featured in Circus Magazine.

Admission is $5 per person. The teen center, a non-profit organization, is located at 208 W. Lincoln, Charlevoix.

Charlevoix businesses move around a lot

The next post office location was in the S.M. Sec building at the corner of Bridge and Antrim streets, now occupied by restaurant businesses, until the most recent post office on Mason Street was built in 1956.

It would certainly simplify historical reminiscences if Charlevoix businesses had just remained in their original locations, but they do tend to move around and confuse everyone.

Cordially,
Anne Higman Olmstead

Rotary service award

At the annual Rotary luncheon at Pine River Place, Roderick E. Smith was presented with the Service Above Self award by high school principal, Gary Grundman (left). Smith, who has lived in Charlevoix since 1990, has given much of his time to others. He bought, cooked and served a holiday ham dinner for the tenants and employees of Pine River Place last winter. Smith also treats everyone at Pine River Place to an excellent homemade soup luncheon once a month, which has earned him the nickname, "the Soup Chef." After the award ceremony, Bruce Hamilton and the Charlevoix High School performing arts team led the group in Christmas carols.

Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Lounsbury

Laurie Ann Lounsbury and Kevin A Nally were married Oct. 11 on the bluff of Sequanota Club in Charlevoix.

The bride wore a dress of machine-washable fabric.

She should have carried a bouquet of red and white roses, but in the excitement she left them behind on the kitchen counter.

The groom wore a black suit and remembered to include the boutonniere with his attire.

There were no bridesmaids, since the bride's middle-aged friends thought they were a bit long in the tooth to dress up in lavender organza.

The wedding site was adorned with a patch of new grass and drifting autumn leaves.

Guests came from both the north and south side of Charlevoix. The bride's relatives came from Maine and Illinois to make sure the groom went through with the marriage.

A reception at the Grey Gables followed the wedding. No one threw rice, but a 50-year-old flower girl tossed her shoes and stockings along the roadside upon her departure.

She felt much better after she did so.

OF BLESSINGS

From the Christian Science Committee

Traditionally, for Thanksgiving we remember the pilgrims and the feast they prepared. By celebrating in the same manner as they did, with a bountiful dinner among family and friends, we share the spirit of Thanksgiving with them and, to some extent, feel that we are reliving that pilgrim experience.

Looking deeper into the meaning of Thanksgiving, we often find our own reasons for celebration. Perhaps we have experienced some of life's challenges and hardships and have found that turning to God yields solutions, even to the most intractable problems where there appears to be no possible answer. At times like this, like the pilgrims we kneel, figuratively or literally, in gratitude to God for His ever present love for His children.

As we come to understand Him better and rely on Him more, we see that He is always there for us. We learn that His laws are instituted for our care and protection. Christ Jesus demonstrated these laws and through them, expressed the highest form of thanksgiving there is, complete reliance on God, even when confronted by death. Prior to raising Lazarus from the dead, he thanked God, as it is recorded in the Bible (John); "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me."

One of Jesus' modern day followers, Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Christian Science church, says in her book, Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures, "To keep the commandments of our Master and follow his example is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidence of our gratitude for all that he has done. Outward worship is not of itself sufficient to express loyal and heartfelt gratitude, since he has said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments."

This spirit of gratitude is celebrated in Christian Science churches throughout the United States.

A Thanksgiving Day service will he held at 11 a.m. Nov. 26 at the Christian Science Society, 205 Clinton St. Members of all denominations are welcome.

He is survived by his wife, Doris May Hart, of Boyne City; one daughter, Mrs. Fred (Judith Ann) Kendrick of Lapeer; five grandchildren; three great grandchildren; and one brother, Vernon L. Hart and his wife, Bette, of Boyne City and Bradenton, Fla.

On Thursday, Nov. 13, sixth grade students from Northwest Academy hiked to Fisherman's Island State Park. Carrying all their gear, students coped with below-freezing temperatures and several inches of snow on the hike. After hiking to a remote campsite, students set up shelters, using tarps and ropes. Dinner was prepared over small backpacking stoves. The evening was spent night-hiking along the Lake Michigan shoreline. Evening temperatures in the teens proved challenging for the group. They learned to layer their clothing, keep hydrated and eat properly. The group worked together gathering wood, cleaning and carrying all supplies. After spending the night, the students hiked six miles back to Northwest Academy Friday morning.

Glen's expansion adds space and staff

By Jamie MacMillan

After five months of the constant buzz of power tools and construction, Glen's Supermarket's expansion is all but complete and Harold Miller, local general manager, is relieved.

"We've been working around a lot of messes," he joked. "Now, we can get back to what we're supposed to do, serving the customer."

They will do so in better surroundings offered by a growth of 12,000 square feet. Three new additions to the store — a bakery, cafe and coffee bar — have store officials beaming about being at the innovative front of the supermarket industry.

Miller said the bakery will allow for fresh baked goods to be whipped up at the store instead of having goods shipped in from the Boyne City store. Miller pointed out that they were glad the Boyne City branch provided fresh baked goods, but that they never knew what they would receive on any given day and there was no chance of restocking any of the cases as they emptied.

"We needed to offer a bakery," Miller said. He recalled when the store expanded 10 years ago and the decision was made not to include a bakery. "Now we can deal with our customers' demands here."

Left: With Glen's new expansion, the supermarket now offers homemade bakery items such as these chocolate chip cookies baked by employee Dee Fisher. Other new additions to the store include a food court, coffee bar and seafood department. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

The Cafe, described by Miller as a food court, will offer sit down dining. Beyond a traditional deli counter, the cafe will have pizza ovens and hot food entrees seven days a week.

The coffee bar with a buffet of brewed gourmet coffee is located within the Cafe.

While excited with the changes, Miller also pointed out It will be a challenge to run the new store.

"The big challenge will be learning how to run this facility — it's like a brand new store," he said. "It will take three to six months to work the bugs out of this in terms of how to man the store and man it well."

Miller estimated the store has hired 25-30 new employees to handle the store's growth, giving the store a staff of 135 people.

Other results of expansion include a doubling in size of the meat, dairy, produce and frozen sections of the store and adding a new seafood department.

"Space had been so tight," Miller said. "Items we had, but kept off the shelves, we now can give a whole row."

School spending millage funds

By Jamie MacMillan

Last June's school elections were marked by division. Seven candidates vied for three seats and a ballot proposal to levy a 0.5 mill to pay for land on M-66 paved many avenues for differing opinions.

The contentious aftermath of the election when the school board voted to exercise the land purchase option nearly broke the town apart during a three day period when thoughts should have been on a warm summer.

Despite all the dissension, a thread of unity was woven in the second ballot proposal, which asked residents to levy a one mill for the next six years to cover a list of repair projects at the schools. The millage was labeled a sinking fund, which limits spending to targeted projects only after money has been collected.

All seven candidates threw their support behind the proposal and voters approved the measure by a 930 to 753 count.

Five months later, one project is complete; a second is under way, but any others are at least a year and a half away.

The district spent $51,950 to repair and patch the high school roof over the gymnasium. In June, over 27 holes were found in the roof when principal Gary Grundman and building supervisor Mike Pearsall searched just the perimeter of the area. The district spent just under $15,000 on architect fees, which helped pinpoint areas needing immediate attention.

As of Oct. 31, 1997 the fund has a balance of $225,190. The millage is expected to bring in just over $400,000 a year, or $2.4 million throughout its six year lifetime.

After summer tax collection, the fund balance was just over $291,000. District Treasurer Judy Boss said the remainder of the money to be collected this year will come to the school via the county in May 1998.

The next task is an overhaul of the high school's heating system, which was deemed to be outdated. During their last regular session, the board of education approved spending $51,982 from the sinking fund to begin the first phases of the overhaul.

A majority of the money will go toward upgrading and extending the control systems, but $6,132 will be spent on removing asbestos from the air ducts and piping in the gym, computer room and throughout the school's east wing.

The asbestos must be removed before the project can start. The work is scheduled for winter break, when students are away from the building for an extended period of time.

During the board's next meeting, they will discuss what to do next. Superintendent Roberta Jackson cited two possibilities, with early estimates that use up nearly half of the money expected to be brought in over the six year period.

Removing all the asbestos at the high school and elementary school and rewiring those buildings appear to be next. However, early estimates have the asbestos project at $460,000 and the wiring at $685,000. The asbestos project will include new ceiling lighting where the material is removed.

"I think we'll have to roll it over a year," Jackson said. "I don't think we'll have enough money to begin a project next year."

Arena sailing is more than a breeze

By Laurie Lounsbury

Fair weather sailors have long since packed their last sail bag and put their boats under blue shrink-wraps for the winter.

Yet a few hardy sailors are still at it.

Except for the snow they must scrape from their boat decks, they may be enjoying the best of the sailing season with high, gusting winds and a more relaxed racing atmosphere.

They are the arena racers who take to the small seas of Round Lake every Sunday afternoon.

Charlevoix Yacht Club hosts the races. They may be the only yacht club in northern Michigan devoted enough — or nutty enough — to go sailing when most people are roasting chestnuts on an open fire.

Eight to 10 J-22 sail boats participate in the races, carrying crew dressed in everything from rain slickers to winter parkas and ski goggles.

"It's kind of a loose deal," said Mark Snyder, an arena racer and member of the Charlevoix Yacht Club. "We do observe yacht racing rules, but the neat thing about it is that everyone's so relaxed."

In arena racing, the boats sail a course with just two legs — a windward and a leeward leg. That means the boats make one pass at a buoy sailing into the wind, and a return pass sailing away from it. They make two trips around the marks, then head for the finish line.

Because it's a short course, the sailors are able to squeeze six races in two hours every Sunday afternoon.

The races were even faster years ago, when sailors made use of their spinnakers during the short races. Flying the big, puffy front sails meant the boats could complete a leg of the course in less time than it takes to chug a mug of cocoa.

There is no giant trophy at stake in arena racing, no huge title or prize money to consider. The races conclude with pizza and beverages at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

"Everyone slaps the winner on the back and that's about it," Snyder said.

While most people would think twice about getting in a sail boat in November, arena sailors will tell you it's often some of the best sailing of the season. The gales of November whip Round Lake into a frenzy and force sailors to stay on their toes.

"Typically, the winds are better and tactically, it's such a tight course, you have to learn to be a better sailor," Snyder said.

A casual observer can see that the boats pass one another in alarming proximity, close enough to see the frost in their eyebrows.

The arena races will continue every Sunday until Dec. 7, which is the date for the Cranberry Cup race, which marks the official end of the sailing season.

If space is available on boats, newcomers are welcome to show up at 1 p.m. and join the action.

"New people can come and try it out," Snyder said.

Blustery gusts and blowing snow keep sailors on their toes

Clockwise, from top: Rigging his boat, Pig Dirty, is Don Thwing in the bow, with help from Mark Olgaard. Moving around on the boat becomes more challenging while wearing heavy winter boots.

Boats sail in tight packs during arena sailing, requiring quick reflexes of the crew. Because the course is short, it sometimes looks like boats are going to collide when they dash between buoys.

These two boats heel handsomely in the high winds of November.

Body builders take home prizes

Two Charlevoix women earned titles in a western Michigan competition, the USA Natural Championship Bodybuilding competition, held in Grand Rapids Nov. 1.

Connie Blouch and Shaunee Blanchard both competed in the heavyweight category. Blouch took first place in the division and first place overall in posing. Blanchard took fourth place in her division.

Blouch, who was trained by Scott and Rich Conti, was also supported by her husband, friends and staff at Harbor Health and Fitness Center.

Blouch is a certified personal trainer with the American Council on Exercise and employed at the Harbor Health and Fitness Center.

Instructors keep training

In an ongoing effort to maintain their fitness instructor certification, three fitness instructors from the Harbor Health and Fitness Center attended the Midwest Mania Conference in Chicago.

The three day fitness extravaganza, from Nov. 14-16, offered over 100 seminars led by 50 cutting-edge instructors. Erica Chamberlain, Melinda Morgan and Candy Smith attended, gathering research information, strength tips and flexibility findings.

Lady Rayders lose district title

By Jamie MacMillan

The Lady Rayders dream of a district title withered for the second year in a row against Harbor Springs 77-56 in the title game.

Jamie Gowell led the squad with 18 points, Julie Gregory scored 12 and Anne Terryberry added 11.

"We had a fun tournament run," coach Tim Volovsek said. "Going 2-1 is a nice way to end the season, we enjoyed a good week."

Earlier in the week, the Rayders advanced to the title game by routing Mancelona 58-32.

For the Rayders, the district title loss is the final mark of a tough season. Not because their final won-loss tally reads 9-14, but because it seemed each week of the season the team tipped-off against one of the state's better teams.

Charlevoix lost nine games to teams who claimed district titles: Harbor Springs, Benzie Central, Ellsworth and Kalkaska.

Harbor and Benzie are ranked No. 5 and No. 8 respectively in class C, Ellsworth is the top-ranked team in class D and Kalkaska has earned honorable mention status in the class B poll. Throw in two games with class B rival Petoskey and it's no wonder the team's record has the look of a club that struggled all year. Volovsek, though, said the record hides a good club.

"I hope they come away from this with some good positive feelings because they put up a real valiant effort against one of the tougher schedules in the area."

Bring It Home for Christmas!

1 Taxes
A part of every dollar you spend locally goes to local government paying for services that would otherwise go on your personal tax bill.

2 Selection
As a local customer your tastes determine what goods and services are available locally. The more you shop here the better the selection of goods and services available.

3 Employment
Area businesses employ area people. Your local spending helps create jobs for your friends, family and neighbors.

4 Quality Merchandise
When you buy locally you're building on a relationship with a business. Your satisfaction is paramount to that business so any problems you may have will be handled on a personal basis.

5 Community Involvement
You'll know that your holiday expenditures are also going to help your community. Area businesses support your friends and neighbors - support them and you support us all.

6 Save Money
By the time you figure in the cost of gas and your time you may actually spend more money to bring in an item from out of town. Local merchants provide goods and services at competitive costs - so why not save time and money with them?

7 Economic Development
Your local dollar is more than five times as valuable to our economy than out-of-town money. The reason? Local dollars will circulate five times through the local economy before leaving. A dollar spent in another community is gone forever. Also the cost of attracting outside money is prohibitive.

8 Merchandise Availability
In the time it takes you to plan a trip out of town many merchants can special order items. You get exactly what you want without wasting time and energy on a long trip.

9 Personal Service
You're more than just a number to an area merchant. You're a face, a name - a personality. And area businesses will go the extra mile to assure your satisfaction. Get to know them well enough and they can even aid you in selecting gifts for those hard to buy for folks.

10 We Care
When you shop at area merchants you're more likely to be greeted with a smile, helped and treated as a guest. Because that's exactly what you are. You're our guests.

Superintendent eyes South Haven position

Charlevoix school superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson is one of three finalists for a superintendent position in South Haven, Mich.

After narrowing the field from over 40 candidates to the final three, the South Haven School District sent 20 community representatives to Charlevoix. The representatives spent Monday meeting with a variety of townspeople, learning about Jackson and the challenges facing the Charlevoix School District.

Jackson said the South Haven District faces challenges similar to the Charlevoix School District.

"I am a candidate because I've learned a few lessons here," Jackson said.

"South Haven is a nice community, with very nice people. We have a great district here, but I was impressed with what they've done."

The representatives from South Haven have one more site visit next week. They expect to make a decision after that is completed.

Winter parking rules begin

Starting Dec. 1, winter parking restrictions will be in effect.

Vehicles are not allowed to park on any city streets in Charlevoix from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m.

The winter parking law allows city street workers to plow streets during the night.

Harsha House puts holiday spin on history

New historical ornament, first in annual series, shows ice and Irene Young

Above: Making note cards from historical post cards for the Charlevoix Historical Society are (from left) Anne Marie Barnes, Cynthia Garland and Abby Depew. The women had a work bee last Thursday night to make the note cards, which will be for sale at the Harsha House Museum. Below: Betsy Reynolds shows the variety of items for sale at Harsha House during their holiday open house. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

While the Harsha House is well known for its collection of Charlevoix historical memorabilia, it's not usually considered as a place to go Christmas shopping.

But the Harsha House is the ideal place to find small gifts with a big Charlevoix impact.

The historical society is offering the first ornament in their holiday collection series, "Charlevoix Light 1997." The ornament is a blue bulb with an image of the south pier lighthouse covered with ice. In front of the lighthouse is Irene Young, Earl Young's wife.

The ornament's art work was created from an old Earl Young photo, taken on a particularly icy day when his wife posed in front of the lighthouse.

Selling for $7, the ornament makes a wonderful gift for anyone who keeps Charlevoix in their thoughts at Christmas time.

The members of the Charlevoix Historical Society also hosted a work bee to create note cards from old Charlevoix postcards. The note cards are a great way to send a bit of Charlevoix to out-of-town friends.

Russ Bolt tiles, mugs and note cards and Charlevoix art by Jim Annis are also for sale at Harsha House.

The Harsha House will host a Christmas open house from 5-9 p.m. every Thursday evening until Christmas.

Starting Nov. 29, the museum will be open Saturdays from 1-4 p.m.

Harsha House Museum is located at 103 State St. in Charlevoix. For more information, call 547-0373.

1901 Champion Football Team Charlevoix High School

The standard football attire in 1901 included bulky turtleneck sweaters, most of which were knitted by local women.

Shin guards were a must. Many of the players wore nose guards, which were attached to the helmet by a strap. The helmets were made of leather. They gave some protection, but were a far cry from the solid helmet used today.

The ball was a fat oval and could not be gripped for passing. No one had as yet tried a pass play.

Let there be light

Town tree glitters in seasonal darkness

In one of the town's finest traditions, hundreds of folks took their children to East Park last Friday, where the tykes' handmade ornaments were hung with care on the town tree. An unfortunate sign of the times was that, for the first time ever, children weren't allowed to ride up in the cherry bucket to place their ornaments on the tree themselves. Apparently liability issues were at stake. In spite of that small change in tradition, children enjoyed watching city workers gingerly take their ornaments and put them on the branches of the children's choice. More photos on page 9. # Counties may merge government agencies

By Jamie MacMillan

A combination of good timing and the need for an experienced hand could lead the Family Independent Agencies of Charlevoix and Emmet counties to merge into one district-wide organization.

The agencies are governed by separate, three-member boards; one appointed by the governor and the other two appointed by the county commissioners. The boards oversee the operations of the county's agency, formerly known as the Department of Social Services, and the county's medical care facility.

Grandvue, on Peninsula Road in East Jordan, is the medical care facility in Charlevoix County while the Emmet County Care Facility is on M-119 in Harbor Springs.

The board in Emmet County, though, is amid a contentious break-up due to a bickering relationship with county commissioners. One member has resigned, another is halfway out the door, while the third will remain on the board only until the governor appoints someone else.

With a vacant board looming, Terry Salacina, director of services for the agencies in both counties, feels the time is right to look into the possibility of merging.

"The window of opportunity is open for this to happen, and we should talk about it before it closes," he said.

Should the bodies merge, it would create a five-member board, with the three members of the current Charlevoix County agency board joining two new appointees from Emmet County.

"Cost savings would be limited, and I don't know quite honestly if it would be a better working system," Salacina said.

County commissioners on both sides are not rushing to merge because of the way their care facilities are funded.

Both have operational bud-

Emerald Isle sets sail for Charlevoix Thursday

By Laurie Lounsbury

When the Emerald Isle sailed into its home port of St. James, Beaver Island, at 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21, people on the shoreline shed tears of joy and gave cheers of awe. After years of planning, the huge ferry boat was finally a reality.

No wonder the island residents were thrilled. It's been 35 years since a new ferry boat tied up at their docks to provide service from Beaver Island to Charlevoix.

Now people in Charlevoix are anxiously waiting to see the impressive ship sail past the Charlevoix lighthouse and into Round Lake. For weeks, mainlanders have been asking the question — When will she get here?

After all, there are champagne bottles to chill and a celebration to plan before the ship gets here. The answer finally came Tuesday, when Bill McDonough, Chief Executive Officer of the Beaver Island Boat Company reported that the ship passed Coast Guard inspection and certification, so let the celebration preparations begin.

It will be hard to match the Beaver Island homecoming. As the green and white ship approached Beaver Island, children on the shoreline vigorously waved Irish and American flags. And when the ship tied up to the dock, 200 green and white helium balloons were released.

"It was absolutely beautiful to see her come around in the harbor," McDonough said. McDonough made the voyage from Maine to Beaver Island with the ship.

Captain Kevin McDonough piloted the ship back from Maine. Kevin is the second generation of McDonoughs to bring a new ferry boat to the island. His father, Lawrence McDonough, brought the Beaver Islander from Sturgeon Bay in 1962.

During the 2,229 mile trip from Maine, the Emerald Isle used 14,000 gallons of fuel, battled through 10-12 foot waves, went into dry dock in Sault Ste. Marie for repairs and finally arrived home last week.

On Tuesday, the Coast Guard awarded certification to the Emerald Isle, so she can be put into service.

"We'd like to use the Emerald Isle for the last few weeks of ferry service in December," said Bill McDonough.

Service to Charlevoix will start Thursday, with the maiden voyage departing St. James at 9 a.m..

"The plan is to arrive in Charlevoix around 11 a.m. and unload freight, then have an open house from noon to 4 p.m.," McDonough said.

Commemorative tickets will be issued to those who make the first voyage on the new ship.

Anyone taking the cruise will notice her faster speed and larger capacity, compared to the Beaver Islander.

"It makes the Beaver Islander look like a canoe," said Richard Gillespie, board member of the Beaver Island Transport Authority.

The Beaver Islander, which has serviced the island for 35 years, will become the back-up ferry boat.

Above: We know the Emerald Isle made it to Beaver Island — the cheers she received could practically be heard in Charlevoix. Now, the ship will sail into Charlevoix Thursday. Front page photo: Coming out of Sault Ste. Marie, the Emerald Isle demonstrated her seaworthiness as she pounded through heavy waves, making excellent time on the last leg of her trip. (Photos courtesy of Richard Gillespie)

County agencies may join forces

gets in the $4 million range, with 80 percent of the funds coming in through Medicaid. Grandvue receives over $700,000 of their operating funds through a three year, .75 county millage.

Emmet County's care facility sees $285,000 come into their hands through the county's general fund.

Jim Tamlyn, Chairman of the Emmet County Board of Commissioners, projected any merge to be three or four months away and said they hope to appoint new members to their board during their next meeting. He said the new agency board will be asked to look into the feasibility of a merge and attempt to do so if they find it wise.

"My first thought is to keep the care facilities separate, but combine the two family independent agencies," Tamlyn said.

What people are saying

"We're trying to make a living and now we've got the government competing against us, selling mugs and earrings. So we're subsidizing our competition."

— Jeannine Wallace, owner of Shop of the Gulls, who is displeased with the U.S. Post Office for selling commemorative mugs, ties and earrings.

"We're going into the game as heavy underdogs and we're going to put a couple thousand people in this gym. We're a young team and I'd like to watch how our kids execute and respond to those conditions."

— New basketball coach Keith Haske on the Rayders' home opener vs. Petoskey Tuesday, Dec. 9. The Northmen were a class "B" final four team last year, while this year's Charlevoix team has just one senior.

"It will look so sharp, coming through the channel and docking in Round Lake — it's going to fit like a hand in a new glove."

— Bill McDonough, talking about the Emerald Isle when the ship arrives at the new dock facility in Charlevoix.

On the job in Costa Rica

By Jamie MacMillan

For Charlevoix resident Tim Salmonsen, his eight day jaunt in Costa Rica last month was business as usual.

Already, the Charlevoix class of '86 alum has spent similar time in Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Haiti and has been throughout Europe.

"Everyone should go out and experience other people's culture and way of life," Salmonsen said. "Hopefully this will spill over somehow in my own everyday life."

Salmonsen, his father, Terry, and fellow resident Joe Johnston traveled to the Central American country, spending a week in the tiny village of Garcia, approximately 30 miles north of the country's capital city of San Jose. They turned in the dreary gray of November on the Great Lakes for the warm — albeit rainy — climate of a country buffered on the east by the Caribbean Sea and the west by the Pacific Ocean.

The gentlemen's voyage, though, was not to check out the surf of what is quickly becoming one of the hemisphere's hottest tourist sites. The three went south on a church mission of sorts.

In Costa Rica, the only recognized religion is Catholicism, with about 95 percent of the population practicing. Other forms of religion are practiced, but are loosely organized to the point that Salmonsen commented they look more like a YMCA than an actual religion. Consequently, many of their churches are in disrepair, and the three Charlevoixians traveled with their work boots and helped paint, rewire and renovate a church in the village.

Salmonsen said the church services they attended with their hosts were filled with singing, dancing, percussion, and, at times, seemed more concert than worship.

"We sang, danced and clapped for hours," he said. "I've never hugged and kissed as much during worship as I did down there."

They stole away from their chores to see the countryside. They scaled volcanoes and kayaked down the country's main river.

Interestingly, the trio will be one of the last to navigate the water via a kayak. The Costa Rican government is ready to embark on a project in which they supply hydro-generated electricity to their Central American neighbors. In order to do so, they will be closing the river for such thrill rides.

Salmonsen said Costa Rica was an impressive Central American country. It wasn't as impoverished as some of the other Latino countries he's visited.

"The separation of wealth, if there is any, was not that visible," he said. "I didn't see much squalor, but I didn't see anyone holed up in large and distant estate mansions either."

Their host was the village butcher, but most Costa Ricans make decent wages working in agriculture, either in the coffee or banana industry.

Demographically, most were of Latin descent, but there were many Jamaicans and Chinese — the latter Salmonsen found surprising.

Education, Salmonsen said, was a top priority, as children went to school wearing uniforms and traveling in psychedelic-colored school buses. The literacy rate in Costa Rica is above 95 percent.

The Costa Ricans, however, weren't very imaginative with their meals.

"Beans and rice everywhere," Salmonsen joked.

"Beans and rice with coffee for breakfast, beans and rice with bread for lunch and beans and rice with some chicken for dinner."

Clockwise, from top: A Costa Rican waterfall.

Most of the countryside resembles this scene, with pastures and meadows interspersed with large banana and coffee fields.

OPINIONS

Travel the world through nearby art exhibits

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Now that we're asked not to travel to Afghanistan, Cambodia, Zaire, or other exotic places due to the political unrest, hear where local resident, Margaret Duerr, suggests we go instead!

She proposes that we play it safe and we make the short, easy, three hour drive from Charlevoix to Grand Rapids. There we should visit the Grand Rapids Art Museum that is hosting a world class exhibit of the master Italian Renaissance painter, Perugio. He is a colleague of Leonardo, Botticelli and Michelangelo and was Raphael's teacher. These paintings have never been outside Italy before, and you'll have lots of time to view them before the show closes Feb. 1, 1998.

Duerr's son-in-law is John Logie, mayor of Grand Rapids, where the Duerrs spent Thanksgiving. Grand Rapids has a sister relationship with Perugio, Italy, whose mayor is currently visiting here.

There are nine oil paintings that have been shipped over from Italy, as well as some additional works from the Detroit Institute of Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the National Gallery of Art and the Art Institute of Chicago, making a grand total of 30 gorgeous Renaissance paintings, which include religious, classical, architectural and landscape subjects. Numerous lectures and concerts will be given during the exhibit from time to time as well. For more information, call 1-800-678-9859.

While in Grand Rapids, Chicago Club resident Steele Taylor suggests you also visit the Grand Rapids Public Museum, located in the Van Andel Center. It's a new, $40 million, four-story building that hosts among other exhibits, a restored carousel, as well as one of the finest furniture exhibits in the country. One might expect to see such a show in the furniture capital of the world. Taylor is president of the cities' Arts and Museum Commission and knows whereof he speaks.

For art lovers looking for inspiration or a place to take the children even closer to home, visit the Picasso to Warhol, master works of the 20th Century exhibit at the Dennos Museum Center in Traverse City.

This is the most important exhibition of 20th century art ever exhibited in Northern Michigan.

As you stroll through the museum, bear in mind what Picasso once said: "Every child is an artist. The problem is how to remain an artist once he grows up."

The show is on loan from the Detroit Institute of Arts and well worth your time. It will be in Traverse City until Feb. 15.

Finally, much closer in space and time to Charlevoix and the 21st century, you might like to view the seven contemporary abstract artists showing at the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey from Dec. 9 to Jan. 14. Collages by Bill Fischer, paintings by Patricia Opel and Donna Groot, ceramics by Peter Edward Williams, welded steel sculptures by John Running-Johnson, wall reliefs by Mary J. Eckhardt, and constructed paintings by Timothy Norris are on display. This traveling exhibit has already been seen in the greater Detroit area, Grand Rapids and as far north as the Sault. For more information call 347-4337.

Letters to the editor

Speaker Ron Heagy wants to return to Charlevoix

Editor:

When Ron Heagy, quadriplegic motivational speaker, agreed to come to Charlevoix in addition to his speaking engagements we'd arranged at Central Michigan University and Ferris State University, we admit there were some reservations as to how successful we would be in attracting crowds. Yet his message was so powerful that if we could get people out to hear him, listeners would be motivated to improve their attitude and be inspired to take inventory of their lives and lifestyles. We had just a short time for promotion and we needed help from local leaders to insure that we'd have a chance for success.

After he did appear in Charlevoix, I was with him for three days while he spoke at CMU and FSU, and from our conversations, it was evident that everything he did in Charlevoix sparked pleasant memories. Ron continually made mention of the great people he encountered while in northern Michigan. In addition, there were many very positive reactions from those who heard him. Many people need to be thanked for helping Ron Heagy's appearance become a real community event. Thus the purpose of this letter. Hopefully, we won't leave anyone out that served on the "Charlevoix team" that hosted Ron and his lovely wife, Christy. In reviewing his schedule, we realized how many people he touched and marveled at his energy.

His day started at 9:45 a.m. Sunday when he met the combined classes of teens from our various churches. This event was promoted by the Ministerial Association and hosted by the United Methodist Church. Ron was then invited to be a part of the 11:00 a.m. service and enjoyed an enthusiastic welcome. In the early afternoon he met with wheelchair-bound students. Later that afternoon he met with coaches and athletes in the high school gym. In the evening an overflow crowd heard Ron speak at the Assembly of God Church, again hosted by the local Ministerial Association.

I need to publicly thank people in Charlevoix that immediately pitched in to help insure that Ron's appearance would be successful. Accolades to Gary Stutzman, who

All college bound juniors, seniors and their parents should plan to attend. The new, 1998-99 FAFSA forms and scholarship information will be available and distributed at this meeting.

College courses now available in Charlevoix

North Central Michigan College will offer two courses in Charlevoix for the 1998 winter semester. The winter semester begins January 19, 1998.

Registration begins Dec. 1, 1997. For course listings and registration information, call NCMC's student services office at 348-6605.

The classes offered in Charlevoix are English Composition II and Speech. Both classes will meet at Charlevoix High School. The speech course meets from 6-9 p.m. Monday. English Composition II meets from 6-9 p.m. on Thursday.

Dog licenses on sale

The Charlevoix County Treasurer's Office started issuing all county dog licenses Dec. 1, when the new 1998 dog tags went on sale.

This was due to a new central computerized dog licensing program that was installed in the county treasurer's office. The 1997 licensing data has been inputted into the new system and allowed a renewal notice to be sent to all 1997 licensed dog owners by Dec. 1.

The 1998 dog licenses can be obtained by mail or at the county treasurer's office from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Applications are available at all local township and city treasurers, veterinarians, humane society and animal control officer locations.

All applications must be accompanied by the proof of rabies vaccination before a license can be issued. This is in compliance with the Dog law of 1919 and all Amendments thereto, for all dogs 6 months or older.

Having a centralized system will speed the return of lost or missing pets to their owners and assist the local law enforcement agencies in answering dog complaints.

Garden Club hosts Christmas lunch

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club will hold their Christmas luncheon at noon Tuesday, Dec. 9 at the Grey Gables Inn. For reservations, call Shirley at 547-6412 by Dec. 5. Entertainment will be provided by the Charlevoix Men's Community Choir.

took care of many of the little details and who joined with me to make Ron's appearance possible. Dave Fowler gathered sponsorship money to cover expenses. Dale Boss hosted his arrival and made him aware of the town's historical past and present. Jim Berlage arranged for his stay at the Edgewater Inn. Management from the Weathervane and Juilleret's Restaurant provided complementary meals. Kwikie Duplicating helped us with advertising and printing. The Ministerial Association, under the leadership of chairman Lowell Anderson, promoted his appearances to their respective churches. The Char-Em School District helped us solve transportation problems. The list probably goes on and some others may have been missed, but most importantly, I want you to know that I'm proud of Charlevoix and everyone's willingness to help a great cause.

Ron Heagy would like to return to Charlevoix. He enjoyed the natural beauty and the opportunity to talk here, but he remembers most the wonderful people he met when he spent a weekend in a place he'd never heard of before but that's now locked in his memory forever. He knows why it's called "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

Ron left a limited number of his prints and his book "Life is an attitude" for sale with Terry Salmonsen at the Aartvark Studio located on Bridge Street.

Book Angels give new books to needy children

Each year, through the very generous support of a caring community, the Book Angel project, sponsored by Bridge Street Book Shop in Charlevoix, provides the gift of books on Christmas morning to disadvantaged children in Charlevoix County. In many cases, Book Angels enable a child to own his or her very first book.

Last year contributions were called in from all over Michigan and from as far away as Florida, Arizona, Chicago, Indianapolis and St. Louis. Summer residents, as well as the year-round community, have been very supportive of this project. In 1997 there is no shortage of children who need our help.

On Nov. 28 the Book Angel Christmas Tree went up at Bridge Street Book Shop. The tree is ornamented with angels, each representing a needy child in Charlevoix County. As patrons select an angel from the tree and purchase a book for that boy or girl — at a 20 percent discount — the angel is replaced by a gold star. The Book Shop staff are happy to provide assistance in selecting an age-appropriate book for the child, although many people come in, especially children, knowing just the right book to give. Often it's their personal favorite that they are eager to share. The Book Shop staff will gift wrap the books and prepare them for delivery. A wonderful group of volunteers from the Charlevoix Family Independence Agency picks up the packages at the Book Shop and traverses the county, delivering the Christmas gifts of new books to children in Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Beaver Island. The goal is to have every angel on the Book Angel Tree replaced with a star by Dec. 19.

A Christmas Book Angel gives a child a gift that will be opened again and again. Bridge Street Book Shop welcomes the support of individuals, families, businesses, service clubs and organizations to help put books into the hands of all needy children in Charlevoix County this Christmas. For more information on the Book Angel Project, contact Bridge Street Book Shop at 547-7323.

Community Reformed presents A Family Christmas

Community Reformed Church will host the community adult choir presentation, A Family Christmas, at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6 and at 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7 in the sanctuary of the church located on the corner of Oak and Meech streets in Charlevoix.

"This year's offering is the traditional Christmas story as recorded in the book of Luke, but enhanced by familiar carols and some zippy new pieces performed by our teens," said Cindy Mansen, director of the ecumenical 45-voice choir.

Jonathan Mays will solo with the senior high choir, singing "Foreign to Us," and two junior high youth choirs will each perform a number.

Adult choir member, Terry Dohm, will solo in a medley entitled "No Room." Musical accompanists for "A Family Christmas" are Theda Williams, Chris LePage and Terry VanderSlik.

Conrad and Carolyn Klooster, as well as Tom, Evelyn, Stephanie and Chad DeKorte, will narrate the story of the events surrounding the birth of Jesus Christ — from Caesar's initial decree of the Judean census to the wise men's journey to Bethlehem.

A reception with light refreshments will be served in the church fellowship hall following both performances. For more information, call the church office at 547-9482.

Festival of carols to be performed at Congregational Church

The Charlevoix Area Community Chorale, orchestra and guest musicians will present the annual "Festival of Carols" in the sanctuary of the Charlevoix Congregational Church at 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7.

The program will consist of carol anthems, including two new numbers by the popular composer, John Rutter. Selections by Leroy Anderson will be offered by the orchestra. Featured will be the Charlevoix Men's Glee Club as well as the Congregational Church's bell choir, the Pilgrim Ringers.

Everyone will have the opportunity to usher in the holiday season with their favorite Christmas carols.

There is no charge for the program, but a free will offering will be accepted. A reception will follow in the Fellowship Hall and the public is invited to be a part of a joyful afternoon.

The Congregational Church is located at the corner of State and Park streets.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Joe Johnston
Associate Pastor/Charlevoix Assembly of God

Over two weeks ago my wife, Sandy, and I took a little trip to Traverse City. During our visit we drove past the Cherryland Mall where we were very surprised to see what the marquee had to say: "Santa here every day." Now for Santa to be visiting the mall was no surprise because we've spotted him there before. He seems to be somewhat of a regular there. But what caught our attention were the dates in which he was to be there.

When I was a kid, it seemed Santa was too busy managing his toy cartel to come to the mall at least until the middle of December. Why is it that we are so eager to jump right into the Christmas holiday and pass right over another very important day — Thanksgiving? I'm not trying to down play the importance of Christmas because it is a very special holiday, but we must not forget Thanksgiving.

The founding fathers of this country recognized the hand of God in their lives, families and country; hence, Thanksgiving was born. Thanksgiving is a day which many have set aside not just to eat turkey & dressing or watch football or decorate the Christmas tree, but to give honor and thanks to God for the many blessings He has afforded us.

It seems very clear to me that we Americans have become very self-sufficient. Many of us never acknowledge God's hand in our lives, but we are very quick to take the credit for our own accomplishments. Let me encourage you not to forsake your Creator. He is a very loving and generous God. The Bible says He is gracious to all mankind. It rains on the just and the unjust alike. We all reap the benefits of the rain of God. Let's take some time to thank Him for His provision for our lives.

Babies meet Santa for the first time in East Park

For many of us, the ceremony of decorating and lighting the tree in East Park is as familiar as singing Jingle Bells. But for others, the town ritual is a brand new experience.

From left: For everyone in the Menard family — Ann, Dennis and baby Renee, lighting the town tree was a new joy. The family moved here from the Bronx when Dennis joined the Big Rock Point decommissioning team recently.

Logan Eckhardt watched his first Christmas ornament travel up to the highest branches of the tree while his dad, Brad, held him snugly.

Matthew Ruehle didn't know quite what to make of Santa when his mom handed him to the whiskered man at the Weathervane after the tree-lighting.

High school students learn to help their community

By Jamie MacMillan

When any free time is available during the drudgery that is the school day, it is gobbled up by the students. Some use it to catch up on back assignments, but other times it is a conduit for socializing with friends, relaxing and recharging for the next class.

Lately, though, at Charlevoix High School, much of the students' free time has been spent working. Not on term papers or research projects, but working to better their community through a handful of community service projects.

Every Tuesday and Thursday morning, high school students have seminar class. It's an 80 minute period which combines homeroom and study hall. Class sizes range from 16 to 20 students pulled from all four grades.

The bulk of the time is spent doing school work, either through research or going in depth with teachers on previous class material. Other times special projects like career day workshops, portfolio building, peer tutoring, and school assemblies are scheduled during seminar.

> "They went at it with a lot of enthusiasm. It was fun. We're trying to think now what we want to do next."

This year a new requirement has been added to seminar — doing community service projects.

"Typically when you hear the words community service, the first thought is 'what did you get busted for,'" high school principal Gary Grundman said. "We obviously want to shed that mind set."

For Grundman, extending the arm of community service to his student body was a natural, and, in his words, an obligatory project. As president of the local Rotary chapter whose motto is "Service above Self," Grundman said he felt a tug in his heart to get the students involved.

"It's a chance for them to become an active part of their community at a younger age than they usually would," he said.

Projects have ranged from planting trees, doing yard and house work for area shut-ins, participating in clothing and food drives and teaching reading to elementary students.

Each class had a free hand choosing their projects, which many have attributed to its success and the way students have embraced the concept.

"It added more relevancy to what they were doing," teacher Joe Woods said. Woods' class planted a row of trees along the city golf course and are planning to do more in the spring.

"In our case it's something they can look back upon five, 10 years from now and say 'See that, we planted that back in the fall of 1997,'" Woods said.

Brandon Bruce, physical education teacher, said the work proved to be a wake-up call for students to become active within their community.

It turned out to be more effective because the entire student body was involved instead of one group within the campus.

Bruce's class was having a hard time settling on a project until a "Coats for Kids" advertisement was heard on the radio. The seed planted, the idea quickly turned into reality as Bruce's class promoted their cause for a week before collecting over 20 coats for the needy.

"They went at it with a lot of enthusiasm," Bruce said.

"It was fun. We're trying to think now what we want to do next."

Armed with rakes and shovels, students in Joe Woods' seminar class planted young trees along the city golf course for their community service project. (Photo courtesy of Joe Woods)

"Shopping at home gives you more Christmas Presence."

The businesses in the Charlevoix area are strong supporters of community projects. It is only fair, then, that we think of the Charlevoix area first for all our shopping needs.

Whether it's sporting events, carnivals, fairs, parades or other community events, the local business community is always there to offer financial assistance for these worthwhile projects. That's also true of support for school projects and activities for the various civic clubs and for other church and charitable activities.

Anytime there is a need in the community, it is the businesses who are asked to respond - and they always do. Area consumers are asked to consider this when making buying decisions. Our businesses can continue to support the various community projects only if the residents of the area continue to patronize our businesses.

And while you're considering that, consider also that our businesses are operated by our friends and neighbors. They are here year-round, paying taxes that help support our schools, as well as the various municipal and county government services that make our quality of life so appealing.

The sponsors of this page urge everyone in the Charlevoix area to consider these things and to shop the friendly local businesses for all your needs. Doing so helps keep Charlevoix area businesses strong and in turn helps them help the Charlevoix area to remain strong.

Lake Michigan conference names top players on fall sports teams

By Jamie MacMillan

The Lake Michigan Division wrapped up their fall sports season by announcing all-conference selections for both varsity football and girls basketball.

On the gridiron, three Rayders earned a spot on the conference's first team. Junior running back Colin Carr landed a spot on the team after a 1,056-yard season running the football. Carr saved his best performances during the season's last leg, rushing for 132 and 169 yards in wins over Elk Rapids and Boyne City and 150 yards in the season's last game, a loss to Petoskey. Carr also played linebacker on defense.

Seniors Steve Felter and Steve Speigl were also placed on the all-conference team. Felter filled in at the quarterback position after original starter T.J. Carey went down for the season with a separated shoulder. Felter scored the winning touchdown on an eight yard run to defeat rival Boyne City.

Speigl was the Rayder's top receiver, whose touchdown grab of 48 yards boosted the team toward their win over Elk Rapids. Both Felter and Speigl played in the defensive backfield.

A trio of juniors, fullback/linebacker Nate Metiva and linemen Wally Wujcik and Carl Goff, were named to the honorable mention list.

Boyne City and Kalkaska placed four players on the first team; East Jordan, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix each had three; and Elk Rapids had two.

Senior forward Amanda Eaton was the only Rayder placed on the 1997 all-conference first team for girls' basketball. Eaton led the Rayders in scoring, averaging nearly 12 points a game.

Half of the team was filled with players from Harbor Springs and Kalkaska, who had four and three girls selected respectively to the 14 member squad.

Among the Harbor Springs contingent on the team is former Charlevoix player Lisa Parrish. The Rams' quest for a state title was derailed last week in a 64-61 loss to Benzie Central in the regional finals.

Boyne City and East Jordan placed two players on the first team while Charlevoix, Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis each had one.

Charlevoix's junior Jamie Gowell earned honorable mention status with eight others throughout the league.

New sports season under way

By Jamie MacMillan

As the seasonal change drifts into winter, so to does the high school sports season. At Charlevoix, two first-year head coaches will get their first taste of northern Michigan competition during next week's action.

The Rayder basketball club, buoyed by a talented group of underclassmen, will see exactly how they measure up to the region's best when they host the Petoskey Northmen next Tuesday, Dec. 9.

The Northmen lost just two games last year in a season that ended in the class "B" final four and have much of the same firepower returning for this year's club.

"I'm excited — Petoskey is probably the best team we'll play all year," first-year coach Keith Haske said. "It has given us better focus in practice, knowing they're our first game."

The Rayders travel to Whittmore-Prescott Friday, Dec. 12.

Both games next week begin with a junior varsity game at 6 p.m.

The freshmen basketball club begins play on Monday, Dec. 8 at Petoskey, followed by a home match with Cheboygan Wednesday, Dec. 10. Both games begin at 6:30 p.m.

This weekend the Rayder wrestlers begin their new season under first-year head coach Joe Johnston. They travel to the Mancelona Invitational to wrestle in an eight team field at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 6.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11, the team will wrestle at Roscommon in a tri-meet with Roscommon and Whittmore-Prescott.

The Rayder volleyball and ski teams will be under way later this month.

For complete team pictures, previews and schedules, keep an eye out for next week's Charlevoix Courier, which will include our annual winter sports preview.

The new Weil-McLain GOLD oil boiler operates at over 84% efficiency – so it can start saving you money next winter... and for many winters to come.

JP McCarthy, the voice of Detroit

New book recalls the life and times of late radio man

By Kit Foster
Bridge Street Book Shop

It may be hard to believe, but there were certain advantages to growing up in the greater Detroit area. One was living in the shadow of the "Golden Tower of the Fisher Building" — home to the Midwest's flagship radio station, WJR, "The Great Voice of the Great Lakes." What a moniker!

For more than 30 years, WJR anchor personality Joseph Priestley "JP" McCarthy woke much of the Midwest each morning, figuratively and literally. With his Irish gift of gab and eloquent mastery of the language, McCarthy delivered the world to his listeners. Each day JP would feature early morning interviews with everyone from the governor to captains of industry to Mrs. Pennyfeather at the Blue Star Home (played by fellow WJR personality "Fat Bob" Taylor). Most times, McCarthy's call came at some ungodly hour of the morning, but if you were anybody you rose to take it. JP truly had the world "on the other end of my line."

During his 1992 presidential reelection campaign, George Bush became so disgusted with the national news media that he wouldn't grant an interview with any of them — Rather, Jennings and Brokaw included. Instead, he turned to the only man he knew would get it right. You guessed it — JP McCarthy. McCarthy was invited to join the President aboard Air Force One for an exclusive one-on-one interview. McCarthy was a master at getting to the heart of an issue while, with his congenial style, always putting his subject at ease.

McCarthy was no stranger to this region of Michigan. Often, he would depart shortly after his last noontime "Focus" program of the week to catch a flight to Harbor Springs for a weekend of boating and golf, two of his lifetime passions.

McCarthy's untimely death in August, 1995, from a rare blood disorder left a huge hole, not only in his radio market but in his fan's lives as well. A hole some feel will never be filled.

In a new book, "JP McCarthy: Just Don't Tell 'Em Where I Am" (hard cover; $25; Sleeping Bear Press), author Michael Shiels has done a masterful job of assembling quips, quotes, anecdotes and stories to provide readers and fans with entertaining insight to the man at the very heart of Detroit radio. Shiels was a long-time associate and McCarthy's producer for five years prior to this death.

One of JP's favorite lines was, "Mention my name in... just don't tell 'em where I am!" JP, I think we all know where you are.

Goodbye JP.

It just ain't the same without you.

Cute kids, nice dad — but who are they?

Can anyone identify the people in this picture? The photo is believed to be taken sometime in the 1960's. The children appear to be sliding down "Dodgers Hill" on Grant Street. Call us at the Courier, 547-6558, if you can identify these happy sledders.

Lined along the ship's railing to maximize the momentous occasion of the Emerald Isle's arrival in Charlevoix were the passengers of the ship's maiden voyage. About half of the island's residents made the maiden voyage last Thursday, returning home in the late afternoon. Along with more than 100 passengers, the Emerald Isle carried one Suburban truck with a Christmas tree lashed to the roof (belonging to John Haggard), lumber, and coffee and doughnuts for all the passengers. Although she didn't do so on her first trip, the ship is capable of carrying heavy equipment such as back hoes or bulldozers. More photos on page 9. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Emerald Isle gets warm reception in spite of chilly weather

By Laurie Lounshury

It wasn't the wind and the snow that raised goose bumps on the Emerald Isle's first passengers when they entered the Pine River Channel.

Feeling like kids riding into town on Santa's sleigh, it was the the shouts, cheers and horn-honking revelry that gave passengers a tingle of delight.

For a city that's been beleaguered with bad news, the first sight of the Emerald Isle was a blast of endorphin euphoria.

The Emerald Isle cleared Charlevoix's south pier at 11 a.m. Thursday. As she made her way down the channel, Captain Kevin McDonough blasted the Emerald Isle's majestic horn to signal the bridge tender, who enthusiastically honked back. The bridge opened wide and said ahhh to accommodate the huge ferry boat. The city fire department sent a cascading arc of water across the channel — the firemen's version of swords crossed over a ceremonial path.

On the shore, the Northwest Academy band played oom-pah-pah music to welcome the ship.

Once in Round Lake, Captain McDonough was faced with the task of docking the ship stern-first into the loading ramp. Under the gazes of watchful eyes, McDonough took over the stern controls and he smoothly maneuvered the Emerald Isle into the dock.

The maiden voyage from Beaver Island to Charlevoix was complete.

In spite of occasional swaying and pitching with the waves, Beaver Island residents were in a fine, festive mood for the two hour crossing.

"We had to make the first trip," said a smiling Dick Bailey, owner of the Beaver Island Lodge. "It's a good excuse to come visit the big city."

The Emerald Isle hobbed and weaved a bit on that first trip — apparently because adjustments were being made to the auto-pilot.

The entire student body from the Beaver Island school made a field trip of the commemorative ride. While in Charlevoix, the kids were treated to free movies at Cinema III, compliments of Charlevoix State Bank.

"We don't get many chances to see new movies in a theater very often," said 11-year-old Chelsea Dohner, an island resident.

Younger students also went swimming in the new Charlevoix Community Pool, while older students visited the high school and the county courthouse.

"We're really interested in polities on the island right now," Chelsea said. "There's a lot of things to vote on — fixing roads, electing people — we're interested in that."

After a four-hour open house on the Emerald Isle, the ship sailed back to Beaver Island, an Irish flag on the bow leading her home.

School to lose 23 teachers

By Jamie MacMillan

Monday evening during the Charlevoix Board of Education meeting it was announced that another 18 teachers will be opting for the early retirement incentive by the end of the 1998-99 school year. The grand total of faculty accepting the offer stands at 23, including five who stepped away at the end of last year.

Retiring by the end of this school year or the 1998-99 school year will he Jim Jinsky, Carol Elliott, Marti Mathers, Hal Evans, Pauline McDermott, Ann Shindorf, Steve Stargardt, Dixie Darling, Roxie (Loding) Peevyhouse, Kay Britton, Henry Wagner, Barry Pierce, Karen Pierce, Stan Martin, Tom Sothard, Toni Felter, Ron Cox and Chris Bentley.

The agreement pays out between $40,000 and $50,000 in monthly payments over five years to retiring teachers, depending on what year the teacher steps down. Teachers need at least 20 years of experience in the district and those who retire at the end of this year will receive $45,000 over five years.

During the next five years, the district will spend a yearly average of $161,050 paying out early retirement incentives.

Board member Ardeth Wieland said the departures would create a "gigantic hole" in the faculty.

On a brighter note, the Charlevoix Board of Education received some good spending news during the board meeting.

Expected to have a budget that would he $459,000 in the red for the 1997-98 fiscal year, district treasurer Judy Boss reported that the end result wouldn't be as dire. She expects the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1998, to show expenditures out pacing revenues by $47,000.

"The numbers look a lot better than they did in July," Boss told the board.

Revenues for the year total $9,989,470, an increase of over $95,000 than previously expected. Boss said new incomes include $5,000 from selling a house built by the construction technology class, $13,000 from driver's education fees, a roll-over of $10,000 from vocational educational money for at-risk students from last year and partial foundation grant allowances from five East Jordan students spending time in the Charlevoix School District.

Boss also noted adjustments in taxes collected and interest accrued jumped revenues higher.

A decline of $317,000 in spending from the budget's first draft was the higgest eye-opener. Boss said the district is spending $126,000 less than expected on payroll. They are also spending $162,000 less than expected in retirement contributions. The staffs of all three buildings tightened their belts to save $90,000 on supplies.

The amended budget does include $51,000 spent on a new bus.

The anticipated ending fund balance for the year will be $2,099,629, down from $2,146,819 at the start of the year.

Long range projections for the district, though, still show six-figure overspending for each of the next five fiscal years and a dwindling fund balance worth $848,831 by the end of fiscal year 2002-03.

The board next meets at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 12, 1998 in the middle school cafeteria.

An informal town meeting precedes the meeting at 7 p.m.

Bethany Lutheran donates to community Christmas project

The contributions of food and money for the "Make a Difference Day" project of Bethany Lutheran Church was completed when a check for $500 was presented by Mary Towsley to Mary Helen Reigle on December 5. Lutheran Brotherhood Tip of the Mitt Branch, #8959, volunteered the matching funds of $250 to the funds collected from the members of the congregation along with many bags of canned goods and household needs. This contribution enables people at the food pantry to purchase needed supplies in quantity and replenish the shelves after filling the Christmas dinners for the needy in our community.

Sandy Marquardt's small group initiated the project which coincided with national "Make a Difference Day."

Jackson not chosen for South Haven superintendent

By Jamie MacMillan

Last week, the South Haven Board of Education voted to offer their vacant position of superintendent to David Meyers, formerly superintendent of the Topeka (Indiana) School District.

Charlevoix superintendent Roberta Jackson was one of three final candidates making South Haven's final cut.

South Haven Board of Education president Mike Annett said Jackson's competency was never in question, but in the end "it was a matter of style" in choosing Meyers.

"It was a very close decision," Annett said. "At one point, one board member said let's just hire two people."

Annett said Jackson's financial touch in terms of making do with available resources as well as her curriculum philosophy were attractive attributes which helped her make the final cut from 40 original candidates.

Jackson's contract with Charlevoix runs through the end of June 1999. In February, she asked the board to extend her contract through an option year, but withdrew her request a few weeks later.

Her contract allows her to leave the district for another job, but prevents the district from terminating her without extenuating circumstances.

Jackson would not comment on South Haven's decision, nor did she comment on her future plans.

Board president Allen Telgenhof said the district would not pursue any buy-out agreements with Jackson and unless she takes another position, she'll remain with the district at least through the end of her contract.

Local man serving on aircraft carrier in Arabian Gulf

Navy Airman David Bellairs, son of Robert and Jennifer Bellairs of Charlevoix, has arrived in the Arabian Gulf aboard the aircraft carrier USS George Washington, the lead ship of the USS George Washington Battle Group. President Bill Clinton ordered elements of the battle group to the area in response to rising tensions there.

Bellairs is one of more than 5,000 sailors and marines aboard the carrier who will be called onto participate in any contingency operations which may be ordered. Iraq's refusal to allow entry of members of the U.N. weapons inspection team have caused increased tensions over compliance with U.N. sanctions imposed after the Gulf War in 1991.

Aircraft carriers like USS George Washington are deployed around the world to maintain a U.S. presence in times of crisis or tension. They serve as a highly visible deterrent to would-be aggressors and, if deterrence fails, offer the most versatile and powerful weapons available.

Christmas should look like Norman Rockwell — but it sometimes resembles Norman Lear

Laurie Lounsbury

AARGHHHH!

I'm one of those people who gets stressed out during the holiday season. There's always too much to do in too little time. We've got to squeeze some forced gaiety into a hectic schedule and compulsively spend money we don't have, on things people don't need.

After analyzing the situation, I realized exactly what is at the root of my stress. It's the hopeless feeling that, while I'm woefully spending my last $20 and gaining five pounds from holiday fare, everyone else is experiencing a happy, Norman Rockwell Christmas season.

So fess up — are you all living the fantasy?

Norman Rockwell isn't the only culprit here. Clement Moore's poem also induces major guilt in me. Our Christmases never resemble the one in the poem.

'Twas the night before Christmas... (Christmas, 1997) In our home, 'twas 21 nights before Christmas and we were trying to get the lights dangled attractively on the outside of our house. We were doing a pretty good job of it when, inexplicably, the entire bunch of lights went dark.

"Did you read the directions?" I asked my new husband. "I think you're only supposed to put two strands on the same circuit."

Men don't like reading directions. It takes all the fun out of a project.

Instead of looking for the instructions (which were buried in the trash) Kevin insisted he could run all the strands of lights on one circuit. The fuses just needed a little tweaking. This involved doing something with little bits of tin foil that would definitely not get the Underwriter's Laboratory Seal of Approval.

After I fretted loudly about the house catching on fire, he chose to run the extra extension cords. Problem solved. Except for one defective section of lights that would only work when plugged directly into the outlet in our bedroom. Oh well....

The stockings were hung by the chimney with care... (Christmas, 1958) My mother also labored to achieve the perfect, Norman Rockwell Christmas. It must be a genetic defect that runs in our family. Our stockings, hand-knitted by Aunt Dode, were hanging from the mantelpiece. My mother had artistically draped pine boughs from the mantelpiece, in spite of my father's admonishments that they were hanging too close to the fireplace.

I'd received the present of my dreams — a Mr. Freezie snow cone maker — and was in the kitchen loading ice cubes into the contraption when it happened. With the first turn of the crank, the plastic handle broke and my vision of purple snow cones went up in smoke.

Coincidentally, so did our house.

My brother had stuffed all the wrapping paper into the fireplace and put a match to it without checking to see if the flu was open.

It wasn't.

The artistically-draped pine boughs caught on fire. While my father calmly evacuated us, mom valiantly ran into the living room and snatched Aunt Dode's knitted stockings from the mantle. Heaven forbid that a family tradition should go up in smoke.

Luckily, it was an El Nino winter in Chicago, so we weren't too cold standing around outside in our pajamas while the fire department doused the flames.

The children were nestled all snug in their beds, while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads... (Christmas, 1986-94) My kids don't dream of sugar plums — they have nightmares about mutant sugar cookies.

Year after year, I tried to have quality holiday time with my kids, cutting out bells and trees and angels from home-made dough. The problem was, I made lousy cookie dough.

"WE ARE HAVING FUN MAKING CHRISTMAS COOKIES AND DON'T YOU FORGET IT!" I lovingly told them while we worked with unwieldy dough. The result — the church bells looked like the hunchback of Notre Dame and Santa resembled the Son of Sam. We gave up and ate raw cookie dough, which resulted in peculiar dream patterns.

And mamma in her kerchief and I in my cap, had just settled down for a long winter's nap... (Christmas, 1990) I can relate to sleeping in head gear. One particularly cold Christmas Eve, the pilot light on our old furnace went out. I woke up at 3 a.m. to discover the indoor temperature had dropped to 50 degrees. When I checked on my kids, I found them hunkered down in bed, covers pulled tightly over their heads. Since I didn't know how to relight the pilot, I distributed ski hats and parkas to them. It was the first and only Christmas morning they slept in. I think their lowered body temperatures induced hibernation.

When up on the roof there arose such a clatter... (Christmas, 1994) Don't get your hopes up. It wasn't Santa. It was a wily squirrel trying to get down the chimney. Borrowing tactics we learned from the ATF at Waco, we smoked the vermin out of his hiding place.

I ran to the window and threw up the sash.... (Christmas, 1963) My best friend in grade school, Lanae, was quite a cut-up. For the school Christmas program, she and I were supposed to recite Clement Moore's poem, each of us taking turns to say a stanza. I had the stanza about running to the window and throwing up the sash. We were performing our recitation in front of hundreds of parents, sailing along without a single stammer when Lanae pulled her trick. When I said my line about throwing up the sash, Lanae had her profile to me so I couldn't see one side of her face. At the critical moment, she let loose with a bathrobe sash she'd been holding near her mouth. It looked like she threw up the sash, quite literally.

We laughed so hard our teacher dragged us from the stage, the poem left unfinished. It was a moment of total disgrace.

To this day, I cannot read or listen to that portion of the poem without laughing.

OK, throwing up sashes is not exactly Norman Rockwell, but it brings me warm, fuzzy memories of the Christmas season. So to each his own, and a happy holiday to everyone.

Mystery man in Scrapbook identified

In last week's scrapbook, we ran a photo of a man with three young girls at a sledding hill.

Teri Wilson, our office manager, correctly identified the hill as Dodger's Hill (also known as the Clinton Street Hill), but we still didn't know who the people in the photo were.

We received several phone calls identifying the man as the late Art Krulick, who worked for the city and maintained the sledding hill. We still don't know who the girls were in the picture.

Car club benefits community

This year marked the fifth year for the Street Legends' Annual Car Show in Charlevoix.

Back in July of 1991, a group of local "gear heads" and car enthusiasts got together and decided to form a car club for the Charlevoix area. The purpose of the group was to have fun and fellowship with others who enjoy working on cars, showing cars and going on "cruises" to other cities.

Once the club got going, it organized an annual car show, which is a two-day event, the same August weekend as sidewalk sale days in Charlevoix. By doing a car show, the club raises money to give something back to the community, and the following clubs and organizations received donations of over $3,300.

— Victims of Fireworks Fund - Bob Tambellini

— Club 77 - Scot Kelly

— Camp Quality - Eleanor West

— Charlevoix Humane Society - Martha Weisler

— D.A.R.E. - Rex Behling

— Charlevoix County Sheriff's Auxiliary - Rick Baker

In addition to the above recipients, a scholarship fund was established in 1995 to give a high school graduating senior $500 toward the vocational school or college of their choice.

The club meets once a month for a potluck or cruise, and membership is $15 a year. Street rods, muscle cars, trucks, antiques and the like are all part of the fun, but you do not have to own a car to belong to this great group of people. # Changes coming to Hayes Township

By Jamie MacMillan

The landscape of U.S. 31 where it winds through Hayes Township may be undergoing a major facelift.

During its meeting Monday evening, the Hayes Township Board approved a rezoning request that could pave the way for 40 new homes.

The rezone request involves 10 acres of land owned by James Fiedler off U.S. 31. His requested change from A-1, agriculture, to R-4, multiple family residential, increases the property's density from one unit per 10 acres to one unit for every quarter acre.

In September, township planners approved the request 5-2, but later found that not all the adjacent property owners had been notified of the public hearing, forcing planners to start the process over. Hearing the matter a second time did not change anyone's mind as the request was approved a second time in November. Leo Burnett and Nancy Nash voted against the request.

County planners had already approved the request, so the rezone went directly to the township board, who approved the request in a 4-1 vote. Township clerk Ethel Knepp cast the dissenting vote.

Fiedler said he's selling the land, and Richard Joseph, representing an undisclosed buyer, said preliminary plans are for affordable apartments or condominiums.

Meanwhile, across the street from Fiedler's land, the Charlevoix Country Club is hoping to build a greenhouse nursery on their 30 acres of land next to the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

Country Club developer Rik Lobenherz, who has a planned urban development agreement with the township, will meet with township planners Wednesday, Dec. 10 to go over plans. A first look at the plan shows a 12-acre nursery on 30 acres of land, with storage buildings to be constructed in the future.

The land is zoned agricultural, and a nursery is not considered a special use. According to Knepp, there is precedent for allowing a nursery in an agricultural district with the Wintergreen Nursery on Burnett Road.

Community scholarship named for Julius Gilbert

A new scholarship, established with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and named in honor of a longtime Charlevoix supporter and philanthropist, now will help one of the town's students attend The University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. The Julius W. Gilbert Memorial Scholarship will provide full tuition to a deserving graduate of Charlevoix High School, beginning this academic year.

The scholarship was created by Bob and Wally Klein, Detroit-area residents who spend their summers in Charlevoix. The Kleins wanted to honor a man they called a "good person, a good sportsman, a good citizen, and a good friend," while encouraging others who have enjoyed Charlevoix over the years to follow their lead and invest in the area's young people.

Each year, the new scholarship will award a full tuition grant for full-time undergraduate studies at The U of M's main campus. A committee of area professionals and educators will select a scholarship recipient from among graduating seniors at Charlevoix High School based on academic performance, extra-curricular activities, community service, and personal and school references. The Gilbert scholarship will be renewable each year, providing the student remains in good academic standing and meets other criteria.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for Charlevoix High School students," said Roberta Jackson, school superintendent. "The Klein's generosity will help to open the door to a world-class education at an exceptional university."

Applications for the Julius Gilbert Memorial Scholarship will be available in the high school counselor's office later this year, and the award will be announced at the year-end honors convocation.

For more information about the Julius Gilbert Scholarship, or other funds at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, call the Foundation office at 536-2440, or write c/o P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan, 49727.

Scholarships created for student trips to Europe

Every year during spring break, third and fourth year language students from Charlevoix High School travel to either France or Spain for a two week language immersion program. The experience not only sharpens students' language skills, it also broadens their cultural awareness.

The cost of such a unique educational opportunity is financially difficult for many students.

R.B. Lyons Inc. Marine Construction and 21st Century Newspapers have donated funds to help start a scholarship to send local students abroad. This scholarship is designed to assist students who would otherwise be unable to participate in the program due to financial restrictions.

The foreign travel experience gives students an advantage competing in a global society. The program allows the students to be more than just tourists in a foreign land; it allows them to live the foreign culture.

Anyone able to support this scholarship fund may send a tax-deductible donation to: Charlevoix Foreign Studies Scholarship Fund, 108 E. Garfield, Charlevoix. For more information, call Pete Scholten or Jamie Aumend at Charlevoix High School.

Condos coming to Hayes

In other news, planners scheduled a public hearing for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16 for a series of rezone requests. Eighteen parcels, all within a concentrated area along Villa, Maple Grove and Burnett roads are asking to be zoned R-2 instead of A-1. An R-2 zone allows for one housing unit per three-quarter acre. Knepp said most of the properties average just an acre in size, but one, owned by Ron Buckner, is 17 acres.

Knepp also said that proposed township legislation to restrict and regulate wireless communication towers is still being reviewed by township attorneys. She said she hopes public hearings on the matter can be held in January.

The township board next meets at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 12, 1998.

SPORTS

The Biddick's sailboat, Solstice, was moored near the Chicago Club boathouse, giving the race committee a close view of the action at the buoy placed nearby. The Cranberry Cup race marks the end of the Charlevoix Yacht Club racing season. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Cranberry Cup ends sailing season

It was a perfect day for the 10th annual Cranberry Cup last Sunday, 32 degrees with broken clouds and a few patches of snow on the ground to remind sailors of the season.

Winds were 5-15 knots, shifty and gusty from the Northwest.

The Biddick's volunteered their beautiful sailboat "Solstice" as race committee boat. They anchored at the East end of Round Lake, almost touching the Chicago Club boathouse.

This left almost no room for a starboard tack approach to the line, making starting tactics all the more interesting. The start line was about 50 yards long and kept the nine boat fleet very compressed.

Despite the crowds at both the starting line and mark roundings, no protests were filed and good sportsmanship was the rule of the day. Each race lasted about 14 minutes.

After four of the six races, seven boats were still within four points of each other, so it was anybody's regatta. In the last two races, H.S. Moisture Missile (Meier) took a first and third to salvage a two point victory over Hussy (Snyder). Gecko (Kuhn) took third overall, only five points out of first place.

Following the races, most of the boats headed for the launch ramp by Ferry Avenue and hauled out.

Awards presentations, accompanied by hot soup and chili, were held at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

Skipper Kevin Meier and crew, Dave Irish and Julie Jacobs of H.S. Moisture Missile, were presented the Cranberry Cup trophy. All top three boats received shirts and hats from Reynolds Sails.

Pig Dirty (Thwing) and Pygmalian (Carmichael), both from Tawas, received sportsmanship awards in recognition of their efforts to promote the J-22 class.

The skippers and crew members made the two-and-a-half hour drive north each Sunday for seven weeks to race in Charlevoix.

Colin Carr earns state honors

As he prepares for basketball season, Charlevoix junior Colin Carr continues to receive recognition for a break-out season on the football field.

The Detroit Free Press placed Carr, a running back and linebacker, on their honorable mention all-state list. The paper names a first team for each of the state's eight football classes, then hands out honorable mention status for the next in line under one grouping.

Last month, coaches from the Lake Michigan Division voted Carr first team all-conference.

Carr rushed for 1,056 yards and scored 11 touchdowns for the Rayders this season.

Three other area players made the list; John Kenoshmeg, quarterback-Harbor Springs; Mitch Shuman, running back-Petoskey; and Matt Farnsworth, lineman-Petoskey.

County gets federal emergency funds

Charlevoix and Emmet counties have been awarded federal funds under the Emergency Food & Shelter National Board Program.

The selection was made by a National Board that is chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and consists of representatives from Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Council of Jewish Federation, Catholic Charities, USA, National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA and United Way of America.

A local board will determine how the funds will be allocated.

Under the terms of the grant, local governmental or private voluntary organizations chosen to receive must be: (1) non-profit; (2) have an accounting system, (3) practice nondiscrimination, (4) have capabilities to deliver emergency food an/or shelter programs, and (5) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. Any organization meeting the criteria is urged to apply.

In Charlevoix County, monies were given to Salvation Army, Care & Share Food Pantry, Family Independence Agency Food Pantry, Women's Resource Center, Community Service Center and Charlevoix Community Food Pantry.

In 1997 for both counties, 48,000 meals were served, 93 people received utility and rent assistance, and 1,058 nights of lodging were provided. Many benefited from the $35, 480 that was awarded to Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

The first petunias caused a stink in town

By Marilyn Boss

Change comes hard for some people. The year was 1982, the first year of the Petunia project. With the beckoning of the new organization, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Dale began making plans to plant five miles of flowers from one end of the town to the other. There were many at every coffee shop who said it wouldn't work, and that he had lost his mind.

After getting approval from city council, the project began. With money from license plate sales, the petunias were ordered. One of the council members at the time was so upset that he came down to the site where the ditches were being dug out with a big grader. The dirt was piled along the street, waiting for the trucks to haul it away. The council member was yelling at Dale, "You're ruining the town! You're ruining the town!" We could understand everyone's apprehension, but we knew it would work out.

Dale wanted to use dry sludge from the local sewage department, which the city tank wagon took from the plant out to a north side location on city property, where it was left to dry. He was told that he could not use the dried sludge, because it might not be sanitary. To this day, he thinks it would be great for raising flowers. It was used for years at the city golf course by the late Walt Henley to raise beautiful petunias.

Instead of sludge, Tom Wieland donated liquid cow manure, which was hauled in John Campbell's big army tank wagon, which was donated. The day they applied the liquid manure, I got a frantic call from Bruce MacArthur, saying to run down and check out Dale, as he was overdoing, and was covered with manure. I drove down to see if Dale was all right, and there he was, walking behind the truck, carrying a four inch hose, letting the manure run into the ditches along the street. He was splattered with manure, laughing and having a great time. The smell was something else. A man went behind, rototilling the soil to work it in. When they came to the south hill, the liquid ran down the hill and into the 7 Eleven parking lot. The high school kids were coming with their cars, sliding sideways in the slop that was running all over the lot. A little of it was tracked into the store.

After several loads were applied, Charlevoix the Beautiful smelled like Charlevoix the barnyard. I was beside myself, but fortunately, it dissipated in a day or so.

When Dale came home about 7 p.m., the deputy sheriff pulled in the driveway with a warrant for his arrest. He said, "You were told not to put down sludge and you did it anyway." Dale told him he didn't use sludge, and said he was going to call K.C.B.'s attorney. He called Bruce, and said the deputy was taking him to jail. After much explanation, and with the attorney's help, the situation was resolved.

That first year, I rode on the back of our son's flat bed truck, sitting in a chair, and maneuvered a hose, which was connected to two, 300 gallon stock tanks with no lids on them. I was soaked to the skin many a morning, when the water would get sloshing. That year, there were many 40 degree mornings. Seeing the reality of the flowers made believers out of doubters. With several volunteers helping with the watering process, we managed to get through the first summer. Some kids in town played a trick on us. An informant told Dale to keep an eye on the flower beds to see what was growing. About a month later, we had a crop of marijuana growing in the beds across the street from St. Mary's Church. Rather than being upset, we used it as an advertising tool. Tom Dammann contacted the Detroit News and they printed his article on the front page, titled, "Charlevoix Petunias Go To Pot."

As we look back, we can laugh, although at the time some of the occurrences were no laughing matter. Every year we keep improving our operation, and we are still learning.

Utility Workers Union of America, Local 346 vice-president Ron Siwarga, NPS Energy Services administrative assistant Steffani Smalley and Char-Em United Way president and Big Rock Point human resources director Ellen Zienert celebrate the record $22,352 raised by Big Rock Point employees for United Way agencies. Siwarga, Smalley, Zienert and plant manager Don Hice coordinated the plant's campaign. "I'm extremely gratified to see our employees continue their commitment to the community even though Big Rock Point has ceased operation," said plant manager Don Hise. "It is also very encouraging to see our contractors demonstrate their commitment to the community through donations."

The sight of a familiar face

By Laurie Lounsbury

Even after his wife, Dorothy, died, Bill Kenney continued to donate money to the Women's Memorial in Washington, D.C.

He had no idea what a surprise he would get in return for his generosity.

Kenney gave to the war memorial honoring women who served in the armed forces because he knew how much it meant to his wife.

"Dorothy thought it was a great thing — she said it was about time they did something like that," Bill said.

Ten years ago, Dorothy started to support the women's memorial, even though she suspected she wouldn't live to see it completed.

She was right.

After struggling with a long bout of illness, Dorothy died in May, 1995.

The memorial was dedicated in October of this year.

As a regular donor, Bill recently received the 1998 Women's Memorial calendar.

When Bill got the calendar, he took one glance at the fine print and nearly pitched it in the garbage. The dates were hard to read and the squares for each day were too small for his use.

"I nearly threw it out, but I decided I'd at least take a quick look at it first," Bill said.

When he turned to the month of February, Bill was surprised to see a caption with his wife's maiden name in it.

"When I saw the name Dorothy Dickson I looked at the picture more carefully," Bill said. There he saw a photo of his late wife, taken in 1946, shaking hands with Dwight Eisenhower.

Bill had never seen the picture before.

"It really surprised me — I don't know where they got that picture," Bill said.

After her death, Bill sent a picture of Dorothy with another nurse to the war memorial fund raising committee. He had no idea why the group was soliciting old photos, but figured it was for the education center, which accompanies the memorial. The picture he sent wasn't used in the calendar. Instead, Bill saw a moment of history he'd only heard about in his wife's war stories.

"She told me she met him in Japan, but in my mind, I thought it was MacArthur she met, not Eisenhower," Bill said.

As soon as Dorothy graduated from nursing school in Philadelphia, her entire class enlisted in the U.S. Army.

"That was pretty unusual, to have a whole class go into the Army," Bill said.

Dorothy served in the Philippines, then later in Japan. Her picture with Eisenhower was taken in 1946 in Kyoto, Japan.

After the war, Dorothy and her graduating class continued to get together every year. Through the reunions, Bill got to know Dorothy's friends. He recognized some of them in the calendar pictures.

Not a typical calendar filled with pin-up girls, the women's memorial calendar is filled with black and white photos of women who served our country in uniform, starting in World War II and continuing through the Vietnam War.

Now, a calendar that was headed for the trash holds a prominent position in Bill's life.

"I've been showing it around to everyone," Bill said. "It's nice to have."

Airport runway will be extended in spring

By Lisa Wheat
Courier special writer

Renovations will be seen at the Charlevoix city airport, due to a couple of grants received from the the Michigan Aeronautics Commission. The two grants were received Monday, Dec. 8 and will fund renovations for the terminal and runway.

"We are real pleased to receive these grants and we hope they will allow us to provide better service and a better facility," said Loraine Luepnitz, airport manager.

The $228,000 runway grant will pay for an extension of 250 feet to both ends of runway 927. This will give the runway 4,800 usable feet.

The additional feet added to the runway is a safety feature that will give planes the ability to fly in a variety of weather conditions. Expanded run-outs and turn-around area will be among the additions.

The length of the runway will be similar to what it was before it was shortened due to renovations in the early 1990s. The runway was shortened because at the time, federal and state funds could not be used on runways over 4,300 feet in length. Had they kept the 200 feet, the city would have had to pay 100% of the cost in renovating the runway. According to the grant received last Monday, the cost of renovations will be paid 90% by the state and 10% by the city.

The second grant provides $75,000 to make improvements on the terminal. The original amount requested in the grant was $385,000. As Luepnitz considers changing the plans and reducing the costs of the project, one option is to do part of the work now and the rest when more funds are available.

The desired projects to the terminal would include expanding office space and waiting room areas, and making the terminal handicapped accessible. The grants came from the Michigan Aeronautics commissions, an organization that oversees and administers the safety standards and regulations for the state.

It was incorrectly printed in last week's Courier that the Bartsch Family would be appearing in a Christmas concert at the East Upright Church of God at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19. The date is actually Wednesday, Dec. 17.

We regret the error.

Landfill expansion in hands of county planners

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners reaffirmed their stance on the Cedar Ridge Landfill expansion at the last commission meeting.

Commissioners duplicated their 4-2 vote from last month to send the expansion request to county planners instead of a solid waste committee. Carl Price, James Behling, Vic Patrick and Shirley Roloff voted in favor of the motion while Phil Johnson and Joan Blanchard voted against.

The decision was returned to the agenda because some commissioners feared their vote last month could be misconstrued since it did not appear on the agenda.

Chairman Phil Johnson was assured by county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur that their actions had been legal, but Johnson said its reappearance on the agenda was to quell any worries the board may have had.

Before this vote the board heard concerns from Nowland Lake residents, who were absent at last month's meeting, about the landfill's expansion.

John Yaroch said the residents' property value loss due to the future expansion was "very real" but they could accept it if the landfill was required to be capped after this expansion.

"Then we all could at least see an end to this," he said. "To sandwich this thing in between two beautiful watersheds in this county does no good."

Resident Bob Walker took offense to the fact that the item was voted on in November without any notice and referred to those who voted in favor as the "infamous four."

Walker went on to accuse board members of lying about their intentions and Waste Management for paying off people to write in support of expansion and littering the area with illegal amounts of waste hauled in from all points.

"It's out of control," Walker said. "They bring in waste from all over the state, they could take in waste from Canada, Mexico or turn Ironton into an international waste area and make it a port."

Waste management officials in the room denied paying people a stipend to voice support. Others in the room were more vocal to Walker's comments.

"These accusations of bribes, payoffs and back room deals, we don't need that kind of aggravation in our county," said Tad Malpass of East Jordan Iron Works, a supporter for landfill expansion.

Sending the matter to the county planning commission makes the landfill's expansion a matter of zoning. If they meet all the requirements, then planners have no choice but to grant expansion.

According to Don Pizzurro, manager of the 40-acre Cedar Ridge Facility, the expansion request is for just over 12 acres, which would give Cedar Ridge another 11 years of capacity. Originally, the request was for 15 acres, but it was reduced to avoid an unmarked grave site discovered on the property. Now, the landfill has approximately three years of capacity left.

In other action, the board set a public hearing on a proposed animal control ordinance for 7:00 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 21, 1998. The ordinance would require annual licensing of dogs older than six months by March 1 at a cost of $6, or $3 if the dog is neutered. Every

Beanie Babies bring in bucks for others

By Laurie Lounsbury

Beanie Babies are hot items for merchants lucky enough to have them in stock. It can mean thousands of extra dollars in the cash register during the holiday shopping season.

At the Rocking Horse Toy Company, owners Kathy and Andy Bultman have rare, retired Beanie Babies, which bring in much higher prices than the new releases.

But it won't be the Bultman's who will benefit from the lumpy little critters' popularity.

It will be charitable groups — the Venctian Fireworks Victims Fund, Women's Resource Center, Salvation Army and Planned Parenthood — who will find something extra in their Christmas stockings.

"We thought that since Beanie Babies were such a hot commodity for the holidays, someone should benefit other than ourselves," Kathy Bultman said.

So the Bultmans created the Beanie Giving Tree. The retired and hard-to-find Beanie Babies are hanging on a twig tree in the front window of the Rocking Horse. Customers may select a Beanie Baby, ranging in price from $10 to $50, then select a charitable organization to receive the proceeds from the sale.

So far, the Venetian Fireworks Victims Fund has received over $1,000. Hundreds of dollars have been raised for the other three groups.

Customers seem to like the idea of raising money for charity through holiday sales.

"We've gotten a great response to this," said Ronnie Egger, sales associate.

"One woman came in and said, 'I don't need a Beanie Baby, but I want to help. Can I just make a donation and you keep the Beanie Baby?'" Bultman said.

Peace the bear, valued at $60, is already sold out. Among the other retired collectibles swinging on the giving tree branches are Doodles the rooster ($50), Velvet the panther ($18) and Speedy the turtle ($16).

The Rocking Horse Toy Company is across from East Park on Bridge Street.

"Joy of Cooking" author has ties to Charlevoix

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

By Edith Gilbert

The Charlevoix network is alive and well, and full of Joy!

I just finished reading the detailed biography of the successful cookbook authority, Irma Rombauer, of St. Louis. Her Joy Of Cooking has sold over 14 million copies, since the first 3,000 copies were privately printed in 1931, during the depth of the great depression and after her husband's death. It was regularly reprinted and revised until 1975. Now, after more than a 20 year lapse, the newly released, up-to-date publication, masterminded by grandson Ethan Becker, is well worth your investment, even though he's dropped the famous local tomato pudding recipe.

And thereby hangs the tale.

According to Irma's biography, Stand Facing The Stove, the Rombauers leased a cottage for many summers at Bay View. Home cooks will be interested to learn that Irma's claim to fame in the cooking department was launched one summer, when she enrolled in a cake decorating class at Bay View.

She was never noted as a real cook. Her brother, Max, once exclaimed, when told that Irma was writing a cookbook, "Worst idea I ever heard of. Why she's a terrible cook!"

Instead, her forte always rested on her charm and ability to collect good recipes from her friends and families, who came from a tightly knit German community in St. Louis. Her original collection of German cake recipes — Stollen, Apfelstrudel and Blitzkuchen — are not to be found in the new edition, so do hang on to her old cookbooks. They have now given way to Tiramisu and Sicilian Cassata. Thank goodness her traditional family's birthday almond cake remains.

Her skill and determination in collecting helpful recipes from friends and organizing them in a new, easy-to-follow style, is exactly how the old Joy of Cooking was born to succeed.

An example of her determination is well-documented by local contacts. Because she had to give up the cottage in Bay View in 1930, she stayed instead at the Dilworth Lodge in Horton Bay, which was frequented by many guests from St. Louis. We've been told that while there, Irma asked Kathryn Dilworth, if she would like to work with her on this new cookbook. Mrs. Dilworth declined to do so at that time because she was too busy. However, thanks to her daughter-in-law, Dee Dilworth, we have an undated letter, presumably written in the late 1930s, asking for recipes.

Dear Mrs. Dilworth,

You have not heard from me for many years and now I am writing with a practical, not a social purpose — but it is nice to be in touch with you again.

As I remember, you were very kind to a very new and very much shattered widow (1930). I have never forgotten it. Many belated thanks.

How are you all, I wonder? I remember your family well and of course, one does not forget such efficiency and competency as you showed in all you did. It would be fun to get together for an exchange of recipes. I have endless new ones, some of them very good.

This struggle to make good dishes with scant means is difficult. So many cooks continue to demand the good food of 20 years ago without the money to meet the higher prices — I am so tired of suggesting compromise meals and hearing, "Why, my family wouldn't eat that!" I eat "that" and enjoy it. How about your girls?

My love to all of you. I am sincerely sorry to trouble you with a request. Scribble anything helpful on a sheet and stick it in this envelope, please.

Many thanks. Kindly return the letter. Thanks.

Most cordially yours,
Irma S. Rombauer

According to Dee Dilworth, there are several slightly altered recipes in Joy Of Cooking from Kathryn's book, printed in 1937, titled My Tomato Pudding And Other Favorite Recipes. This homey, little book is still available at the Boyne City Book Store for $10. In my 1964 edition of Joy, I find Tomato Pudding Cockaigne, which is similar, but not the same, as in the book printed by Kathryn Dilworth. (Those who have copies of my book, All About Parties, will note a recipe shared with me by Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower for this popular local accompaniment to fried chicken and dumplings.) Yet another slightly altered recipe in Joy from the Dilworth book is called Sweet Potatoes and Apples, but according to Dee Dilworth, there are other favorite recipes in Joy as well.

While reading Rombauer's biography, I was also pleasantly surprised to come upon the name of my late friends, the Charles Rices.

This prominent St. Louis family summered in Charlevoix for many years at 415 Michigan Ave., a house now owned by Mrs. Frank Rothschild.

More than that, I vividly remember Mrs. Rice's 80th birthday party during the 1940s. She got permission to close off Michigan Avenue to traffic, hired a pianist to play in the middle of the street, and everyone danced in their evening gowns until the wee hours of the morning. Those were the days!

I was also blessed to have the services of her wonderful cook, Marie Black, for a few summers, who taught me most of what I know about cooking. She shared a number of Mrs. Rice's recipes with me. Unfortunately, they don't do anyone much good these days, because they say things like, "Go to the butcher and buy 25 cents worth of soup meat —"

Finally, you may wonder at the

Letters to the editor

Editor:

Every community needs economical, convenient waste disposal for families and business. Waste Management is one of the largest multi-national corporations in the world. While they have access to the most current technologies, the decisions they make are business decisions, and it is imperative that the interests of the Charlevoix community and Charlevoix County be insured and protected by the county commissioners and county planners.

The Charlevoix County Commissioners must protect the interests of individuals and the community as a whole. There is a price to pay for hosting landfills. The expansion of the Cedar Ridge Landfill negatively impacts its neighbor, the Nowland Lake community. The landfill also is located within three creek watersheds, all of which flow to the south arm of Lake Charlevoix. There should be an independent monitoring and recording of all waste coming into the landfill. The need for waste disposal sites grows every day. Counties using the services of the Charlevoix landfill should have reciprocal agreements to take Charlevoix's waste. There will be no end to the need for landfills — the commissioners will be revisited when the new expansion is filled. Unless Charlevoix County wishes to become the landfill mecca of northern Michigan, (and more) we must PLAN for the future.

The Charlevoix County Commissioners should take the lead in working for responsible "material recovery management." RECYCLING! While we work to teach our children responsible stewardship; to reduce, reuse and recycle, conscious recycling in Charlevoix is not easy. Monetarily, the more waste the landfill receives, the greater their profit. In spite of this, Waste Management offered to initiate a recycling program for Charlevoix County in exchange for being allowed to expand the landfill. The Commissioners should jump on this with all 12 feet if they allow the expansion. Compostables should not go in the landfill. (The City of Charlevoix has a great program. The other cities should follow their composting program.) Cardboard and paper must be recycled. Ultimately we should work for convenient, (curb side?) cost effective recycling.

The future is in our hands. We cannot sustain a healthy environment if we do not learn more responsible, and in the end, cost efficient life styles. Stewardship of our community resources and conscientious use of resources are necessary steps in creating sustainable lifestyles.

JoAnne Beemon

The work is piling up

By Jamie MacMillan

How many businesses can claim a profit increase of over 13,000 percent during their first 15 years of existence?

A reasonable guess would be not many, but the ones that do would have people clamoring for a share of its stock.

Charlevoix has a business venture that can claim such an increase.

That business is the Charlevoix Middle School Christmas Food Drive, which is in its 16th season of collecting food and money for the community food pantry.

"Everyone is all fired up and from all accounts we should be on a record setting pace," said Tom Sothard, middle school teacher and food drive coordinator.

More charity than business, the venture began in 1981 as a way to help the needy during the holidays and stress to the community the positive role middle school-aged children can play.

That first year, the drive hauled in 300 food items, which Sothard recalled being proud of because it averaged an item per student in the school. Immediately the program garnered steam, doubling their output in the second year before tilting the scales at 3,000 items in 1983.

The sudden increase had to do with turning the drive into a contest between homeroom classes to see who can gather the most goods. The prize the students vie for is the Golden Corn award, a trophy-like encased can of corn.

Last year, Robin Berry's class won the venerable award, bringing in 8,000 food items as the school set a record of 40,000 items collected during the three-week span. Sothard explained that the drive used to consist only of food, but has for years been collecting money for the food pantry as well. For scoring purposes, each dollar raised equals four food items.

"It's meaningful to help the community," seventh grader Jim Shepherd said. "There are people in our community who need our support."

Beginning last year, the drive has been spurred on by local businesses matching the donations of the winning class. LexaLite matched Berry's class' total while this year Citizen's Bank will match the winning total.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

College kids across the country are going through a mixture of emotions this week. They feel anxiety because it is final exam time and relief because Christmas break starts this Friday. One of the things I had to do as a part of a doctoral class was to design a personal code of ethics; principles that I operate my life by. On the surface, you might think that would be a fairly easy assignment. In fact, one of the area school superintendents who was in the class with me said, "Bruce, that ought to be a snap for you. Just start at commandment number one and work your way down through number 10." A tempting thought, but the task called for it to be an original piece of work.

Here's one of the statements I settled on. As a pastor, I pledge to look for the good in all who cross my path. Some will come with ideas and opinions that may seem different from my own. But I must never forget that there is an event, a reason, or deep-seated belief behind most every human thought. It is my role to help an individual explore those thoughts, evaluate them and develop or discard them in our shared quest for a truly fulfilling life.

Now I don't claim that's a perfect notion by any means. But it has really prompted me to search my own heart and my own spirit and ask God what it is that I really believe, what principles I am building my life on. I hope you realize how important an issue that is not just for me, but for each and every one of us. If we are to be the children God has called us to be, there must be some principles. There must be a solid spirit foundation girding every action of our hearts.

Bearing in mind that it's almost Christmas, I am in awe of the spiritual integrity of the three wise men. What truly sensitive people they must have been to have their hearts moved by that holy star! How they must have been seeking God's direction all their lives for that marvelous beacon to influence them so when it appeared for the first time! If you are willing to follow your heart, you may be surprised at the doors it will open and the clues it will reveal in your own pursuit of God's will. When you follow your heart, you will come to value the fundamental principles that are so crucial for being a man or woman of faith.

In some shopping, I ran across a "365 Inspirational Sayings" calendar. One of the days read, "A Christian is like a good watch — he has an open face, busy hands, is made of pure gold, is well regulated and full of good works." I love the open faces and good works of the wise men. I love the innocence and holy boldness I see in them as they waltz straight into the courts of Herod and ask, "Where is the new king?" People who really live by their principles are going to have the innocence and boldness that goes along with following their hearts. They would walk into a den of lions if necessary to do what their hearts tell them is right. They will go or do things that others might hesitate to attempt because they know the peace that comes from realizing God has already gone before them to mark their path. When you follow your heart, the principles God lays out for it to live by will bring that same peace in even the most challenging situation you can imagine.

Charles G. Struthers

Rev. Charles, G. Struthers, 81, a missionary and educator, died Sunday, Dec. 7, at his home in East Norriton, Montgomery County. Pa. He was the husband of Florence J. (Palmer) Struthers, his helpmate of 57 years.

Born Nov. 8, 1916 in Charlevoix County, he was a son of John Richmond and Ann (Sauder) Struthers. He was raised on the family dairy farm in Charlevoix County. He attended medical school for three years at the Kirksville Osteopathic College in Missouri before being called to become a missionary. Because of his special interest in teaching, he completed a masters degree in education at Ball State University, Phi Delta Kappa. For 12 years, he served in Jamaica as a clergyman, missionary and educator. In Jamaica, he was principal of a secondary school and director of a theological seminary.

Upon returning to the United States, he remained active in church affairs and pursued his career in education. He taught in the Lower Providence District and in the Philadelphia School systems, retiring as a counselor in 1982. He had been active in the Church of God denomination and was a member of the Church of God at Lansdale. He also volunteered at Suburban General Hospital in East Norriton.

In addition to his wife, Florence, he is survived by two sons; John William Struthers, D.O., and his wife, Martha, of Northville, Mich., Frederick R. Struthers, D.O., and his wife, Mary, of Furlong, Pa.; nine grandchildren and one great granddaughter; one brother, Howard Struthers, and his wife, Mona; and two sisters, Ruth Berg and Leona Bartlett and her husband, Bruce K; all of Charlevoix.

He has a large family tree including many nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by a sister, Beatrice Richardson, and five brothers; Clifford, Richard, Mervin, Clarence and Raymond Struthers.

Please do not send flowers. Donations in his name may be made to the Community Church of God in Charlevoix. Memorial service and burial will take place in the spring.

Arrangements are being made with Huff and Lakjer Funeral Home in Lansdale, Pa.

County picks up bill for 911 budget crisis

township or city treasurer would receive 25 cents for every dog licensed in their borders.

It would also give the county the power to prosecute anyone in violation of rules set forth in the ordinance such as dogs running loose, creating a nuisance, or trespassing on property. Fines for violations range from $100 to 90 days in jail to confiscation of animal in violation.

The board also approved spending $16,000 to cover the county's final portion of the tri-county 9-1-1 over budget crisis. Earlier, the board had spent $25,000 to get the emergency system through the month of November. This new money is expected to get the system through the end of the year.

The over spending at 9-1-1 was created by unapproved hiring of full time staff members, an unexpected turnover in staff which required more double-shifting for training, and higher than expected equipment costs.

Cheboygan and Emmet counties both chipped in $25,000 when Charlevoix did, but to get the system through this final stage Cheboygan County will pay $13,000 while Emmet County will pay $21,000.

In response to new funds being diverted to 9-1-1, the board also put a freeze on departmental spending through the end of 1997.

The board next meets 1 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 30 in the county building.

Middle school students are driving for donations

"Corporations coming in has really helped us attain a different level," Sothard said. "Everybody has kind of looked at this as the ultimate Christmas act in the spirit of giving."

How powerful has the food drive become? Not only do the students' efforts enable the food pantry to survive for seven months, but they were also able to turn last week's thirty point loss to rival Petoskey in basketball into a victory.

Through a pledge drive based on how many baskets the Rayders swished, the team's 73 points helped raise $4,000.

"It's a snowball of good will," Sothard said.

"People really believe in what we're doing and I'm just glad to be a part of it."

Sears store has new owner

By Lisa Wheat
Courier special writer

Jim Quick brings his 26 years of experience in Sears as a regional financial manager to the Charlevoix store. As of Nov. 9, he is the new owner, and one who is certainly well-qualified for the job.

Quick retired from Sears as a financial manager in May of 1991 and started in golf course management.

At the time, he was living in Oregon. In 1995, he moved to Harbor Springs and worked at the golf course at Boyne Highlands.

The good environment for raising his two daughters was what brought him to this area.

Quick found out in October that the Charlevoix store was in need of an owner. In three short weeks, he was signing the ownership papers in Chicago.

The store will continue to keep a good variety of stock. 1998 will bring a new line of Maytag laundry systems, but all other lines will be the same.

Quick wants to emphasize delivery and customer service.

"We want to maintain the good reputation Sears has always had in the community and enhance customers in any way we can," he said.

Who will come out on top this season?

Boyne City a league favorite

By Jamie MacMillan

A pair of all-staters, family feuds, and an expected photo finish between at least three teams set the stage for this year's Lake Michigan Division Boys' Basketball season.

The conference slate began Tuesday night with a contest between Elk Rapids and East Jordan and will continue with three games this Friday.

"This is the third straight year the league has gotten tougher," Del Ingalls, head coach at East Jordan, said. "I don't expect any game to be a cakewalk."

Ingalls' Red Devil squad, along with Boyne City, were mentioned by most coaches as front runners for the league crown based on the play of each squads' ace player.

Jason Rozycki, a first team all-state honoree last year, returns to lead a Boyne City club that placed second in the league last year, yet advanced to the regional finals where they fell to Benzie Central.

Rozycki will be the league's dominant scorer after averaging 21 points a game last year and he'll be joined by a group of seniors that, through their ascension to the varsity level, have lost just nine games: Jessie Belford, Billy Case, Matt Johnecheck and Bo Reinhardt. Each started or contributed heavy minutes off the bench for last year's 17-8 squad. Rambler coach Kevin Fitzpatrick is worried about a lack of a post player but feels his team's athleticism can overcome that hole.

The Red Devils will counter with their own all-stater, point guard Parke Bluhm who earned fourth-team honors last year after scoring 17 points a game. East Jordan will have a balanced attack this year with forwards Scott Haley, who averaged 15 points and 10 rebounds a game in 1996-97, and defensive stoppers Matt Shaw and Mike Mazella.

The Red Devils weaknesses were exposed in two opening week non-conference losses, Ingalls said. They struggled against Gaylord when Bluhm was forced to the bench with foul trouble and Cheboygan out muscled the Devils, an athletic yet not overly physical squad.

When pressed to pick a favorite, though, fingers were pointed toward Traverse City St. Francis. After all, the Glads won the league last year with a 10-1 record, 17-2 overall. They won their class "D" district before bowing out in the quarterfinals to Detroit East Catholic.

Coach Ron Fewins has his top seven players back, including his two top players Jason Pratt and Greg Doherty, both of whom averaged 14 points per game last year. Joel Hardy and Tony Willis, three year varsity players, along with Steve Reamer round out their starting five.

When Kalkaska and Elk Rapids meet up in Kalkaska on Jan. 23, more than just a conference game will be at stake — it will be a matter of family bragging rights.

Ray Graham and his Elk Rapid Elks will square off against the Blazers and their new head coach Brett Graham, Ray's son.

"It'll be fun, but it'll be real bizarre coaching against not just my father but Elk Rapids," said Brett, who played for his father in high school and was an assistant with him the last three seasons.

"I think it'll be a good rivalry," added Ray.

Many labeled the elder Graham's club as a dark horse in the league race. He returns his top eight players from last year's sophomore dominated club that went 10-10 overall, 6-6 in league play. The Elks have four players who scored between 11 and 14 points a game last year with Ryan Reiter, Will Tegel, Marcel Thibert, and Eddie Wierzbicki.

Charlevoix appears to be a year away from contending, as their roster is dominated by a talented, yet inexperienced junior class. No coach put the Rayders into the title hunt, but many feared that with the new talent and new system they could end the season as the league's most improved and dangerous team.

Meanwhile, Harbor Springs bid adieu to seven seniors from last year's 9-11 squad. Coach Randy Bingham's squad will shift their defensive philosophy from zone to a pressing style to take advantage of their quickness and guard play. The Rams, while not expected to be in the hunt, will surprise people if the three-point shooting they exhibited in their 86-52 opening night win over Pellston becomes consistent. They swished 11 treys, with four players making at least two.

"Everyone can beat anyone," Fitzpatrick said. "Don't be surprised to see someone go to Elk Rapids on a Tuesday and lose and then to Harbor Springs on a Friday and win."

Rayders roll up points, but not enough for the wins

Team closes the point gap in their second game of the season

By Jamie MacMillan

Despite averaging 74.5 points a game, the Charlevoix Rayders dropped their first two contests of the season last week.

On Tuesday, the Rayders were clubbed by Petoskey 103-73. The Friday night game against Whittmore-Prescott was tighter, but results were the same, with the Rayders losing 80-76.

The Rayders were never in the game with the Northmen, falling behind 16-2 in the game's first four minutes. Charlevoix closed the gap to 33-24 early in the second quarter, but Petoskey rebounded to take a 61-33 halftime lead.

Jim Kanine led all Charlevoix scorers with 14 points.

Against the Cardinals, a similar fate befell the Rayders as they fell behind early and by a lot of points. At one point they trailed 28-10 before trimming the intermission deficit to 10 points.

"We were not ready to play and they rolled us early," Haske said.

The Rayders scrapped to tie the game in the fourth quarter, but fouls and free throw shooting nipped them in the end. The Rayders missed five of six free throws in the game's last minute while Kanine, Matt McClellan and Justin Thorp fouled out of the game as the final stanza wore on.

Overall, the Rayders made 16 of 36 free throw attempts.

"I thought we improved our play in the second half, we just couldn't get over the top once we tied the score," Haske said.

Tom Cunningham led all Rayder scorers with 14 points. Kanine chipped in 12, Colin Carr had 12 and Brian Ward had nine. Matt Dennis was the team's top rebounder with eight while McClellan swiped nine steals and dished out seven assists.

The JV team split their games last week, losing 62-56 to Petoskey and winning 71-68 over Whittmore-Prescott.

Shay Hutchison scored 21 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and handed out six assists in the win over Whittmore-Prescott. Adam Wood chipped in 18 points.

The Rayders play at St. Ignace Tuesday, Dec. 16 before a home game with Traverse City St. Francis Friday, Dec. 19. The JVs tip off both nights at 6 p.m.

After being stomped in their first game 83-46 to Petoskey, the Charlevoix freshmen basketball team bounced back with a trouncing of their own — 62-39 — over Cheboygan.

Coach Brandon Bruce said the difference between the two games was that the Rayders slashed their turnovers from 22 against Petoskey to just 10 in the win over the Chiefs. They also dominated on the glass, grabbing 39 rebounds.

Ben Coen led the way with 26 points and nine rebounds while Ryan Leitner and Zach Dennis each added seven points. Leitner, Ben VanGuilder and Corey Bascom each had six rebounds.

Varsity basketball league standings through Monday, Dec. 15.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO APPROVE A REMEDIAL ACTION PLAN

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) has received a proposed Remedial Action Plan (RAP) for the Medusa Portland Cement Company (Medusa) site, located at 16000 Bell's Bay Road, Charlevoix, MI 49720. This site is the location of environmental contamination which may have resulted from disposal of cement kiln dust (CKD) in uncontained areas. The disposal practice, which has occurred since 1967, has resulted in contaminants (heavy metals) leaching into the soils and groundwater. The impacted groundwater vents to the Medusa quarry and is then pumped to Lake Michigan through an outfall that is regulated by a surface water discharge permit.

This notice is provided according to the requirements of Part 201 of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, 1994 PA 451, as amended, MCL 324.20101 et seq, or the Part 201 Rules, 1990 AACS R 299.5101 et seq, to notify interested persons that the MDEQ has reviewed the proposed RAP and finds it to be in compliance with the requirements of the Act and the administrative rules for the Act. This notice is provided to allow for public comment prior to final approval of the proposed plan.

This notice is to provide a brief summary of the proposed remedial action, offer an opportunity for public review and comment, and provide for a public meeting near the facility if requested.

Written public comments will be accepted until January 18, 1998. The MDEQ will carefully consider and address significant public comments before a final decision is made regarding the proposed plan.

The RAP consists of conducting a limited industrial closure under the Part 201 regulations for the area consisting of CKD Piles 6, 7 and 9. The company shall place final cover over Pile 9 and relocate Piles 6 and 7 to a proposed Type III industrial waste landfill over a five year period. The final cover shall consist of a 60-mil High Density Polyethylene Liner (HDPE) and two feet of clay. The new landfill is proposed to be located on top of Pile 9. The closure area will be monitored by groundwater monitoring wells and surface water outfall sampling points. A financial assurance mechanism of approximately $2,000,000 will be provided to the DEQ assuring the completion of the remedial action. In addition, a declaration of restrictive covenant will be placed on the property restricting any activities that may interfere with the operation and maintenance, monitoring, or other measures necessary to assure the effectiveness and integrity of the remedial action.

A copy of the complete remedial action Volume 1 proposal, including site investigation data, is available for review at the Charlevoix Public Library and MDEQ Grayling Field Office, during normal business hours. This review period will not be less than 30 calendar days from the date of this publication.

SCRAPBOOK

From the Archives

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

Since the inception of this column I have sought to enlighten readers about Charlevoix's rich past and the importance it still plays in the area's current events. With that in mind I want to relate how I research and create each article.

Each month I choose a topic that is important in Charlevoix's past or related to a current news story. With this approach I hope to bring history into your lives regardless of the years that might appear to separate you.

After I select a topic I use the resources available at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum archives. Thus the name, "From the Archives." These materials include local newspapers of Charlevoix, such as the Charlevoix Sentinel, Journal, Democrat and present day Courier. Other sources, not even available outside of the archives, include rare maps, oral histories, scrapbooks, photographs, biographies and other related documents.

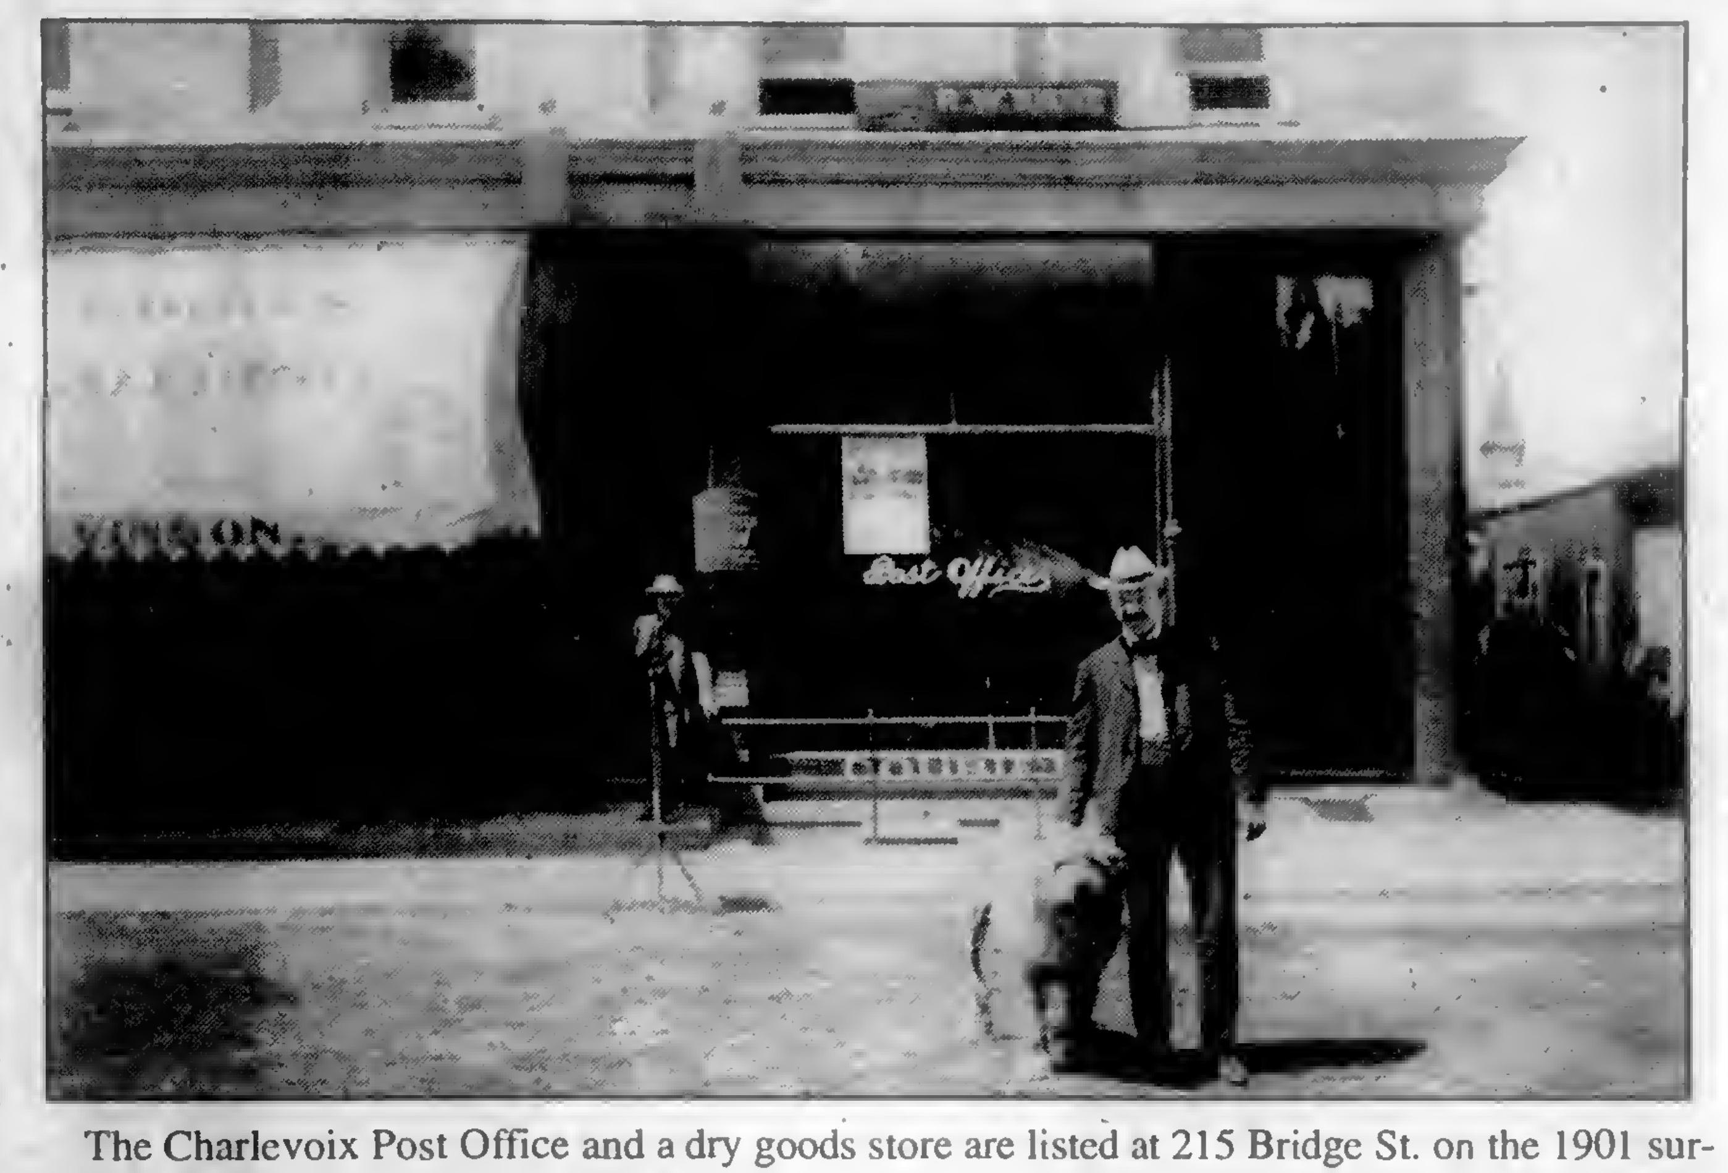
After working with Betsy Reynolds, the executive director, to gather the necessary and available information from these archival sources I try to begin the writing process. What I present is an article that I hope will entice the reader to do some of their own research or questioning of the past.

While this sometimes brings about speculation from my readers, it is better to question my facts when you feel you're not sure than to reluctantly let them pass for historical truth. And while history is seen and remembered in many different ways by many different people, my goal is to provide a story solid in reliable and factual information.

Any informational additions to my articles are welcome as they can only bolster the information already available at the Harsha House Museum.

In the future, as more articles are presented, I hope to see more letters to the editor providing pertinent information to Charlevoix's rich historical record from readers who experienced it or who are currently studying it.

You may also forward information directly to the archives by contacting the Harsha House Museum by phone at 547-0373 or by mail at the Charlevoix Historical Society, 103 State St., Charlevoix, MI



The Charlevoix Post Office and a dry goods store are listed at 215 Bridge St. on the 1901 survey of the Sanborn Fire Insurance maps at the Harsha House Museum. This building, which was built in 1901, also housed the Telephone Exchange, Levinson and Company and Trademark Clothier in later years. The Sanborn maps also list the Post Office at 217 Bridge St. in 1890, later the Charlevoix State Savings Bank address. The Van Pelt Building, built in 1909, was home for the post office in 1927. During the years 1934-1942, the post office was located at 413 Bridge St., later a bakery and now a restaurant. Notice the Courier office was below the the post office. # Jordan River Arts Council brings music to town

As part of its ongoing community arts education mission, the Jordan River Arts Council is sponsoring a mini-musical series during January, February and March. There will be one performance each month focusing on different musical genres, including contemporary, jazz and classical music. The object is to bring information and entertainment to both adults and young people that might otherwise not be easily accessible.

The daytime portion of the series will bring a group to an area school each month for hands-on experience, a lecture, question and answer and performance time period. The selected school will, in turn, host a smaller school to the event to share the experience.

The evening portion of the series will bring quality entertainment, along with great food, to adults in the area. The Grey Gables will be presenting three distinct venues to comply with the music genre of the evening. Dinner packages are $25 per person and reservations may be made by calling the Grey Gables at 547-9261 or J. Dalto at 582-2867.

The series begins Friday, Jan. 16 with Altitude, a contemporary pop group featuring Tom Kaufman, better known in the area as Tink of Tinkertoons Music. Tom was featured at the Grey Gables for five years and locals are awaiting his guest appearance.

Feb. 13 the presentation will be an evening of jazz with the Jeff Haas Trio and Friends, featuring a special guest artist, Marvin Kahn. The group is returning for a second year, with a Valentine's evening of romance and swing. The final date, March 20, will focus on a classical group, the Gailliard Quartet. The quartet, with violins, viola and cello, will bring beautiful music and be featuring two guest artists from Interlochen.

A random act of kindness

By Laurie Lounsbury

When seen through the eyes of newcomers, Charlevoix can look a bit like the mythic Bedford Falls in the movie, It's a Wonderful Life.

Pristine snow glitters on the ground and the town Christmas tree glows brightly while children's ornaments dance in the breeze.

At other times, Charlevoix is just plain dark and cold, like hundreds of other communities north of the 45th parallel.

But Charlevoix has one thing to keep it warm and bright, even on the darkest of days — the kindness of the people who live here.

It was a dark, dreary night when new Charlevoix residents Joe and Carrie Ferguson experienced car trouble.

Coming back from Petoskey on a Sunday evening, the Ferguson's car broke down on U.S. 31 near Martin Road.

A small mechanical failure soon turned into a big problem.

They had no friends to call, no business associates they knew well enough to phone at home.

The Fergusons pushed their car off the road, watching with dismay as a sheriff's patrol car cruised by twice. Even with their emergency flashers on, the deputy didn't stop to assist.

It was later learned the Deputy George Lasater, who was on duty that night, was on his way to transport a prisoner. When he passed the Fergusons a second time and saw their flashers on, he had a prisoner in the car.

So with their daughter, Kelly, in tow, the Fergusons walked to the nearby Total gas station for help. They explained their dilemma to Chris Adler, who was working behind the counter that evening.

Adler did what she could to help. She called the local taxi company and tried to coax the driver to come out and give the Fergusons a ride home.

That didn't work.

She suggested the Fergusons call 911, which they did.

That didn't work either.

Whitney's gets the go ahead

Planners give their approval to restaurant rebuilding plan

By Laurie Lounsbury

Along with their approval of the development plan for Whitney's Oyster Bar, the planning commission is sending a loud message to city council.

The planning commission would like to see the city support downtown businesses however they reasonably can.

In this case, the commission unanimously voted to have the city pay 100 percent for a trash compacting unit, to be shared by Whitney's, the city and any other businesses on the center block of downtown. The trash compactor would sit on city property behind Whitney's Oyster Bar.

The cost and the location of a Dumpster unit was the only snag holding up the approval of Whitney's new building plans.

Because the Whitney property doesn't extend far enough behind their building to accommodate a garbage unit, restaurant owners Chuck and Gina Whitney proposed putting a Dumpster on the city's White parking lot and sharing the cost with the city.

According to Whitney's estimates, the cost of building a concrete pad, shelter and landscaping for a Dumpster would be $8,600, which the Whitneys were willing to pay.

City manager Mike Wiesner suggested using a trash compacting unit instead of a traditional Dumpster. The cost of the unit could run as high as $27,000.

"The cost of the unit itself is in the high teens, and with landscaping it could be $27,000," Wiesner said. "It would be significantly to their (Whitneys) advantage to go this way," Wiesner said of the compacting unit.

The recommendation Wiesner brought to the planning commission at their special meeting Monday was that the Whitneys pay $14,000 toward the cost of the compacting unit.

A similar trash compacting unit is in Bridge Park. The unit was entirely paid for by the Downtown Development Authority, and is used by the Beaver Island Boat Company and the United States Coast Guard. Other businesses are welcome to use it, but have opted not to. Anyone using the trash compactor has a code which they enter when they dump trash, and they are billed according to usage.

In addition to the $14,000 for their share of the trash compactor, Wiesner and city planner Gerry Harsch said the Whitneys should pay an additional $1,782 into the city parking fund. The figure is based on the extra 148 square feet of customer service area that will be created on the upper deck of the restaurant. The Whitneys will owe the city parking fund a total of $6,075. Some of that amount is past due from last season's creation of the upper deck.

Speaking for the Whitneys, attorney Dan Barron balked at the Whitney's proposed share of the trash compactor.

"To help with the private sector and city effort, the Whitneys are willing to contribute. The only area where there's not full agreement is the amount," Barron said. "The Whitneys wish to contribute $8,600, which is a lot for a private business, particularly since the city paid 100 percent for a unit in Bridge Park. There's a municipal responsibility to help businesses on key issues, such as parking and refuse, so they can be viable and make a profit."

Audience member John Haggard was opposed to additional charges being levied against Whitneys.

"I strongly object to an additional parking fund fee in the face of Whitney's hardship," Haggard said. "If you don't realize what they've brought to this community, just look at the 16 closed stores downtown where, one year ago, there were only four that were closed."

"This planning commission should send a message to city council that we want our city to be a thriving development downtown and we'll help people who own businesses downtown. To put another burden on them, I don't think, is fair."

June Cross, commission chairman, made a motion to approve the Whitney development plan with the provision that they pay $8,600 into the garbage fund and pay the full amount owed into the parking fund.

While the motion was being drafted, commissioner Shirley Gibson spoke up.

"Before you go forward with this, I would like to see the DDA pay everything for the garbage unit," Gibson said.

"Me too," said Dennis Kusina, another commissioner. "Why should Whitneys have to pay when the Bridge Park unit is entirely paid for by the city?"

A vote to have Whitneys contribute $8,600 for a compactor failed.

A second motion was quickly made by Kusina. His motion said that the city should pay 100 percent of the cost of a trash compactor, Whitneys should pay the full amount of their parking fees and if the second floor of their new building is ever used for customer service, then they should pay more into the parking fund.

Kusina's motion was supported unanimously.

"I am amazed," Gina Whitney said after the meeting. "This restores my faith in the city of Charlevoix in the face of our tragedy. It restores my faith in the fact they're fair and honest people."

The planning commission recommendation will now go to city council for final approval.

Council will hold a special meeting at 5 p.m. Monday, Dec. 29 to consider the recommendation.

A "Total" stranger helps newcomers in Charlevoix

trying to rouse the local cabbie, told the Fergusons there was nothing he could do to help.

In desperation, Joe turned to Adler and asked a total stranger for help.

"It was a last ditch effort," Joe said. "I just said, do you want to make some money?"

Joe offered his driver's license as security and a $20 bill for the use of Adler's car.

She agreed to it.

"Everyone there said to me, 'Are you crazy?' but I knew they'd come back," Adler said.

"They had their daughter with them and it was cold outside, so I figured what the heck."

The Fergusons drove away in Adler's car to their home about two miles away on the Boyne City Road. There, they picked up their second vehicle and, with Carrie following Joe back to the gas station, returned Adler's car.

"It was a really nice thing she did," Carrie said of Adler.

It was about the only nice thing that happened during the Ferguson's difficulty.

At 6 a.m. the next morning, Joe went to retrieve his vehicle.

The car was gone.

Deputy Lasater had it towed away.

"It was a hazard," Sheriff George Lasater said later. "People pulling out from Martin Road couldn't see southbound traffic on U.S. 31. I'm sure my deputy made the right decision. We're pretty conservative about towing, because we know the expense."

The expense, to Joe, was the time it took him to retrieve his car and a $75 towing fee.

The experience made the Fergusons that much more grateful for the kindness of Adler.

"We were total strangers and new in town, so it was really nice of her to trust us," Joe said.

"They did all the right things — they tried to get a taxi, and they called 911," Adler said. "They were in here a good 45 minutes trying to get help, without any luck.

"I was just glad I could help them."

Charlevoix project named community project of the month by news media

The ever-modest Mary Helen Riggle tried to wriggle out of an interview with TV 9 and 10. The Traverse City-based television station called Riggle because the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project, founded in 1982 by Riggle and Lucy Martin, was chosen as the community project of the month.

But Riggle, trying to hide her light under a bushel, told the station that she was just one of many chairmen and shouldn't be singled out.

"I'll give you $1,000 for an interview," the television interviewer told Riggle.

That did the trick.

"We were just tickled to get $1,000," Riggle said.

The television station runs a program called Helping Hands, where they choose a worthy community project every month and award $1,000 to the cause. AT & T also sponsors the project.

During the holiday season, there are literally hundreds of good organizations helping the needy in communities all over northern Michigan. To be chosen as the project of the month was quite an honor.

Fireworks explosion report seen by few

Cause for explosion remains a mystery

By Laurie Lounsbury

Even with over 1,000 pages of words, the investigation report for the Venetian fireworks explosion doesn't say much.

At least, it doesn't offer any concrete explanations to the cause of the explosion.

What the report does include are many transportation violations allegedly committed by fireworks operator Richard Davis. The transportation violations had to do with the trailer containing the fireworks, not the actual launching of the fireworks.

Charlevoix fire chief Doug Carver said there was no reason for the city to question Davis's transportation methods.

"There are no requirements to have him inspected," Carver said.

According to Carver, Davis loaded all the fireworks onto a trailer at his Central Lake business, Fireworks North, and hauled them to Charlevoix for the July 26 fireworks display.

"I thought it was safer to load them at his place and trailer them here, rather than load them on a trailer downtown," Carver said. "He's been doing it that way for years."

Other city officials had difficulty commenting on the investigation report because they haven't seen it yet. The city manager, mayor, fire chief and police chief haven't seen the report yet.

"I'm at a loss to comment, but on the other hand, since they're keeping it all quiet and secret, the city can't be expected to respond to questions," said mayor Josh Barnes. "Those people can expect a seven month delay once it's been released to us."

Through the Freedom of Information Act, two area newspapers were able to view the document in the prosecutor's office. The document hasn't been released to anyone else. If someone wants a copy of the investigation document to peruse at their leisure, the cost of the hefty report is $600.

Barnes was infuriated that newspapers had access to the investigation report before any city officials were allowed to see it.

"We have no idea what's going on," Barnes said. "This is arbitrary and capricious."

Charlevoix County prosecutor Mary Beth Kur did not return numerous phone calls from the Courier, so no comment was available from her.

OPINIONS

EDITORIAL

Maybe it was the Yuletide spirit that moved the planning commission Monday night.

Or maybe it was just good common sense.

Either way, it was wonderful to see the planning commission unanimously support a downtown business that is down on its luck.

The planning commission voted to approve a development plan for Whitney's Oyster Bar. The plan calls for a three-story building, with customer seating on the first and third floors.

The second floor will be used for storage and office space.

It was inevitable that the commission would approve some sort of building plan for Chuck and Gina Whitney.

What wasn't inevitable was the commission's strong belief that the city should do everything possible to help the Whitneys.

Instead of accepting city manager Mike Wiesner's recommendation that the Whitneys help pay for a city-owned trash compactor, the planning commission suggested the city buy it themselves.

Wiesner suggested the Whitneys pay $14,000 for a $27,000 trash compactor that the city would own and share with the Whitneys.

A similar trash compactor sits in Bridge Park. The city's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) paid the full amount for that unit, which is used by the Beaver Island Boat Company and the Coast Guard. Harbor Cafe also used the compactor for a while, then cut a better deal with their waste collector.

Why should Whitney's Oyster Bar pay for something that businesses in another part of town get practically free?

All businesses using the Bridge Park compactor pay a user fee — Whitney's shouldn't be expected to pay any more than that.

Whitney's Oyster Bar is in the unique situation of owning almost no land behind their building. Before the fire consumed their business, they rented space from a next door retailer to accommodate their Dumpster.

But the Whitneys knew it would be good for everyone on the block to get Dumpsters away from the rear entrances of buildings.

They came up with the idea of a communal Dumpster, to be shared by everyone on the block.

And they were willing to pay their fair share.

Members of the planning commission apparently thought the Whitneys were willing to pay too much.

With Bridge Street lined with empty storefronts, the planning commission decided it was their mission to do what they could to support a very popular business that is currently just a gaping hole in the ground.

It was absolutely the right decision.

The issue will now go to city council, who must decide if they have it in their hearts — and in their budget — to pay the full cost of a trash compactor.

The DDA probably has the money to pay for a trash compactor. They also have a long list of projects they'd like to do.

Maybe the first project on their list should be to help an already proven, successful business get back on its feet after a tragedy.

In the big picture of things, a trash compactor that can be shared by all the businesses on the block may be the best use of DDA funds. Better than fancy water fountains and flag poles in Veteran's Park — better than pretty lights on State Street and better than an irrigation system in East Park.

As Bob Hoffman said, when he spoke on behalf of the Whitneys at the planning commission meeting, "The Whitneys want to clean up that alley and help make Charlevoix more beautiful."

It would be beautiful to have a well-landscaped, communal trash compactor on the White parking lot.

And it would be beautiful to see city council support the downtown businesses in general — and Whitneys in particular — to make Bridge Street a thriving retail center once again.

Letters to the editor

Local historian may know Bruno the bear

Editor:

Your photo in the scrapbook section of the Courier for Dec. 10 brought back memories. When I was a teenager back in 1917-1923, I viewed a wrestling match between a bear and man. It was on a platform built in a gravel pit where the Weathervane condos now stand. I dropped 10 cents in a tin cup as a voluntary donation. The bear, who was muzzled and harnessed with mittens on the front paws, had a rope attached that the trainer could control. I remember the bear pinned the man down by sheer weight and tried to lick his face. The crowd roared. Whether this was "Bruno" or not I can't confirm.

The picture, though, did bring back vivid memories of two local area pet bears. George Smith, who ran a transport from the Clinton Street dock to the Inn Depot dock and the Belvedere Depot dock in Pine Lake (now Lake Charlevoix), had a pet bear that traveled with him in the summer. Jack Foch's skating bear performed with Allie Moore at the Karslake Roller Rink on the waterfront at the end of May Street.

I think these bears were attraction enough to have been written up in the "Sentinel" in the above time frame in more detail and with names.

Respectfully,
Ralph Hamilton

Out-of-town fireworks victims thank town for support

Editor:

We never realized how many angels in disguise there are in the world. Until we were two of the several people hurt in the fireworks explosion this past summer in Charlevoix.

We want to send our heartfelt thanks to everyone for all their help, support and prayers during these past months. There were so many people who came forward to help us, that we can't begin to thank everyone individually.

A special thank you goes out to all the medical personnel in Traverse City, Charlevoix and Petoskey. Everyone was so helpful to us and our family.

We want to wish everyone a Blessed Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Pool group gives annual report

Editor:

Todd Welscott served as our director for our first six months of operation. He returned to school in October. We were fortunate in immediately being able to hire Libby Hicks as our interim director. She has a wealth of education, certification and experience in aquatics. We have hired our own custodian and an office assistant. There are nine lifeguards on staff, representing many stages and walks of life. A group of about 35 volunteers help by spending two hours in the evening and Saturdays greeting the swimmers from the front desk during family swim sessions.

We are progressing in the fulfillment of our mission of providing aquatic teaching, fitness, therapy, and wholesome recreation. We are in operation 65 hours each week, with about 710 people using the pool each week. There is a water safety course for Charlevoix fourth and fifth graders, lap swimming with lane markers, water exercise (both guided and unguided), hospital use by Charlevoix and Northern Michigan, Char-Em sessions, lifeguard training, small group swim lessons, and family oriented recreational swim sessions. Birthday, scout and church group use is increasing.

The pool has several interesting mechanical features. One of these machines is the Dryatron. It's inside a rectangular metal box the size of a small bedroom. It takes moisture out of the air, keeping the relative humidity in the air above the pool at about 45 percent! In the process of dehumidifying the air, heat is generated. This heat, via an heat exchanger, is used to help warm the pool water. The gas furnace has to turn on only intermittently to keep the water at 81-83 degrees. The moisture wrung out of the air is discharged to the sewer. The Dryatron operates continuously, accounting for one-half of our monthly electric bill of $1,200!

Our list of goals is headed by the desire to spread more widely the news of our presence and programs; that the pool is for everyone in the greater Charlevoix area. We want to train more lifeguards. We hope our volunteers will increase in numbers and form an auxiliary organization. We want to expand our schedule and add some additional programs such as special exercise for the arthritic and exercise for prenatal women. The pool building mortgage of $60,000 needs to be retired through donations, pledges and purchases of engraved patio bricks. The beautiful, glass-enclosed building has shown a negative aspect when filled with people laughing and splashing; a high noise level. We are studying ways and means of reducing the noise.

We welcome comments about the pool. Please write or call us at 11905 U.S. 31 N., Charlevoix, MI 49720, 547-6469.

Charlevoix boy donates allowance to hospital

Eight-year-old Dan Myers of Charlevoix was moved to donate savings from his allowance to Charlevoix Area Hospital's campaign fund for a CT Scanner.

"I just wanted to," Dan said when asked why he gave up his hard-earned money.

Dan donated $6, and his parents, Tom and Peg, matched it to make the personal donation of $12. Dan handed the money to hospital president Bill Jackson, who thanked the donor.

Dan saw the hospital's fund-raising thermometer in East Park, near the town's Christmas tree. The thermometer measures the amount of donations to the CT Scanner fund as presently being $250,000. The third grader knew what a CT Scanner was from seeing them in movies, he said.

"There's a board that you lie on, and they slide you inside, and it takes an X-ray, but it's a much better X-ray," Dan said.

Dan's mother said that making the donation was "totally his own idea."

"He was fascinated by the idea of the scanner," said Peg Myers.

Each week, Dan saves 10 percent of his allowance to be used for helping others. 15 percent goes in his savings account, his mother said. The rest is "mad money."

"If you continue to do that the rest of your life, you'll be a wealthy man, a giving man," Jackson told Dan.

Family loses home to fire

Everything a total loss, just days before Christmas

The home of Charlevoix residents Ken and Cindy Burke was completely destroyed by fire Sunday, Dec. 21.

Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said they received a call to respond to the fire at 11:51 p.m. Sunday.

The Burke's home was at 7887 Burgess Road.

"It was a total loss," Thompson said.

The fire is still under investigation. Thompson said it probably started in one of the bedrooms, but can not say at this time what caused it.

The township fire department was assisted by the Charlevoix city fire department with a tanker truck and extra manpower. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department also assisted at the blaze.

Because the family had smoke alarms, they were able to get out safely.

The family was able to save only themselves, their dogs and the family car.

Through the kindness of people in the community, the family is receiving donations for needed items, such as clothing, furniture and shelter.

Tom Thomas has donated the use of a farmhouse on Charlevoix Country Club property for two months without rent.

Rebecca and Don Haney, owners of Don's IGA, are organizing and accepting donations for the Burke family.

"She's a member of the Haney family," Rebecca said of her long-time employee, Cindy.

The family still needs furniture, bedding and all other household items.

For those wanting to help the family, clothing items are needed in the following sizes: Cindy, women's size 14 — any items; Ken, XL shirt, XL jacket, 36w/34long pants; Jordan, ninth grader, 34w/32 long pants, Large shirts, shoe size 11, large jacket; Travis, fourth grader, 12-14 jacket, 12 slim pants, 3-1/2 shoes.

Donations may be dropped off at Don's IGA on Petoskey Avenue. Call Rebecca Haney for more information at 547-0080.

Christmas presents are undoubtedly welcome.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Would you understand when I say that God's sense of timing is absolutely flawless? Let's think in terms of Christmas and the birth of Jesus. The week our firstborn was due to arrive, we had a revival meeting scheduled for our church. Our evangelist was a professor that I studied under in college and really loved. He would always say to me, "Bruce, you're such a good amateur philosopher. I can't understand why you have so much trouble with my class." The fact behind that was a simple one. You try being deep and profound when your philosophy class is at 7 a.m., four days a week — a lot of folks might have trouble.

Anyway, Wade was a practical brother when it came to the church. To save us expenses, he chose a midnight flight out of Florida that arrived at 2 a.m. Linda didn't exactly want to be left home alone, being nine months and a few days pregnant, so she went with me to get him. We got him home, visited awhile and finally got to bed about three a.m. Right when it was time to get comfortable, her labor pains began.

Again, think of Christmas, Mary, Joseph and the birth of Jesus. God's sense of timing really is absolutely flawless. Qurinius, the governor of Syria, may not have thought so, but when Caesar Augustus sent word down that he wanted a census taken of all his domain, it couldn't have been more perfect. Knowing the history and the egos of some Roman emperors, it wouldn't have surprised me if he just wanted to find out how big and how great his empire really was. That might have been what Caesar thought, but I wonder what he really would have thought had he realized the events that the census he called for would put into motion.

I think Joseph had to have been a fairly practical man and level-headed as well. I don't think God would have asked him to share in the responsibility of raising His son had he been impetuous or prone to go off half-cocked. He demonstrated his compassion by trying to quietly take care of Mary's situation before he realized her child was a holy child. He proved his sensitivity by trying his best to comfort her in the rigors of the journey from Galilee to Bethlehem.

What do the facts say of us? You do realize God has asked you to share in a responsibility with Him as well, don't you? It has nothing to do with your own children, as wonderful as they might be. He sees in you something that perhaps you haven't fully realized was there. He sees in you the ability to touch another heart and life with His marvelous message, thus changing them forever. The fact is, there is no other day worth remembering quite like Christmas when we appreciate the full meaning of "for unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given."

My daughter is a little over 20 now and she was subsequently joined by our son. In the years Linda and I have been blessed with them, our children have provided us with the inevitable parental challenges, but also, absolutely priceless memories. And what has made those memories so precious to us has been the absolutely flawless timing of God. He pulls things together in ways we could never do on our own. That's what makes those memories so special. That's what makes Christmas so special. The gospel reminds us that "For God so loved the world, He gave..."

If God can give and make such a difference, so can we.

Medusa Cement Company copes with $2 million mess

By Laurie Lounsbury

While they're still working on an oil spill clean-up, Medusa Cement Company is tackling a new clean-up project in Charlevoix.

In all, Medusa Corp. has set aside $4 million for environmental issues, with at least $2 million of that to be spent in Charlevoix.

The $2 million dollars will be spent cleaning and monitoring piles of cement kiln dust, a by-product of making cement. Since 1967, the company has deposited kiln dust in nine piles around the property. The piles are leeching hazardous levels of heavy metals into the ground water supply and out into Lake Michigan.

The heavy metals include arsenic, harium, cadmium, chromium, copper, lead, mercury, selenium, silver and zinc.

"It's going to cost them a lot of money to correct this, because the DEQ (Department of Environmental Quality) has taken a hard stand on this issue," said Jerry Puhl, president of WATCH (Water and Air Team Charlevoix).

WATCH, an environmental group, was originally formed in 1983 in response to pollution created by Medusa.

Since then, the group has kept a keen eye on Medusa and their ongoing environmental troubles.

The kiln dust problem was discovered in 1994 by Medusa.

Medusa's first response to the problem was to put wells under the dust piles and, using pumps, try to collect the contamination before it reached the ground water supply.

It's similar to the method the company is using to collect the estimated 200,000 gallons of fuel oil that leaked into the ground water from a cracked pipeline. That problem was discovered about four years ago.

"They've collected about 75,000 gallons of fuel oil so far," Puhl said.

The pumping system didn't work as effectively for cement kiln dust contamination.

The Remedial Action Plan for cement kiln dust calls for the creation of a type III industrial waste landfill. The industrial landfill will be located on pile nine of the kiln dust piles. The pile will be capped with two feet of clay and a high density polyethylene liner.

According to Puhl, some of the other kiln dust piles have been topped with soil and then vegetation was planted on top of them. It allowed rain water to seep into the pile and wash the contaminants into the ground water. Pile nine is partially submerged below the ground water table.

A proper clay cap, with the liner, should eliminate the problem of rain or surface water seeping into the kiln dust pile, although it won't do anything to correct the problem of kiln dust buried below the water table.

Over the next five years, the DEQ will require continuous monitoring of the ground water by Medusa.

Puhl said WATCH is happy to see the DEQ enforcing environmental regulations.

"It took the power of the state government to enforce laws that were already in place," Puhl said.

It's not known what impact the contaminants will have on fish and plankton that live in Lake Michigan near Medusa.

The DEQ report said, "It is unlikely the food chain will be impacted, because the main contaminant migration pathway via ground water is controlled."

The impact to wildlife in the area is negligible due to relatively low concentrations of the pollutants on the surface.

Rayders lose in close game against T.C. St. Francis

By Jamie MacMillan

In the conference opener for both teams, the Traverse City St. Francis Gladiators outlasted the Charlevoix Rayders 75-67.

The game was tied 62-62 with six minutes remaining before the Glads pulled away down the stretch. St. Francis remained undefeated while Charlevoix remained winless.

The game was close throughout much of first half, with the teams exchanging leads. Rayder guard Tino Tripocchio nailed three straight jump shots, two from three-point distance, giving Charlevoix an 18-16 edge after one period.

The Gladiators countered with a balance-reeling of runs of 13-3 and 10-3, with five players scoring to stake themselves to a comfortable 41-30 intermission lead.

The second half began with each team exchanging 5-0 runs and for a while it seemed like Charlevoix would not be able to close the gap. Sean Stockman scored nine straight Rayder points, but still Charlevoix was behind 56-46 with three minutes left in the third quarter.

The Rayders then made their stand. Tom Cunningham drilled a three-pointer and Matt McClellan scored on a spinning baseline move, slicing the deficit in half. Charlevoix held the Glads to just two free throws, ending the quarter on a 10-2 run and pulling to within two, 58-56.

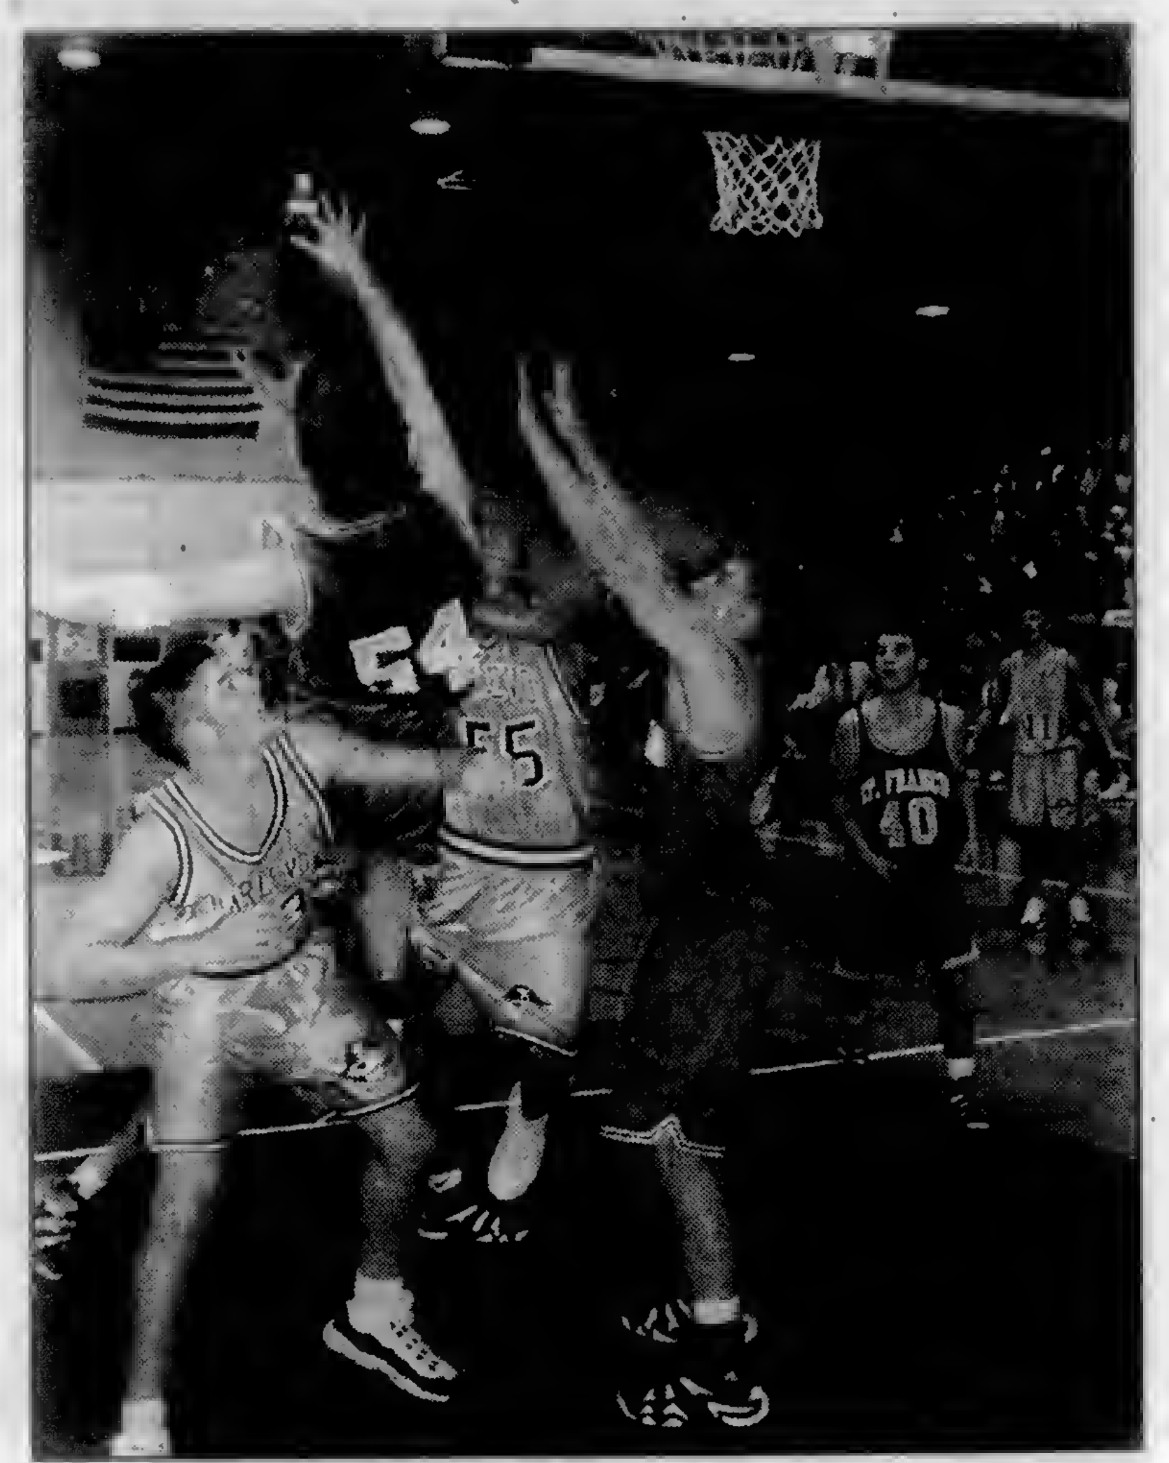
St. Francis upped their lead to 61-56 on a three-point play following a flagrant foul call against Charlevoix. The Rayders battled back, finally tying the score 62-62 on a Matt Dennis lay-in.

The Glads, the league's defending champs, persevered and scored the game's next four points. After a Charlevoix basket cut the lead back down to two, the Glads' Tony Willis hit a three-pointer from the top of the arc that seemed to deflate the Rayders and their spirited home crowd. From there, the Rayders tried to claw back with three-point attempts, but with little success and the Gladiators scored most of their final points from the free-throw line, sewing up the win.

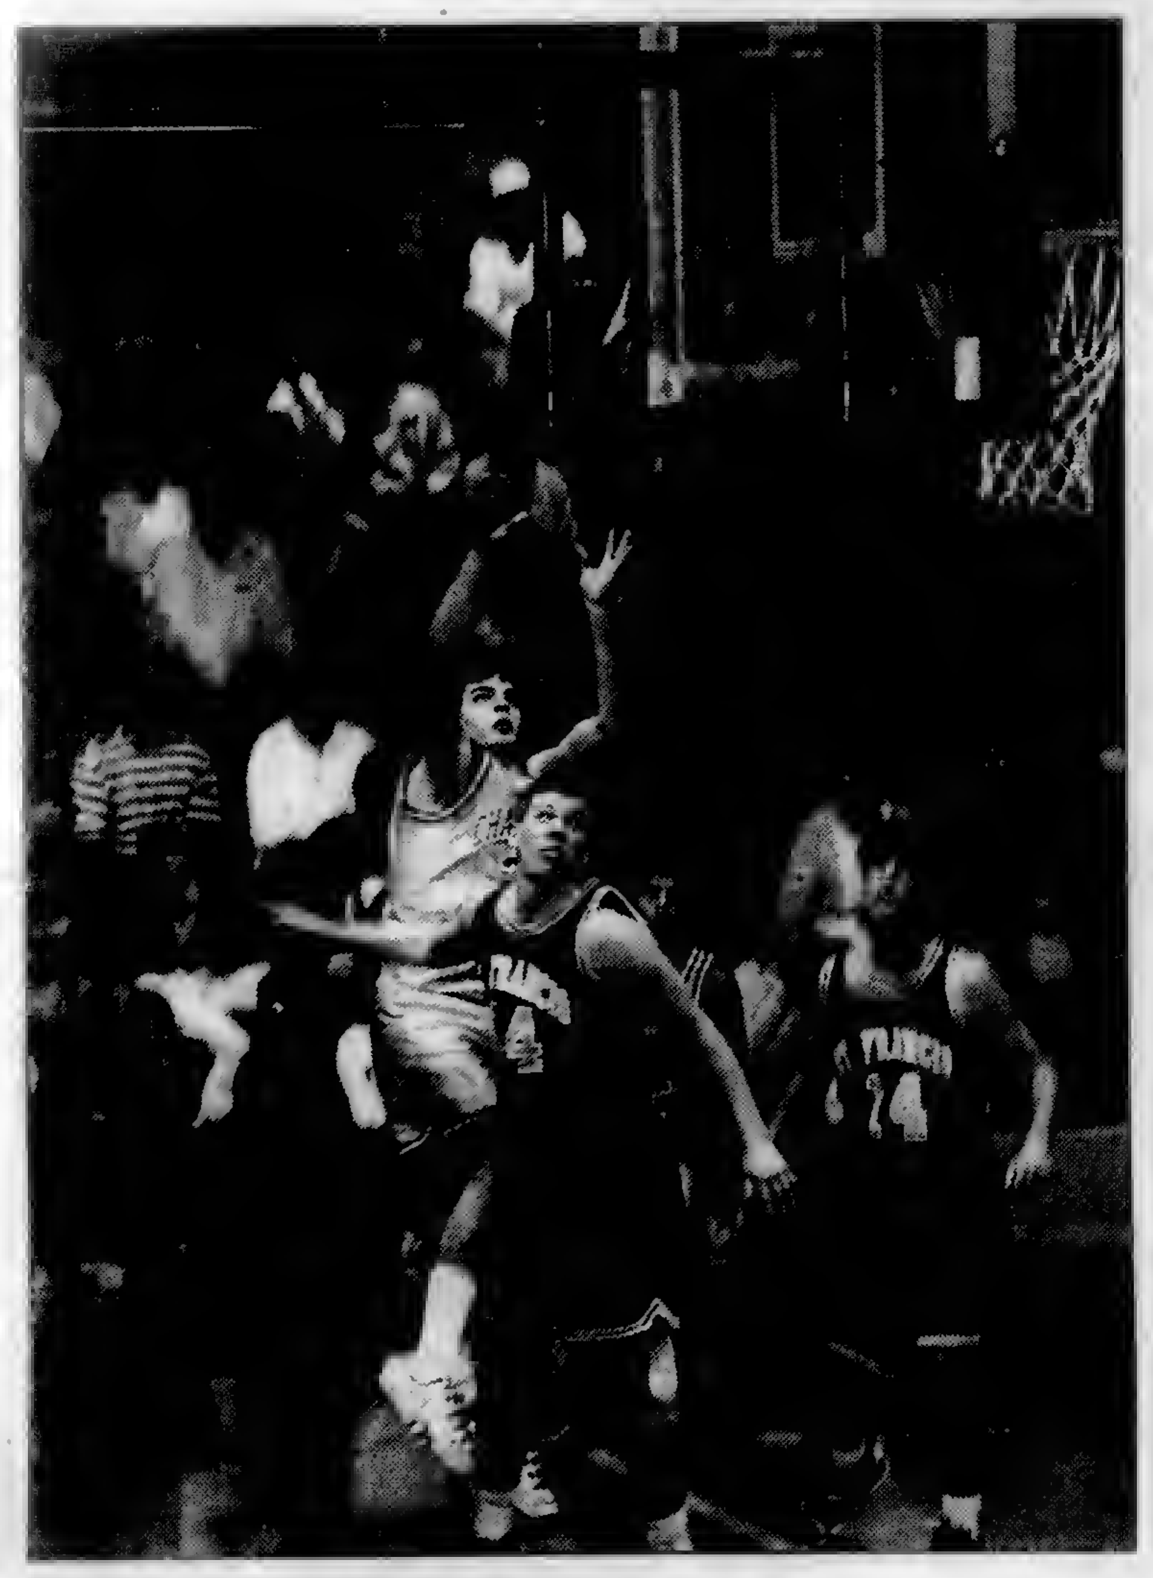
Dennis led Charlevoix's scoring with 17 points. Three other Rayders reached doubled figures; McClellan, 13, Stockman, 11, and Cunningham, 10. St. Francis' Jason Pratt led all scorers with 22 points, backed by Wills' 17 points and Greg Doherty's 13 points.

Charlevoix did win the JV game 59-51. Russ Ward led three Rayders in double figures with 16 points. Shay Hutchison scored 12 and Adam Wood chipped in 10. The JV's record is 2-2.

The Rayders will not be action until after the holidays, when they square off at Roscommon Tuesday, Jan. 6. The JV game begins at 6 p.m.



At times, physical play dominated as Gladiator Steve Reamer (54) can attest. Here, his drive to the hoop was defended by Rayders Matt McClellan and Brian Ward causing him to land hard on the floor.



Rayder forward Sean Stockman kept the Rayders afloat with nine straight points in the third quarter including this baseline jumper over a St. Francis defender.

Girls start volleyball season with win

Team loses in 10-team invitational meet

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix volleyball team worked to a 4-4 record at last weekend's Roscommon Invitational, but could not advance out of pool play into the semi-finals.

The 10 team competition was divided into two, five team pools with the top two in each advancing to more play. The Rayders were paired with Grayling, Traverse City West, Houghton Lake and Hale.

Charlevoix opened the day by sweeping Grayling 15-14, 15-7 but were upended by T.C. West 7-15, 10-15. They rebounded to top Houghton Lake 15-2, 15-11 but their fate for the day was decided in the match with Hale, which they lost 7-15,3-15.

"Had we split with Hale we would have been in it," coach Brenda Bryan said. "It just wasn't our day."

"Our serving was OK, but we missed some serves at some key points, causing us to lose control of some games," she added. "It was good for the team, though, to play good teams and to learn what they need to do to be successful."

Roscommon won the title by defeating T.C. West in the championship game.

The Rayders began their season last Thursday with a conference win at Elk Rapids 5-15, 15-12, 15-11, 15-5.

"We actually played a lot better Thursday than we did Saturday," Bryan said. "It was real important to get that first league win."

Amanda Eaton led the offense with 14 kills followed by Christine Sweeney, six, and Jamie Gowell, one. Carrie Blanchard served five aces followed by Ann Spang, three, and Laura Maltese, two. Lyndsay Blechel was the team's top setter while Eaton, Gowell, and Sweeney led the defense.

The Rayder JV squad lost to Elk Rapids 1-15, 12-15.

Charlevoix next plays Wednesday, Jan. 7 at Ellsworth.

The JV game begins at 6 p.m.

Grandvue opens new Alzheimer's wing

By Jamie MacMillan

Five years after the process began, the Grandvue Medical Care Facility has finally opened their long awaited Alzheimer's Care Unit.

"We're very excited to be open, we've been working towards this day for many years," Penny Drury, Grandvue administrator, said. "We hope the community is as proud as we are."

The Alzheimer wing is not an expansion of the care facility, but a renovation of the hospital's newest wing constructed in 1980. The remodeling was done, Drury said, to minimize a nursing atmosphere while maximizing a residential feel.

To that end, medical equipment and a nurse's station were removed and carpeting installed, family/entertainment room set-up, and a kitchen built. A back yard for patients to walk and an antique 1930's atmosphere dots the interior to ease patients. The wing hold 20 beds, increasing the overall population of the facility from 73 beds to 93.

Drury said the cost of the project neared $150,000, which was paid from the care facility's depreciation account.

The project began in 1992, when the state of Michigan began a process of allocating 200 new hospital beds in 20 bed increments to state care facilities. For Grandvue to qualify, they had to spend time documenting their need and desire for an Alzheimer wing.

As part of the requirement, the facility had to enter into a research cooperative with a university. Previous experiences gave the staff a desire to plunge into musical therapy. They joined with the University of Kansas at Lawrence for the project.

"When we would do musical programs, some of our residents who don't talk to us in complete sentences were up singing complete verses," Drury said. "It blew us away."

Renovation ended in September and the facility was waiting for final approval from building code instructors and state licensing agents. They were allowed to open with dual Medicare/Medicaid certification last Monday.

The wing was named, through a staff contest, Horizonvue. The name is consistent with the facility's other wings (Forestvue, Lakevue, and Valleyvue) and Drury said it is appropriate for this particular wing.

"We're striving for a better lifestyle and new horizons for our residents."

The Alzheimer wing is not the only construction project at Grandvue. Last week D.L. Ruhling began work on a storage garage for the facility's equipment and vehicles. The 40-foot by 80-foot building will give the maintenance crew an area away from patients to do repair work on equipment and vehicles.

According to Drury, the building will cost $138,000 out of the depreciation account and should be completed sometime in January, 1998.

Staff, residents and family gathered last Tuesday afternoon for the grand opening of Grandvue's new Alzheimer Care wing. After five years of documentation, research and renovation the care facility finally opened their new 20 bed wing.

Bay City man to head up long term care at Boulder Park

Jeff Prell, R.N. recently joined the Boulder Park Terrace staff as director of nursing for the long term care portion of the facility. Jeff replaces Sue Bush, R.N. who became the manager of their rehabilitation unit at Boulder Park Terrace.

Prell, a native of Bay City, Michigan, comes to Charlevoix from TenderCare, a long term nursing facility in Saginaw, where he worked in staff development and as the assistant director of nursing.

Prell had visited friends in Petoskey and Harbor Springs during the past six years and became familiar with the area. It was through these visits that he decided to explore the possibility of moving here.

"I liked the Charlevoix area so I decided to research it and see what career opportunities were available. I knew Boulder Park Terrace had a good reputation so when the position became available I applied for it," Prell said.

Jeff is looking forward to the challenges of his job at Boulder Park Terrace and has been working various shifts to gain a working knowledge of the facility.

"I'm making it a point to learn the systems that are already in place. By spending time with people on all shifts, I'm getting a better idea of how Boulder Park Terrace functions from all aspects. I think it's important to meet and know everyone you work with. Working different shifts allows me to do that."

Boulder Park Terrace is a cooperative service of Healthshare Group and Charlevoix Area Hospital. The facility serves as a skilled nursing and sub-acute rehabilitation center, providing complete physical, speech and occupational therapy to its nursing home residents. It is also a sub-acute rehabilitation center for patients recovering from stroke or orthopedic trauma.

Students visit Charlevoix hospital

East Jordan Middle School seventh graders were able to see their classmate Kevin Whisler's heart beat on a monitor when the 50 students visited Charlevoix Area Hospital in December.

The hands-on tour was a culmination of the students' anatomy studies, said science teacher Matt Peterson.

"This is a good way to enforce what they learned in the classroom about the human body's systems," Peterson said.

In the emergency room, students learned how a cardiac monitor allows the physician and nurses to see the patient's heartbeat. In physical therapy, the students learned how the brain sends messages to the legs and arms, enabling the patient to walk. Students also saw demonstrations in the X-ray department and the respiratory therapy department.

Emergency room nurse Linda Sheppard explained why drivers are at risk of a ruptured spleen in a car accident.

Holiday humor

Students and teachers enjoyed themselves during the high school Christmas program, where humorous skits and songs were shared. Entertaining the audience are, Clockwise, from top: John Prescott (left), Brandon Bruce (center) and Keith Haske behaved more like wise guys than wise men when they joked it up in a multi-lingual (we think) skit.

Pete Scholten, Gary Grundman, Dick Swenor and Rafe Rittenhouse did a great Doo-wap rendition of Santa Come Down.

Singing A Capella were Katie Golski, Danica Kilander, Lori Stargardt, Jennifer Ricks and Kari Jo Boss.

A line taken from the traditional Christmas Eve Service liturgy at Community Reformed Church, "Speak to Him for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet," will be the focus of the candlelight celebration of Christ's birth this year.

The community is invited to gather at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 24, for a quiet hour of reflection upon that night in Bethlehem, to sing traditional carols and to hear a solo performed by Maggie and Bob Murray. At the end of the service, everyone will receive a candle as the congregation forms its traditional circle of light around the sanctuary and joins together singing "Pass It On."

The church is located at the corner of Meech and Oak streets in Charlevoix. For more information call 547-9482.

Chanukah celebrated at Temple B'Nai Israel

Council, planners at odds on Whitneys garbage bin

By Jamie MacMillan

How surprised and unwilling was the Charlevoix City Council to tackle the smelly issue of trash?

So much so that not only did it table any action on the part of Chuck and Gina Whitney's rebuilding plans that called for a trash compactor on a city parking lot, but Mayor Josh Barnes actually banned any discussion on the topic at Monday night's city council meeting.

"Otherwise," the mayor quipped, "we'd all be here until 1998."

The Whitneys are in the process of rebuilding their two-story, Bridge Street Oyster Bar which burned to the ground in a kitchen fire the evening of Sept. 4.

Last week, city planners gave initial approval for the restaurateurs' rebuilding plans, which include a new public entrance in the rear of the building, an elevator for easier access to the upstairs deck, and a controversial trash compactor to be placed on the city parking lot behind a row of downtown businesses between Mason and Clinton streets.

The price tag for such a unit is estimated at $27,000, and would be the second city-owned compactor matching the one located in Bridge Park. That compactor was paid for by the city's Downtown Development Authority and is used by the Beaver Island Boat Co. and the United States Coast Guard.

After discussing how much the Whitneys should pay for such a device, planners ultimately agreed, without dissent, that it should be the city who flips for the bill.

Barnes disagreed with that notion.

Bomb threat at Glen's

CHARLEVOIX — Customers at Glen's Market in Charlevoix had their shopping trips abruptly interrupted Monday night when the store received a bomb threat.

Employees at the store, located at 111 M-66, received a call from a woman at about 7:45 p.m. Monday night and immediately summoned police.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said that officers from his department and the Charlevoix Fire Department evacuated the building and called in a canine unit from the Michigan State Police's Gaylord post.

About 25 people were in the store at the time of the call.

A bomb-sniffing dog from the state police searched the store and found no evidence of any explosives, Halverson said.

The store reopened at about 10 p.m., when the all-clear was given. No one was injured in the incident.

At least 23 teachers will take early retirement

By Jamie MacMillan

While the Charlevoix school district will be saving $250,000 in faculty salary over the next five years, it will also be paying close to $1 million to former employees as the next century dawns.

Both are results of an early retirement package offered to faculty with at least 20 years of experience in the district by the Board of Education last Spring.

The deal is simple. Teachers who stepped down last year will be paid $417 a month over ten years, teachers stepping down after this year will be paid $375 a month, and those who step down at the end of the 1998-99 year will be paid $333 a month.

All told, 23 teachers who have called Charlevoix Schools home for at least the last two decades have decided to call it quits. Five retired last June, five will depart after this year, and 13 will step down after next year.

As a result, faculty salary by the end of the 2002-03 year (the final year in a proposed five-year budget) will be trimmed to $2,782,580 from last year's total of $3,031,716.

Faculty payroll declines, beginning this year, for the next three years, then increases slightly during both the 2000-01 and 2001-02 years before settling in the final year of the projected budget at a lower figure than any of the preceding years.

During that same five year period, however, the district will be paying an average of $161,000 a year to Design Underwriting, the Grand Rapids firm charged with implementing the retirement plan.

On one hand, 83 percent of the buy-out money will have been doled out hy the end of the 2002-03 school year. On the other hand, it runs counter to any claim that the plan will go a long way towards balancing the school district's budget.

In fact, over the aforementioned five years, the district continues to outspend revenues dwindling a general fund balance from $2,146,819 on July 1, 1997 to $848,831 by June 30, 2003.

"I'm beginning to doubt if we'll see any savings from this," board member Larry Levengood said. Levengood was the lone board member who voted against the retirement package hashed out last May, one month before a quartet of new board members were sworn in.

"We're paying people not to do work, and at the same time they can go out and get other jobs," he said.

Replacing the district's highest paid teachers with new teachers at the bottom of the pay scale will save money, but by the time the district is finished paying their end to Design Underwriting the newly hired will have had pay increases further minimizing savings, Levengood feared.

According to district superintendent Roberta Jackson, the teachers stepping aside represent the high end of the pay scale with yearly salary of $52,020. She estimated that their replacements will be paid $32,848 assuming experience, but, lacking experience, could be paid just $28,176.

"Short term there won't be any savings and we don't anticipate any big time savings," Jackson said.

Of greater concern might be how to replace staff members who have been anchors for the district through the 1970s, 80s, 90s.

"We're losing talented people that we hate to see go," Jackson said. "It will be a challenge to make sure that those who are hired will mesh together well with the rest of the staff. We're losing our mentors."

The district replaced just three of the five faculty members who stepped down last year choosing not to replace a middle school music teacher while hiring a high school counselor and English teacher on a part-time basis.

No savings were realized through the maneuverings, though, as the schools hired a new second grade teacher and hired a new athletic director at the same pay level as the previous A.D. who exercised his early retirement option. The new A.D. doubles as the high school assistant principal, duties not included previously.

Jackson said all five of the faculty stepping away this year will be replaced, but as for the baker's dozen leaving next year no decision has been made about how many will be replaced.

"We're ahead of the game," Jackson said, noting that open positions for next year have already been posted throughout the Midwest. "Our goal, irregardless of age, is to have quality staff members."

City council tables decision on trash, approves rest of Whitneys' plan

"We cannot tell the D.D.A. to spend one nickel," he told council and the 20-plus people huddled in city hall. "Money for this would come from the taxpayers' pockets, and I don't enjoy that."

The trash compactor alone stirred enough controversy. Council did not know of any desire to add another compactor, Dumpster, or any other new means of disposing of refuse until it read about it in last week's newspapers. Barnes noted he received a letter from a neighboring business "violently opposed" to such an idea and council members all agreed that as many called to complain about the planners' decision as did applaud the move.

Add to that that councilmen Butch Russell and Don Meggison and city manager Michael Wiesner were unable to attend Monday's meeting, it was little surprise the item of a second city-owned trash compactor was tabled.

"It's fairly clear," Barnes noted, "that soon in the New Year we need to figure out what on earth we are going to do about trash."

Council did approve in 4-0 votes the remainder of the Whitneys' rebuilding plans and the waiving of a previous requirement that the Whitneys pay overdue parking fund fees before being allowed to apply for zoning and building permits.

The Whitneys will have to pay their $6,075 past parking fund bill before actual construction can begin, and the trash issue must be solved, Barnes said, before any occupancy in their new building.

So the Whitneys went two for three in their at-bat with council. Although those numbers will earn you a place in Cooperstown, it was clear that without resolution and that third issue it won't get you into a rebuilt Oyster Bar.

Snowmobile trails boost N. Michigan business, towns

By Jamie MacMillan

When the 13 mile snowmobile trail connecting East Jordan and Charlevoix opened last winter, many hoped it would spark an added boost to the Charlevoix's winter economy.

It had already done so in East Jordan, Indian River, and Gaylord. Lacking a direct spill-over from the many skiers in the area, Saturday afternoons in those cities remain busy with snowmobiles outnumbering cars in the parking lots.

"Snowmobilers bring in money," Carol Galmore of Galmore's, an East Jordan snowmobile outlet, said. "In turn, those businesses then turn around and spend it elsewhere in town buying themselves dinner and clothes."

With the lack of snow extending beyond Christmas day and through the weekend, Galmore reported that rentals are down setting the tone for a possible dismal winter season. Typically a two-week stretch marked by daily rentals and riding of the trails, Galmore's and other snowmobile related businesses will try to rally the season on weekends in January and February for business.

"One good thing about snowmobilers is that there is no special day or time they ride," said John Fiedorek, proprietor of Charlevoix's Flight Deck Bar and Grill. "It's a consistent flow, people ride all the time."

Charlevoix County has 65 miles of marked snowmobile trails, but last winter was the first time any of those trails led sledders to the greater Charlevoix area. In Charlevoix, the trail empties out just behind the Flight Deck, and, as a result, Fiedorek said last winter saw a slight increase in business.

"It was a positive for the business," he said. "It was a very new trail so we didn't see a lot of new traffic, but new faces did stick out."

Despite the trail, most businesses reported little in the way of extra business last winter.

"I can honestly tell you that we didn't see any increased business," Mary Morrison of Juilleret's said. "But our expectations weren't that high."

Morrison explained they placed signposts at both ends of the trail, but described any clientele her restaurant had from snowmobilers were people traveling further North to the Upper Peninsula catching a bite to eat before hauling away with their sleds on a trailer.

"We might see a slight increase each year, but until they allow them downtown it probably won't be that big," she added.

City manager Michael Wiesner was approached a year ago by people interested in planning some sort of trail leading sledders to the heart of downtown, but after the initial contact, Wiesner said, he was never approached again.

"I know there was some interest in it but I didn't hear that from Council, just from people interested in snowmobiling," he said. "Any plans obviously would have to focus on next winter, not this winter."

Jacqueline Merta, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce director, agreed that last winter the city saw little economic gain from the trail, but hinted that this might be a break-out year.

Despite being ridable, the trail had not been officially sanctioned by the state's Department of Natural Resources. Because of that, Merta said, there was no publicity campaign regarding the trail's existence. The savvy sledder knew where to find it, but to the general public it didn't even appear on the trail maps that can be picked up at every convenient store throughout the county.

"We didn't advertise or even talk about the trail," Merta said. "This year, if it snows, we'll probably see the impact of the trail."

The DNR sanctioned the trail in August, and Merta said with that comes a full scale publicity push which includes being on the trail map and taking out advertisements in the December and January editions of Winter Travel magazines. The trail head has been smoothed out, official parking is provided, and a port-a-john installed.

While the present trail was a goal of both the Chamber and Charlevoix Visitors Bureau, Merta was unsure about a trail leading downtown. On one hand she said it would get people into town during times they otherwise wouldn't, but, on the other hand, is the town ready for people to be "zipping around" Bridge Street on snowmobiles.

"I think we need to run this trail for awhile before trying something new. You've got to walk before you run," Merta said.

As of last weekend, the trail head of the 13 mile snowmobiling trail linking Charlevoix and East Jordan was barely dusted with snow preventing snowmobile travel. The trail empties just behind the Flight Deck Bar and Grill and a parking lot for snowmobilers is provided nearby. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Snowmobiles traffic jump could mean more accidents

Despite years without a death on County snowmobile trails, Sheriff George Lasater is worried the law of averages may just catch up with the area.

After witnessing noticeable increases in "activity, traffic, and complaints" during recent years, Lasater feels the county is "overdue" for a fatality.

"Each year the speed seems to be increasing and people don't feel safe taking their children out on a snowmobile safari," Lasater said.

Recent complaints have been limited to residents complaining about snowmobilers going too fast and encroaching on private property. Once a call comes reporting an accident, Lasater said it will be a frustrating time for his office. Lacking their own snowmobile, they would need to borrow one before being able to respond to any victim in the forest.

"I'm worried because it's a problem for us," he said. "We would have to borrow a snowmobile before responding and that is kind of embarrassing."

Laurie Lounsbury

By the time most of you are reading this, the University of Michigan has lost another Rose Bowl in the final minutes and you're picking pine needles out of your carpet and wondering how to get red candle wax out of the white tablecloth.

Ahhh, the joys of Christmas past.

This seemed like an appropriate time to wrap up a few loose ends and express my gripes and gratitude as they apply.

: ( While frantically spending the week before Christmas getting all those last minute details taken care of, I also had to work on a story about Medusa Cement Company and their environmental issues. That task was made very difficult by Medusa's practice of NEVER granting oral interviews with the media. We must submit written questions to John Laney, Charlevoix plant manager, who, in turn, sends them on to corporate headquarters. They spend a few days spin-doctoring their answers, then send them back in written form.

It's a slick system — slick as an oil spill. By the time we reporters get the answers, they bear almost no resemblance to the questions. In fact, I thought they sent me the wrong set of answers at first.

Here are a few examples:

Question: What is the level of contamination in each of the kiln dust piles?

Answer: The cement kiln dust is similar in each of the piles.

Question: Are the other six kiln dust piles equally as contaminated as piles 6, 7 and 9, and are they leeching into the ground water?

Answer: The cement kiln dust that Medusa generates has been fairly consistent throughout its years of operation.

Question: How do these heavy metals occur in the kiln dust?

Answer: The constituents referred to here are a result of the plant's quality control process.

Am I really thick-skulled, or are these answers hopelessly obscure? Unless you're a cement expert with a minor in environmental jargon, this stuff is gibberish.

Apparently Medusa makes so many zillions of dollars they don't have to worry about good public relations or being open with the people in their community. If they have nothing to hide, why aren't they more forthcoming with the press and public? It makes you wonder...

: ) The people in this community never fail to warm the cockles of my heart. When the Burke family home was destroyed by fire just a few days before Christmas, people rushed to their aid. Rebecca Haney, at Don's IGA, organized the effort to get much-needed provisions for the Burkes. She told me there was an outpouring of help from everyone who has ever set foot in the store. Workers making minimum wages gave every spare dime they had to help the family.

: ) We've turned the corner on the dark days of winter. The winter solstice is behind us, and the days are growing longer. Just think — only 144 days 'til Memorial weekend. That means only 139 more possible snow days.

: ( What's with people who write Christmas family news letters in the third-person, omniscient voice? Did they hire a ghost writer to do that? Are they afraid of owning up to their writing style by writing in first person and identifying themselves? (In some cases, this is understandable). Reading those third-person letters makes me feel like I'm having an out-of-body experience. It's very disconcerting. Just give it up, because we KNOW who you are.

: ) You've gotta pay your dues before you can sing the blues. After a 10-month stint at the Petoskey News-Review working as a middle-aged cub reporter, I am happily singing the blues (so to speak) at the Charlevoix Courier. It's great to be back in town, working with a terrific crew at the Courier in a community I adore. Now that I'm here, you might have a tough time getting rid of me. Heck, Peg Ohle worked here for 17 years, until she retired at the age of 81. Now that Jamie MacMillan is covering school board meetings instead of myself, I feel like I'm not aging anywhere near as fast as I was. Maybe I'll last as long as Peg did after all.

: ) 1997 is over. It was a hard year for Charlevoix, but it still had wonderful moments. The spirit of this town is never more apparent than during the holiday season. School Christmas concerts, plays, food drives, giving trees and abundant generosity are the things that are truly symbolic of this town.

Cheers! Let's toast to 1998.

Letters to the editor

Retired seniors say thank you to volunteers

Editor:

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties would like to thank its volunteers and community members who supported the annual Christmas raffle by selling and purchasing tickets. Due to their efforts, $1,024 was raised to help defray the costs of volunteer expenses.

We are also grateful to the many merchants who were willing to donate prizes. Local businesses contributing were Barb's Hallmark, Charlevoix Commons Apothecary and Kmart. Nine other Charlevoix and Emmet County businesses also participated.

Special appreciation goes to three RSVP volunteers who donated the top prizes. Bill and Mae Bridge, of East Jordan, each made prizes. Bill handcrafted a 48" high, child's clothes tree in the shape of a giraffe. Mae sewed a darling, muslin rag doll with wardrobe. Mary Hill, of Petoskey, donated an American Girl doll with stand. She made numerous outfits for her, too.

Thank you to all who helped RSVP with this annual event.

Carla Bufe, Director
RSVP

To serve and protect?

Editor:

When groups of tax-paying citizens get together to discuss local doings, questions come thick and fast. These all have to do concerning your article about the stranded new family in town and the actions of Deputy Lasater. For instance, what ever happened to the police officers' creed 'To protect and to serve,' and what does it mean? Why didn't the deputy investigate the emergency flashers? What if someone was hurt, seriously sick or even dying for want of attention? In the first place, it is illegal to park on a highway, so if deputy Lasater had investigated and found nothing wrong, he could have explained the hazards of such parking and sent them on their way. Finding the car broke down, how long would it have taken him to solve the problem by driving the family two miles or use the best radio money can buy to summon or arrange for help in removing the parked road hazard?

Was the prisoner being transported from point A to point B in a hurry? Would it have inconvenienced the prisoner or did it make one rat's rear end's difference if he was transported a few minutes later? An hour later? Really, what difference would it make?

What better way to prove the necessity of sheriff road patrol which costs thousands of man hours and more thousands of dollars than to provide quick aid and comfort to a new family with no one to turn to? Who was served and protected in this instance besides the prisoner?

We would urge people to stop in and give a hearty 'well done, bless you' to Chris Adler. A good deed always renews our faith in our fellow man, or woman, in this case.

Maybe Sheriff Lasater will take time to make a statement to the Courier explaining under what circumstances his deputy would have investigated the emergency blinkers. Would the State Police have stopped? We are sure if the car was involved in a crime the deputy would have responded. How about a bad snow storm like we can get real soon, would he have stopped? Please tell us when and why the deputy would have stopped. If the car was such a hazard why wasn't it towed immediately?

Nobody wins when an organization like the Sheriff Department is subject to criticism, and nobody is trying to give a black eye but for what it's worth, 100 percent of the people who put their two cents worth in were of the opinion that Deputy Lasater's actions shot himself in the foot.

Thanks for your time,
Perry Smith

Hospital service was appreciated by visitor

I would like to take this opportunity to let everyone know what a wonderful hospital and nursing staff you have at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. My grandfather, Cecil H. Moore, was recently a patient there and I want to say a very sincere thank you for the wonderful care he received. He always claimed he got better care there than anywhere else and I would have to agree that their service was excellent.

Big Rock employees give 96 pints of blood

Employees at Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point nuclear plant donated a plant record 96 pints of blood at a drive held by the American Red Cross on Wednesday, Dec. 17.

The amount collected tops the previous plant record of 84 pints set in August of this year. The four drives held at Big Rock Point this year netted a total of 305 pints of blood.

Senior engineer George Petitjean organizes the blood drives at the plant. He attributes the record donation to the increased number of contractors on site for the plant restoration project and the continued support of long-time Big Rock Point employees.

Cribbage tournament each Thursday

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 8 the Oddfellows and Masons will kick off their cribbage tournament that will run every Thursday evening at the Masonic Lodge through March 26, 1998. The Masonic Lodge is located on the corner of Mason and Bridge streets. This year will be the 68th year of the tournament which started in 1931.

The tournament is open to the public, regardless of gender, and they will teach anyone interested in learning the game.

One player from each side teams up for all eight games each night of play, and writes down their score after each game, then totals up their score for the evening's play to get the point difference, which is added to the team sheets to determine the evening's team winner. The team totals are adjusted each week to determine the season's winner after 10 weeks of play.

The losing team then prepares the dinner on the final night. Everyone then sits down to enjoy the dinner and evening program (with more cribbage afterward).

Rod and Gun Club meet rescheduled

The Charlevoix Rod & Gun Club's monthly meeting Jan. 1, has been canceled. The meeting is rescheduled for Jan. 8, with dinner at 6 p.m.

SEE-North hosting 'Twelfth Night'

It's difficult to imagine now, but in just a few weeks the hustle and bustle of the holidays will be a thing of the past. What better way to celebrate the peace and natural wonder of the season than to spend an evening walking a candle-lit trail in the woods, conversing with the forest animals, and learning more about how they live?

Say what? Talking animals? Legend has it that shortly after the holidays, animals are given the gift of speech. If you are in the right place at the right time, the animals tell you their stories.

SEE-North, a regional center for environmental education, has planned two Twelfth Night celebrations in northern Michigan. Forest animals will gather at Camp Daggett near Petoskey from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 3. A second event will be held from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 11, at Nubs Nob in Harbor Springs.

"Twelfth Night has become a wonderful tradition for many people in our area," said Mary Whitmore, SEE-North's director. "The two sites allow us to make this opportunity available to more people while maintaining the special atmosphere of Twelfth Nights past."

Everyone should be dressed to spend about an hour outdoors walking the trail and listening to the animals. Those with young children may want to bring a sled to pull along the trail. Refreshments, mask-making and face-painting will be available indoors.

The cost for the event is $4 per person. Due to the popularity of the event, advance registration is required. To register and reserve a time slot, call SEE-North at 348-9700.

Severe weather poster contest

To draw attention to the need for being prepared in the event of severe weather, the Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness is sponsoring a Severe Weather Awareness Poster Contest, open to all students currently enrolled in fourth or fifth grades. The deadline to enter is Feb. 1, 1998.

Posters must emphasize the importance of being prepared in the event of Michigan severe weather, such as tornadoes, floods, snow storms, severe cold, lightning and thunderstorms.

The first place winner will receive a $200 U.S. Savings Bond; second place will be awarded a $100 U.S. Savings Bond; third place will receive a $75 U.S. Savings Bond; and honorable mention will be awarded a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Posters must be approximately 15" by 20" and submitted on quality poster or illustration board. The work must be original and may be in any media with the exception of pencil, chalk, charcoal or glitter. All posters will become the property of the sponsoring organization. The artist's name, age, grade, home address and telephone number, along with the name, address and telephone number of the student's school and art instructor (if any), must be on the back of the poster.

Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight on Feb. 1, 1998. To enter, send posters wrapped flat to National Weather Service, 9200 White Lake Road, White lake, MI 48386. For more information, call Lori White at the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (517) 482-1643.

Friendship candle lights years of love

By Laurie Lounsbury

A tall, irregularly-shaped mountain of a candle burns steadily in the home of Alene Anderson. It sits on an antique marble-topped table, where it has sat for more than half-a-century.

The candle is a friendship candle, given to Alene and her late husband, Paul, in 1945.

"It was just a six inch candle when we got it," Alene said. "Now it weighs over 35 pounds."

When Alene lights the candle, it brings back memories of her husband, who died last July, and all the birthdays, weddings and funerals they attended together during their long marriage.

The candle was a present from Mr. and Mrs. Will Hampton of Charlevoix, who once owned the Charlevoix Courier.

"They told us, 'We gave you this candle for Christmas so you could start a friendship candle. I'd never heard of such a thing," Alene said.

The Andersons quickly grasped the concept of a friendship candle.

At every memorable occasion in their lives, the couple acquired a candle, then melted it down and dripped the melted wax onto the original candle.

"My husband melted birthday candles and wedding candles, then he used a ladle to pour it on the big candle," Alene said.

They ran into a snag when they discovered some candle wax slipped right off the old, hardened wax.

A solution came from an altar boy at the Catholic Church in Brighton, where the Andersons were living. He brought them beexwax candles to melt and add to the candle.

"The beeswax candles are sticky, so the other candles would stick to it," Alene said.

Living up to its name, the friendship candle brought new friends into the Andersons' lives through curious ways.

Many years ago, Paul told Alene to leave the candle burning when she was ready to turn in for the evening. He promised to douse it later.

"I shouldn't have left it for him to do, I'm the one who likes to stay up late," Alene said.

Paul forgot to put out the flame, so the candle burned all night, dripping wax onto the table and carpet.

The Anderson's insurance company recommended they hire Service Master to repair the waxy carpet. The woman who came to fix the carpet shared a mutual acquaintance. It was Charlevoix's Bern Cannan, who worked for Service Master at the time.

"Bern is still one of my dear friends," Alene said.

The friendship candle has gone through changes and facelifts over the years. Twenty years ago, the candle was growing unwieldy, so Alene melted it down and re-shaped it in a half-gallon milk carton.

"I took lessons in candle-making," Alene said.

The invention of dripless candles has made it more challenging to keep the friendship candle growing. Alene invites neighborhood children over to drip candles onto the big candle.

"But I always tell them, don't play around with it, because wax can explode," Alene said.

As Alene looks around her snug home, she acknowledges the fact that someday she'll be gone and her children will inherit her belongings.

"I know they'll probably sell a lot of this, but I've told them, whatever you do, don't sell this candle."

Fifty-two years have passed and the Anderson's six inch candle is now 35 pounds and rekindles memories of family, friends, and special moments as it burns.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Rev. Bruce Hamilton

When I was over in Gaylord recording programming for Christmas Eve over WPHN, the station manager there introduced me to his newest staff member. In the conversation that followed, he asked that I specifically share some of my testimony with him. What do you want to know? He asked about my heart attack, some of the adventures that our family had been through, and our pastoral pilgrimage. When I got through, he made a comment that I had never heard before.

He said, "You smell like smoke." I was kind of thrown for a loop by that. I mean I was raised under the line of thinking "don't smoke, drink, nor chew and don't go with girls that do." I was sniffing the air and all kinds of things. Then he explained what he meant. He told how he had sat under pastors over the years that really didn't seem to know what life was all about. O they talked good lines and knew their Bible well but you could tell by their words that they had never really experienced the trials, the heartaches, the gut wrenching battles that life can throw at you. He said it again, "You smell like smoke. You've been on the firing line."

I never thought of it quite that way before. But listening to him, it made sense. We all know the difference between folks who are just spouting off a lot of hot air and those who have paid their dues. Most of us will tune in sharply on those whose faith experience augments their words for that very reason. We know they have tried it out and we know that it has worked for them.

After the birth of their son, Mary and Joseph took their child to the temple for his dedication. They met a man who clearly "smelled of smoke" there. Simeon had been a spiritual conscience for many faithful souls over the years and because of his obedience, God had promised that he would live to see the birth of his Messiah. That in itself is something that should not be lost on any child of God. Obedience to the Lord yields blessings of all kinds, answers to prayer, unexpected opportunities that you will always be grateful for.

It warms my soul to read the praise Simeon utters for God's faithfulness as well as the blessing of the young Christ child. Mary and Joseph were in reverent awe that a stranger would take their child in his arms and say such things about him without even knowing who they were or what they had been through. If you smell the proverbial smoke, it should not surprise you. You should know how faithful God has been to you. You should know from your own experience how much He has seen you through.

The promise in every child of God is knowing that the Lord will equip you to successfully meet whatever challenges life brings your way. Experience should have taught us by now that when we trust and obey, God more than goes out of His way to guide our steps and comfort our hearts through even the darkest moments we might imagine.

Dave Norton

Former veterinarian now inspects homes

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix veterinarian Dave Norton used to help people by diagnosing problems with their pets.

He's still helping people by diagnosing problems. But now his patients are houses, not household pets.

"I'm giving physical exams to homes instead of animals," Norton said.

Making a mid-life career leap into a new field, Norton has given up his veterinary practice to become a home inspector.

"At this stage of my life, I had to decide — do I make a change or sit back and comfortably ride it out," said the 50-year-old Norton.

"It's not that I got fed up with veterinary medicine — I love that, but I've always had an interest in building."

Norton was at a crossroads with his veterinary practice. It was growing too big for him to handle alone, so he had to decide whether to bring in a partner or sell the business. In his 27 years of veterinary practice, he never was able to take more than a week of vacation every year. And the practice continued to get busier and more demanding.

After meeting a master of home inspection, Yves Champt, Norton's decision became easy.

"I've always had this other interest," Norton said. "As a child, I helped my dad build his house, and I designed my animal hospital. It's always been on the back burner."

Norton recently turned up the heat on his simmering interest in building by getting a builder's license and becoming a home inspector. He also spent five months undergoing extensive training with Champt, who has inspected over 5,000 homes and serves as an arbitrator in construction disputes.

It's a valuable service and it makes me feel good," Norton said. "It's exhilarating to get up every day and do something new. It's like being reborn."

For the most part, Norton works for customers who are about to buy a home. He gives them an evaluation of the home's condition, giving them an idea of what work may need to be done on the home.

"I'm educating people about this huge investment they're going to make," Norton said. "I'll put things in perspective, and will be honest and up front. That's what I did as a vet and it served me well in the long run."

While it's usually a buyer who hires a home inspector, sellers can also benefit from the service.

"I can make recommendations that would make a house more showable," Norton said.

In addition to that, Norton can give a seller a realistic idea of what their home is worth, and help them prepare a disclosure statement, which is now required by law when selling a home.

Norton will be working out of his new office in Petoskey, covering five counties in northern Michigan. He'll do inspections seven days a week. For more information, call Norton at 1-800-347-5520.

Mt. McSauba enters 1998 with bigger lodge

By Jamie MacMillan

The day after Christmas 1997, Bo Boss had his thoughts on the Christmas season of 1983.

For Boss, who oversees the operation of Mt. McSauba the city of Charlevoix's ski hill, that year was the last time the hill wasn't open during the holiday season.

"I think something like ten ski areas across the state went into bankruptcy," he recalled. "We didn't even open until the third week of January."

Now that 1997 has joined 1983 in that dubious distinction (as of last weekend, the slope was closed with as many patches of dirt as snow), Boss hopes to be open by Monday, Jan. 5, if not sooner, in time for the start of scheduled ski lessons. Boss did say that all the preseason preparations have been finished so they could open anytime once conditions cooperate.

"Sooner or later we'll be dumped on and we'll be ready to go," he said.

Mt. McSauba does have four snow making machines, but Boss said temperatures need to be around 25 degrees for it to be effective. In recent weeks, Boss said, the machines have been run just three times.

"From 25 degrees down to 20 is a world of difference in terms of snow making," Boss said. "Give me 24 hours of zero degrees and we can open tomorrow."

Despite the lack of snow, a high amount of enthusiasm bubbles around Mt. McSauba in anticipation of showing off its newly renovated ski lodge. Completed in the Fall, the renovation doubled the lodge's size to 1,800 square feet.

"For the last few years we've been really hurting for space," Boss noted. "This has been in our minds for the last seven or eight years, but we didn't get serious about it until last year."

The lodge has grown upwards with the highlight of the addition being an upstairs lounge for parents to relax and socialize while keeping an eye on their children as they play on the slope. A balcony overlooks the hill for outside viewing.

The downstairs has been reorganized with the ski rental area now being in a separate room from the main lobby. To accommodate the changes, the tow rope taking skiers up the hill begins a bit more up the hill than in the past.

Boss said the building is more heat efficient noting that it takes just five minutes to heat to comfortable room temperature where in the past he would come in seven hours before the hill opens to warm up the lodge.

Pending City Council approval, the 41st annual Winter Snow Challenge will convene Saturday, February 14 and Sunday, February 15.

Boss mentioned that a few things will change for this year's event. He said the skiing events will all be run on Saturday, while all the snowmobile and truck races will be Sunday in order to maximize crowds. Also, in response to the Venetian tragedy, no fireworks will be shot.

"We never had any incidents, but out of respect with what happened in the summer we're just not interested."

Once conditions allow, McSauba will be open Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sundays 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Thus far, it has not been the season for snowmobilers as most of the 65 miles of trails in Charlevoix County still don't have enough snow to ride on. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Sheriff needs machine for patrol

to purchase a snowmobile have been denied while requests to the County Board of Commissioners for a snowmobile have fallen on deaf ears. It is the opinion of the board that the Department of Natural Resources patrol trails, not county sheriff departments.

Corralling rogue snowmobilers breaking any traffic laws are just as challenging. Lasater painted a scenario where an officer spies a violator only to see him dive into the forest and away from law enforcement. To make matters tougher, proposed state legislation to require visible registration numbers placed on sleds was stalled and voted down earlier this month.

"I don't know what they were thinking there," Lasater said. Lasater backs registration numbers on sleds, but also would like to see something on the books similar to laws in Minnesota requiring sleds to have those numbers branded into the sleds' treads leaving an imprint in the snow.

According to Lasater, snowmobile traffic is heaviest in Hudson and Chandler townships on the county's southeastern border. With all the abandoned logging trails he called it a beautiful and open area for snowmobiling. Despite the greater activity throughout the county, Lasater said plenty of elbow room remains for both the advanced rider and beginners taking a site-seeing tour.

"We're not maxed out yet," he said. "There is plenty of room for the responsible snowmobiler to have a good time."

Four arrested in roadside incident

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has arrested four subjects for various charges following the investigation of a roadside disturbance on Dec. 21, 1997.

Sgt. Don Sproul was on patrol on US-31 in Norwood Township and observed a parked van near Whitmere Road. Two subjects outside of the van were kicking, punching and jumping on a third subject lying on the ground. These two subjects, both females, were arrested. The victim, a male, was transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix Ambulance. Another female in the van was also arrested.

A 41-year-old Charlevoix woman was arrested for A&B, disorderly and transport of open alcohol. The other female, a 20-year-old Traverse City woman, was arrested for A&B, disorderly, MIP-3rd offense and on an outstanding bench warrant.

The male victim was arrested after his release from the hospital on three outstanding warrants from other counties.

During the investigation two of the subjects gave false identification to the deputy.

Seized at the scene were a quantity of open liquor and cocaine paraphernalia.

Federal grant funds 2nd East Jordan deputy

A grant from the U.S. Department of Justice will allow Charlevoix County to hire a second deputy to staff its East Jordan substation.

The county will receive $75,000 to hire the officer through Community Oriented Policing Services, a grant program commonly known as COPS.

A grant through the COPS Universal Hiring Program can pay up to 75 percent of the total salary and benefits of each newly-hired police officer over three years, up to a maximum of $75,000.

Sheriff George Lasater said the new deputy will be assigned to the substation with another deputy hired under the COPS program.

In addition to providing more coverage in the southern part of the county, Lasater said the two officers have provided the manpower for the department to support a Neighborhood Watch program and the elementary school drug and alcohol awareness program known as D.A.R.E. "In Charlevoix County and across the district, these grants permit more patrols, better allocation of personnel, and enhancement of programs like D.A.R.E., Neighborhood Watch, school liaison and community relations," Stupak said. "The bottom line for communities is more effective community police and the prevention of crime."

An old-fashioned holiday in days gone by

By Susan Boal
Special to the Courier

It was 1950 and seasonal adult parties in Chicago were burgeoning like flowers that bloom in the spring, -tra-la. We felt obliged to attend, or our hosts would have hurt feelings, we thought. The parties were resented by the children — "You're not going out again?" they would say.

The Christmas present department, astonishingly large and growing each year, due to the increasing size of the families on both sides, and getting the house decorated for Christmas so that it looked like the December cover of House & Garden, both required thoughtful attention and concentrated activity. And finally, the central fact of Christmas itself needed to be observed at church services.

I found that I was near tears of frustration and fatigue, by the time I went to bed on Christmas Eve. "Silent Night, Holy Night" and "'Tis the Season to be Jolly" seemed a distant, unattainable dream. Then, one day, my husband, Stewie, said, "Let's go to Charlevoix for Christmas this year." He used to go with his family for winter visits when he was a boy, and recalled them with nostalgic joy.

His father bought Charlevoix property in 1914, where they spent the summer months.

Also we had recently enjoyed and laughed over some antique family movies unearthed in our attic, picturing the hilarious fun and games in the snow, of the generation preceding us. The kids were ecstatic at the thought of going, and the more we thought about it, the more excited we became about the idea.

We invited another family with children the ages of ours to go with us, and they delightedly accepted. Then began careful and complicated planning. (What presents to take? What food? How to keep warm in our summer cottage? How to travel? Don't forget decorations for the tree. How about a Christmas table cloth? Don't forget extra blankets. Lets take our skis. Frankie Klooster can cook the turkeys and pies for us at the farm, etc., etc.)

At last the magic moment arrived, and we were off early in the morning by auto, taking the Milwaukee-Ludington car ferry to shorten the driving, and arriving at the farmhouse that evening with a full moon shining in a star lit sky, on snow spread out like fluffy cotton over all the familiar and loved landscape.

We were warmly welcomed by Frankie and Ralph Klooster. Since our cottage is off the main road by about one-half mile, the unplowed road winding downhill and through pine trees, it was impossible to drive by car through the deep snow to the door. Therefore, by prearrangement, Ralph had hitched to the ample farm sled the team of horses, Maggie and Dan, who stood there patiently in the moonlight, looking like a Currier and Ives print. Transfer of mountains of gear was accomplished, so we all climbed aboard the sled and off we went on an unforgettable ride through the trees.

"The moon on the breast of the new fallen snow, gives a luster of midday to objects below," I thought, happily. Besides ourselves behind the trotting horses, their harnesses sounding for all the world like Jingle Bells, the objects below were dark green pines, their branches thickly laden with snow, and sparkling in the moonlight. Except for the sound of the horses and the children laughing and shouting as they jumped off and on the sled, the benevolent silence of the woods enveloped us, extending outward from our island of sound and motion like a comforting sea, and we rejoiced in the beauty and the peace.

Of course pandemonium broke loose when we arrived at the cottage, and it was quite a tour de force getting everything unloaded, into the house, and then bedding down seven excited youngsters. However, it was achieved in time, and eventually a serene quiet settled over Stewart's folly.

Next day was Christmas Eve, and the first order of business was to pick out a tree. We bundled up and tramped through the beautiful woods in our quest, at last settling on the tree. It was forthwith chopped down, shaken clear of snow and transported to the living room, to the measured rhythm of "O Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum." There it was proudly installed and joyfully decorated by the young (such pleasure we had from it!). In the evening we hung stockings, sang Christmas carols, recited the Night Before Christmas and were tucked snugly in bed at a blissfully early hour.

Christmas day followed a traditional pattern of stockings, presents, Christmas dinner and its attendant preparation and clean-up, and outdoor fun and games, producing rosy cheeks and happy faces. The next several days were spent at Boyne Mountain, the newly opened ski resort, about 45 minutes away. Each morning, Ralph arrived with the horses and sled, taking us to our cars at the farm, and each evening, upon our arrival back at the farmhouse, home to Stewart's folly we would go behind the horses — think of it — two sleigh rides a day!

Thus began a new kind of Christmas for us, establishing a format that we followed, with variations, for many years, eagerly anticipating the trip, as soon as the first snowflake fell. We had different families with us different years — but always the kind of people who love the outdoors, the woods, and "roughing it." As you can imagine, it wasn't exactly like staying at the Ritz. In addition, we had the fun and satisfaction of watching the children year by year turn into competent skiers, a sport which is difficult to master as an adult, I am here to testify.

I feel very fortunate to have had the experience of taking our children to the same place every summer, with frequent winter sojourns. I wouldn't exchange my years at Charlevoix for all the tea in China, nor for all the coffee in Brazil. Our children are the third generation to become enamored with this particular piece of God's green earth, and it looks to me as though the love affair may continue for generations. I was taught in school that you can't inherit acquired characteristics, but who knows for sure? Maybe its in the genes!
